War Planes Scout Snipers' Hideouts

By the Associated Press.

Jerusalem, May 26.—British women and children were evacuated tonight from the troubled Holy Land town of Nablus in an atmosphere made increasingly tense by Arab terrorism.

They were given refuge in the capital as a precautionary measure.

The situation at Nablus, where rioting was reported rife and Arabs were firing continually from nearby hillsides, was unchanged.

Roads in the vicinity were said to have been mined.

(The Jewish Telegraph Agency said war planes were flying over the hills near Nablus and other trouble centers, seeking Arab hideouts, as brigands fled into the hills with their wounded. Nablus and Gaza were described as under full military control, with tanks and machine guns in evidence.)

Police Reported Killed.

(The agency said some Arab policemen had refused to fire on rioters, and that a British officer had killed three such recalcitrants.)

Meanwhile, the British press in London reiterated charges that Italian anti-British agitators were responsible for the outbreaks. Representations have been made to Rome by the British government.

Rifles barked again across the biblical Jezreel (Esdraelon) Valley, scene of battles modern and ancient, in a brisk skirmish between British-officered troops and Arab snipers.

The incident, from which no casualties were reported, served further to tighten the tension of the Holy Land, disturbed for more than a month by constant Arab-Jewish friction.

Bold attacks from ambush by armed Arab strikers fast were assuming the character of a rebellion in many parts of Palestine.

Rumor of Martial Law.

The British administration, despite the sternest of repressive measures, had failed to quell the six-week-old campaign of violence and terrorism, and there were rumors in Jewish circles of possible martial law.

Backed by four battalions of British troops, High Commissioner Sir Arthur Grenfell Wauchope was determined to yield not an inch in his policy of upholding Jewish immigration in the face of Arab rioting against it.

A forced curfew had been extended tonight from Jerusalem to Gaza, Nablus, Tulkarem, Safad, and the entire Palestine railway system.

The situation at Gaza, where the radio was the only communication with the outside, continued tense, and the British families held to their refuge in the police barracks.

Sabotage Continues.

At Jaffa, Tulkarem, Nazareth and Safad, bombs exploded all last night. This morning the police went into action against snipers at Jaffa, but no casualties were reported.

Arson, destruction of crops and citrus groves in Jewish districts and cutting of telephone wires continued over the country.

In the neighborhood of Tel-Aviv a pitched battle raged well into the night. Snipers, concealed in orange groves, fired on and bombed police, who sent beack heavy fusilades.

A bomb made from a bottle exploded outside the British Nazareth Bank, and all telephone wires con-

Hewitt, Member of Lafayette Escadrille, Dies in Washington Rooming House; To Be Buried in Arlington, Commander Lewis Says.

The wasted figure that was Thomas Hewitt, jr., will not be buried in Potter's Field here, after all. Whatever may have been Hewitt's derelictions in the last few years—overindulgence in liquor was one—there was a time, 20 years or so ago, when a spirit of nobility moved the man.

Commander Edward McE. Lewis, of the National Press Club Post of the American Legion, who knew Hewitt, recalled last night that he served with the Lafayette Escadrille, that group of Americans who formed a Franco-American flying squadron before the United States entered the World War.

Later on, Commander Lewis said, Hewitt joined the American Army air service and was wounded.

Hewitt died Sunday of a heart attack in a rooming house at 517 H street northwest. His body was taken to the District Morgue. It remained unclaimed last night, and under the law would be dumped without ceremony in a numbered grave at Blue Plains in another three days.

Commander Lewis, informed of the case, went to the morgue last night, identified the body and then told The Post:

"This man will not be buried in Potter's Field. He will be buried in Arlington Cemetery where he deserves to be buried. He will be accompanied to the grave by a guard or honor, a firing squad and a bugler to sound 'taps.'"

Hewitt, who was 42, was a member of a respected family in New York. He came here in the post-war days, worked for a time in business offices, and then apparently "lost his grip." He was arrested several times for intoxication and once for passing bad checks.

Hewitt's reputation as an Army flier was well known among local police and hospital authorities. Lyle E. Gould, who identified the body, told morgue officials all he knew about Hewitt. One of these officials admitted last night, however, that no attempt had been made to check his record with the War Department.

Thus Hewitt's body appeared destined for burial amid the paupers in Blue Plains. Now it will lie on a friendly slope in Arlington, where poverty means nothing and money couldn't buy a grave. And on Memorial Day his erstwhile comrades-in-arms will place a flag and a poppy on his grave.

Hewitt was married, but became separated from his wife several years ago. They had one son.

New Sea Queen Leaves Britain For U. S. Today

500,000 Expected to Cheer Queen Mary's Sailing; Record Sought.

By the Associated Press.

Southampton, England, May 26.—Jubiliant British poured into Southampton by the tens of thousands tonight to cheer a sea queen's send-off.

They came to watch with pride and awe the greatest event in modern British shipbuilding—the departure tomorrow afternoon on her maiden voyage to New York of the 80,773-ton liner Queen Mary.

Perhaps more than 500,000 of them will jam the docks and the decks of excursion steamers to wave and cheer the vast liner on her way to what may be the Atlantic's speed record.

May Prove Fastest.

It promises to be the most exciting ship departure that Britain has experienced. Every detail, from the embarkation of passengers to engine room sounds, is to be broadcast to the empire and the world.

Unable to claim the Queen Mary as the largest ship in the world, the British cling steadfast to the hope she will prove the fastest.

To better the time of the French liner Normandie she must attain an average cruising speed of more than 30.35 knots an hour, the record set up by the French vessel on a return voyage to New York.

On trial runs so far, the Queen Mary has steamed 32.84 knots, faster than any liner ever has gone before, but only a fraction above the top speed of 32.3 knots achieved by the Normandie.

Public Is Excluded.

Tonight the Queen Mary, brilliantly lighted, resplendent in her color scheme of black, white and red, rested easily at her dock, a mountain of a ship which will carry 2,650 passengers to New York in four days with the utmost in British ideas of comfort and luxury.

The public was excluded from nearby docks today while the great ship, like a thoroughbred at Epsom Downs, underwent a final grooming, and while workmen and seamen scurried about, loading thousands of tons of cargo and stores.

Mrs. Buxton Held Insane by Jurors

Chestertown, Md., May 26 (AP).—Mrs. Thelma Buxton, 28-year-old wife of a Washington College professor, was acquitted on grounds of insanity tonight by a jury trying her for the hatchet slaying of her mother-in-law, Mrs. Effie Buxton, last September.

After deliberating more than seven hours the jury announced:

"We find the defendant was insane at the time of the commission of the act, and is insane now, and not guilty by reason of insanity."

The verdict means Mrs. Buxton, whose husband is head of the chemistry department at Washington College, will be sent to an asylum.

House Member Urges Inquiry Of Black Legion

Investigation to Determine Possible European Link Asked by Dickstein.

Representative Samuel Dickstein (Democrat), of New York, last night urged a Congressional investigation of the "un-American" Black Legion to "ascertain its real purpose and whether it has any international connections."

Dickstein said the Black Legion, whose terroristic activities were revealed in Michigan, and similar organizations should be "thoroughly investigated in order that the American people may know whether or not they are in fact the American ends of European subversive organizations."

The New York Representative is chairman of the House Immigration Committee and was vice chairman of a special committee which conducted a short investigation into "un-American" activities last year. He said that inquiry was not complete because of limited funds.

He added it would be "interesting to ascertain" if there was any connection between the Black Legion and a group known as the "Black Shirts" which came to the attention of the investigators last year as operating in Colorado.

Five More Arrested.

Detroit, May 26 (AP).—Every unsolved crime of violence in southern Michigan during the last few years was under renewed investigation tonight as State and county authorities pressed their war to uproot the Black Legion, hooded vigilante society whose members have been named in murder, kidnaping and flogging warrants.

A promise by Attorney General David H. Crowley to call grand juries in each county in which such crimes could be traced to the black-cloaked night riders spurred the investigations of violence and terrorism in at least five southern Michigan counties. Fires of incendiary and undetermined origin also were under investigation.

While these activities were being pushed, another batch of warrants was sworn out at Jackson, Mich., against reputed members of the secret terrorist organization. They numbered 25 and charged kidnaping and assault. They were followed immediately by the arrest of five men accused of being ringleaders of a mob of night riders who stripped and flogged Harley Smith, of Norvell, Mich., whom county officers said was a member of the order seeking to withdraw.

Guard Among Suspects.

The men arrested at Jackson were Ray Ernest, a guard at the State penitentiary, and described by county officers as a "brigadier general" in the Black Legion; Allen Basom, of Norvell; Clarence and Glenn Ernest, brothers of Ray, and Dite Hawley, another prison guard. Ray Ernest has been accused by State police as the leader of a mob that flogged Paul Every, another

State's Tradition of Tolerance Delays Action on Flag Salute

The spirit of Lord Calvert, who established Maryland as a sanctuary of religious tolerance, entered a meeting of the Prince Georges County School Board yesterday and delayed action on the case of the Oxon Hill pupils who refused to salute Old Glory.

After a conference of three hours, members of the school board found themselves stalemated between the free State's tradition of religious tolerance and a heretofore uninterpreted school law on patriotic observance.

Neither was the school board able to say that the State law, which made the morning flag exercises compulsory, provided penalties.

So the following statement was made to members of the press:

"After a conference with representatives of the Marlboro American Legion Post, and in the absence of Mrs. J. Enos Ray, vice president of the board, it was decided to defer final action."

Commander Paul Smith headed the legion delegation which presented the board with a copy of a resolution asking that the four children of Augustus A. Luke, of Oxon Hill, be forced to salute the flag.

The legionnaires said they felt that acknowledgement of the national emblem in no way interfered with the "religious tolerance" tradition which was written into the history of the State by Lord Calvert.

Waldo Burnside, attorney for the board, listened to the discussion, but unable to offer definite advice, asked for a written statement of the case.

Senate Group Votes Relief; Veils Details

Hopkins Attacks Curtis, Denies His Charges of WPA Politics.

By Felix Bruner.

The deficiency appropriation bill, which includes $1,425,000,000 for relief, cleared another hurdle yesterday when it was approved by a Senate Appropriations sub-committee. The measure will go to the full committee today and, barring a prolonged dispute, will be reported this afternoon. The Senate is expected to begin consideration of the measure tomorrow.

Details of the bill were carefully guarded by members of the committee, who agreed not to discuss them until the measure is reported. It is understood, however, that the bill carries the full $1,425,000,000 appropriation. It is believed the committee also will ask for use of a PWA revolving fund of about $400,000,000 for loans for construction projects.

Committee members refused to reveal whether the bill provides that the entire appropriation shall go to Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress administrator, or whether the money shall be turned over to President Roosevelt. Unusual secrecy surrounding the procedure was explained by the fact that committee members were attempting to avoid pressure by the heads of relief agencies which have been scrambling for part of the appropriation.

Hopkins Answers Curtis.

Meanwhile, Hopkins, in fighting language, answered charges of Arthur M. Curtis, assistant to the chairman of the Republican National Committee, and Republican committeeman from Missouri, of politics in the administration of relief in Missouri. Curtis had given Hopkins specific instances, which he said were supported by affidavits, of politics in relief.

Hopkins replied that the charges were "in each and every instance untrue." He charged further that Curtis had "deliberately misstated the facts." Curtis said he had not yet received the Hopkins reply and would not comment until he had read it.

"If the charges made in your letter to me of May 21, 1936, which you say 'trickle in' to you from your political friends, represent the basis of your political attack on me, you are traveling on pretty thin ice," Hopkins wrote.

"Apart from your political billingsgate, which occupies most of your letter, the specific charges you make are in each and every instance untrue, and I am sure from reading your note that you made no effort to check up on the truth of the charges you make, which must indicate that they were made solely for political purposes.

Political Mud-Slinging.

"I note that your letter comes to me via the Republican National Committee and mailed from Washington, which fact lends further color to the conviction this document represents political mud-slinging, so that the question of whether or not the alleged facts were true obviously concerns you very little."

Hopkins then took up, one by one, the charges made by Curtis and denied each of them.

Curtis charged a woman had been discharged from relief rolls because of politics. Hopkins answered that she was physically unable to work and that her husband had a full-time job.

In another instance Curtis charged a woman had been dismissed and was told she would have to see a Democratic township committeeman to be reinstated. Hopkins said she was not in need of relief and no one had been sent to a committeeman for reinstatement.

In a third instance Curtis said workers who rode to a voting place in Sedalia in automobiles supplied by Republicans had been discharged. "These charges are untrue," said Hopkins. He said two relief workers had been discharged for distributing Republican literature during working hours but were later taken back.

Question of Need.

Answering a charge that women were dismissed from a sewing project because of politics, Hopkins said these women and 33 others were dismissed because "the only consideration was a question of need."

A man Curtis said was discharged

34 Rebels Killed By Mexican Troops

Mexico City, May 26 (AP).—Thirty-four rebels, including the insurgent leader, Camilo Ramirez Argot (the Rabbit), were killed by government troops today in two battles, the war department reported tonight. One federal soldier was wounded.

Gen. Ernesto Aguirre Colorado, chief of the Guanajuato military zone, reported his troops clashed with the forces of Argot during four hours of fighting.

The rebels were scattered, leaving 22 dead behind, among them their chief. Civilians decapitated Argot's body and carried his head around the vicinity.

Another battalion repulsed rebel forces led by Francisco Vazques in a three-hour battle. Twelve insurgents were killed.

Spelling Champion

Harris & Ewing.

Spelling Queen Buries Judges In Dictionaries

In a "dictionary finish" which three times had the judges' noses buried in a lexicon, Jean Trowbridge, pretty 13-year-old Iowa girl, yesterday won the twelfth annual national spelling bee.

Three times Jean was thought to have failed, but each time the judges went to the dictionary and came back with the news that her spelling was acceptable.

The first occasion was early in the contest when she spelled "C-H-A-R-E-W-O-M-A-N" for charwoman. This sent the judges to their books, but they came back in ten minutes after locating the "e" in a recognized dictionary.

Again Is Vindicated.

Then Jean spelled "millenium" with a double "n," and again was vindicated after a consultation by the judges.

But the drama came when Bruce Ackerman, 14, of Morton, Ill., thought he had won when Jean spelled "numbskul," without the "b." Just the pair remained in the contest.

Bruce put in the "b" and went on to spell "gnome." Just as he was accepting congratulations the judges came up with the announcement that they would take numbskull with or without the "b."

So it was a race again, neck and neck for a while, but then the boy put an "e" instead of an "i" in "predilection." Jean did it right and clinched her victory and the $500 first prize with "eczema."

Third place winner in the field of 17 was freckled little Catherine Davis, 13, of Jeffersonville, Ind. Miss Davis lost her chances for victory when she mixed the "i" and "e" in "shrieking." She was awarded a $100 prize, while Ackerman got $300 for second place.

The annual contest, in which 200,000 school children took part this year, is sponsored by the Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal and other newspapers in ten States. Miss Trowbridge was sent here by the Des Moines (Iowa) Register after winning the State contest.

Young Askerman, after being downed at the last moment, manfully withstood the blow.

"Well, I won it, then I didn't," he said, smiling through his tears.

Going to Buy Bicycle.

Jean is going to buy a bicycle with part of the $500 she received as first prize. The rest of the money she's going to save to help pay for her college education.

Asked how she prepared for the contest, Jean said:

"I read the dictionary."

Her teacher, Priscilla McPherson, said Jean had been studying the dictionary since the first of the school year. Jean studied for two hours a day, covering 20 to 40 pages. Then she would have Miss McPherson pronounce the words for her.

Miss McPherson, who is accompanying Jean, said that when they stopped in New York before coming here her charge was too worried about the dictionary to do any sightseeing.

"I've got to study," Jean said. "I've only got to the 'it's.'"

Jean thinks there will be a band to meet her when she gets back to Stuart, Iowa.

"They had one to send me off," she said.

But she's going to discard Webster.

Blaze Overcomes 2 Firemen in Hotel

Two firemen were overcome by smoke last night when fire broke out in the theater of the Wardman Park Hotel, gnawing through timbers beneath the concrete floor for almost two hours. A third fireman suffered severe cuts of his right hand.

S. W. Rittenour, a sergeant, of 3114 W street southeast, and Albert Rader, a private attached to Engine Co. 28, who lives at 1617 Corcoran street northeast, were the men overcome. James Kayser, a private, of 528 Minnesota avenue northwest, was cut.

The stubborn blaze was discovered by J. P. Battle, elevator operator. When first attempts to extinguish it failed, firemen were called, and six engine crews and three ladder crews, under Battalion Chief J. B. Simms, responded.

Guests in the lobby exhibited more curiosity than fear, and bellboys quickly shut the doors leading to the smoke-laden area.

House Passes City's Budget On to Senate

Less Than Half Members Present as Blanton Outsmarts Foes.

By James D. Secrest.

Fate of the 1937 District supply bill and the future course of Federal-District fiscal relations rested last night with a handful of Senate conferees after the House had ignored the President's demand for Budget Bureau figures and had instructed its managers to stand firm.

The already uncertain status of the District bill became even more muddled as Representative Thomas L. Blanton, chairman of the House conferees, took his foes unawares and put the next move up to the Senate.

With less than half the membership present, the House in quick succession adopted three motions, by standing votes, to instruct its conferees to insist upon the $3,000,000 cut in the Federal lump sum payment, elimination of all funds for continuation of character education and attachment of a rider barring District employes earning $2,400 a year or more from engaging in outside work for pay.

How Conferees Voted.

The votes were:
Lump sum, 142 to 39.
Character education, 109 to 46.
Salary limitation, 86 to 78.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, chaiman of the Senate conferees, declined to predict the outcome of the Senate-House battle, but called a conference for 10:30 a. m. tomorrow.

He refused to reiterate a statement made last week that the Senate would never yield on the Federal contribution, and said he had no intention of carrying the matter to the President despite the latter's intimation that he would welcome an opportunity to settle the fight. He said he didn't want "to bother" the President.

Thomas said that if the deadlock was not broken he would offer a continuing resolution, placing the District on the same financial basis as this year, minus, the capital improvements.

Another Deadlock Feared.

He admitted, however, that even that might encounter another deadlock in view of the fact that Blanton has introduced a joint resolution eliminating the entire lump sum payment and character education funds, and taxing the District for a proposed police court building site in Judiciary Square.

Blanton's motion to instruct the House conferees to stand firm on the House bill in the three most controversial items was made in conformance with the rule cited by Speaker Byrns last week as a means of breaking the deadlock.

The chairman of the House managers took advantage of the rule, whereby any member may make a motion of the highest privilege when conferees fail to report within 20 calendar days, and thereby got the drop on the few friends of the District who might have offered a motion to force the House conferees to recede.

Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House District Committee, has gone to New Jersey as a special representative of the House at the funeral of Representative Perkins, whose death Monday deprived the District of another legislative day.

Takes Most of Time.

After introducing his resolution, preceded by numerous "whereases," Blanton spoke for 55 of the 60 minutes allotted for debate, reviewing his oft-repeated story of low taxes, high salaries and the "subversive influence" of character education.

A few members of the District Committee tried vainly to stem the tide of resentment against the District among the half membership of the House present. Minority Leader Snell, friend of Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, sought to save the character education fund.

Roosevelt Orders Corporate Levies Be Studied Anew

Calls Budget Parley

SENATOR ELMER THOMAS.

Committee to Get Its Findings Today

Exception Is Taken by Conservatives to Rate Step-up.

By Robert C. Albright.

New Treasury studies of corporate revenue sources, in an effort to make up an estimated shortage of more than $500,000,000 in the Senate tax bill, were ordered last night at the White House following a conference of the President, Senate leaders and Democratic members of the Senate Finance Committee.

No conclusive action was taken, but instructions were given the Treasury to study the possibility of tapping undistributed corporate income for additional revenue, and to submit its findings at a meeting of the full Senate Finance Committee this afternoon.

It was said in one quarter that the President favored bringing the Senate bill more closely into line with the undivided profits tax philosophy of the House bill. Steeply graduated taxes ranging from 25 to 32 and 45 per cent were suggested, in addition to continuance of a flat tax on corporate income, and extension of the present capital stock and excess profits taxes.

Balk at Any Increase.

Conservative Democratic members, who flatly refused in committee to go along with any undistributed earnings tax in excess of 7 per cent, took sharp exception to any step-up in the rates, but agreed to consider any new schedules the Treasury might offer, it was said.

"I am encouraged to believe the committee will submit a report before the end of the week, and Congress still may be brought to adjournment by June 6," Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Senate minority leader, told reporters.

"No attempt was made to reach definite conclusions," Robinson insisted. "Some studies with reference to proposed sources of taxes will be made by the Treasury and supplied to the Finance Committee. I am frank to say we are seeking additional revenue to bring the yield of the tax bill to the full amount asked by the President."

$585,000,000 Shy.

The President had requested $620,000,000 annually for nine years and $517,000,000 additional to be spread over a period of about three years. The bill passed by the House was estimated to produce $803,000,000 of that amount, but the Senate bill as it shaped up yesterday is said to fall about $585,000,000 shy.

Although Robinson declined to disclose the "sources" to be explored by the Treasury, Senator William H. King, of Utah, acting chairman of the committee during the illness of Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, said it would deal with corporate taxation, and hinted strongly that undistributed corporate income, which the committee hitherto has declined to tax steeply, principally was affected.

King declined to say whether the President turned thumbs down on the Senate corporate tax schedules or insisted on taxes more closely in line with the steeply graduated House rates on undivided profits, which ranged up to a maximum surtax of 42½ per cent. Nor would he comment on the possibility of the committee reconsidering the vote by which it imposed a flat corporation income tax of 18 per cent and a 7 per cent additional levy on undistributed income.

In other quarters, however, it was said the President did not believe the Senate bill as now drafted would yield the total $1,137,000,000 he demanded originally, and favored further consideration of a higher graduation of undistributed earnings tax rates.

Subjects Discussed.

It was learned a proposal to step-up individual income tax rates and lower exemptions, which has been considered informally, was not discussed at the White House, nor did the White House conference turn on any reconsideration of $221,000,000 in processing taxes, already reject-

Coal Act Voted By House Unit After Revision

Opposition Overridden in 5-Hour Session; Price-Fixing Retained.

By the Associated Press.

Putting aside opposition, the House Ways and Means Committee voted yesterday to report favorably the substitute Guffey-Vinson coal control bill, making possible final House action this week.

Chairman Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, said the committee vote was 18 to 6. Other informed sources told newsmen both Democrats and Republicans were registered among the opponents.

The committee approved the bill after a five-hour session. Last year the same committee brought the measure to the floor of the House by the narrow margin of 13 to 11 and then only after urging by President Roosevelt.

Since that time, however, the original act was stripped of its labor provisions by the Supreme Court decision invalidating the original coal act. The new measure provides for re-enactment of the price-fixing provisions of the original act, plus all the other provisions not struck down by the court.

Special Rule Necessary.

Doughton told reporters that to obtain House consideration of the revised bill it would require a special rule but asserted he foresaw no difficulty in that direction.

Representative Boland, of Pennsylvania, Democratic whip, said he saw no reason why the measure could not be acted upon this week, explaining the only legislation in the way was the Robinson-Patman price discrimination bill on which action was scheduled to be completed today.

In approving the coal bill, the Ways and Means Committee voted down a demand for public hearings. Informed sources said the fight for hearings was led by Representative McCormack (Democrat), Massachusetts, but the move was defeated, 13 to 9.

Some members of the committee were reported to have criticized the bill's so-called "compliance tax" of 15 per cent on the sale price of coal at the mine, contending this provision was "stretching the Constitution."

Not Tax But Penalty.

Representative Knutson (Republican), of Minneapolis, a member of the committee, described some of his colleagues as "trying to hypnotize themselves into thinking the tax is not a tax, but a penalty."

Proponents of the bill, however, met the criticism against the tax by saying the Supreme Court's majority opinion held that if the regulation sought by the legislation were valid, the method of achieving it also would be constitutional.

Representative Vinson (Democrat), of Kentucky, coauthor of the new bill, said only minor changes were made by the committee, one of which was the restoration of the section of the original act conditionally outlawing contracts made prior to the effective date of the legislation.

"Zipper-Inspired" Zioncheck, Bride Wade in Radio City Pool

By the United Press.

New York, May 26.—Representative Marion Zioncheck mixed himself three Zioncheck zippers (rye, honey, cracked ice and a sprig of mint) today and the first thing he knew he had taken off his shoes and socks and was wading in the pool at Rockefeller Center.

"This is something I always did want to do," he yelled to his wife, who was wading with him.

"It sure is fun," she agreed.

The decision to venture into Rockefeller Center was made after considerable thought. Zioncheck sat on the edge of his bed in his hotel from 10 a. m. to 2 p. m., staring at a table loaded with bottles of Scotch, rye, gin and two gallon jugs of rum. Obviously, something important was afoot. The Congressman finally ended the suspense by choosing Scotch.

"Scotch and soda is my favorite drink," he said, "except that I like rye and soda better."

He was attired in a bathrobe and house slippers. By noon the Scotch in the bottle had gone down like the mercury at the North Pole. The Congressman then announced the time had arrived to treat the boys to some Zioncheck zippers. His wife said she thought it would be fine to have some zippers.

"Good old Zioncheck zippers," said Zioncheck, explaining the matter. "What will we have?"

Everybody said they would have a Zioncheck zipper.

"It really ought to be made out

Split Is Feared In Republican Chairman Fight

By the Associated Press.

The possibility of a contest over the permanent chairmanship of the Republican convention arose yesterday with the delegates being called upon to rebel against the organization candidate—Representative Snell, of New York.

Robert H. Lucas, executive director at party hadquarters here in the Hoover Administration, circularized the convention personnel for the election of former Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois.

The presiding post, due to the authority for making decisions that goes with it, is excelled by none in importance at the convention.

Snell said he had not seen the Lucas letter and so would not comment last night.

Forecasting a split party unless the rank and file "take this convention into their own hands," Lucas especially attacked Charles D. Hilles, national committeeman from New York for over a generation.

"It will not be difficult next month," he said, "to see Boss Hilles directing the procedure from his chair behind the chairman, if his selection for a permanent chairman is accepted by the delegates.

Fight For Control.

"This fight (against the New Deal) can be won, but Mr. Hilles cannot win it. Now, as always, this is a fight for control—then let the party win if it can.

"This selfish, incompetent management of the party machinery by Hilles continues not because the party wants it so, but because nobody does anything about it."

Awaiting responses, Lucas told reporters his action was taken independently and had no connection with the cause of ay potential Presidential nominee. He himself is an uninstructed delegate to Cleveland from the Third Kentucky District, Louisville.

His naming of Lowden coincided with more frequent mention of the Illinois leader in the convention preliminaries. Some of the party leaders, while not speaking about it for publication, have cited Lowden among those who might be considered for the Presidential nomination if no candidate gets within striking distance of his goal on the early ballots.

Now 75 years old, the former Governor for years has been a leader in the farming West. He was among the foremost possibilities for the Presidential nomination in 1920 and 1928.

When the McNary-Haugen "equalization fee" plan was turned down for the 1928 platform, he left Kansas City in disgust. He eventually supported the Hoover-Curtis ticket, however.

Now in Germany.

Only recently former President Hoover joined the suggestion by other Western party leaders that Lowden be asked to write the agricultural plank this year. Lowden has been taking health treatments in Germany since April, but is expected to return home soon.

The Lucas move came at a time when the organization leaders were talking harmony. Harrison E. Spangler, in charge at the Chicago headquarters, said in a statement that factionalism had weakened the Democrats in seven Midwestern States. The Republicans, he said, were more united than since 1932.

Lucas said 98 per cent of the party does not want the leadership either of the radical or the big business extreme, and asked:

"Why not elect our own permanent chairman? Why not write our own platform. Why not nominate our own candidate? Why not run our own convention? Why not?

"The difficulty is, the friends of several of the candidates are afraid to oppose the Hilles program, thinking their men will eventually get his support if they play along with him.

"Thus is supplied the excuse for Senator Borah's bolt. And again in 1936, under Mr. Hilles' leadership, as in 1912 under Mr. Hilles' leadership, the Republican Party is split in twain."

North Dakota Delegates.

Jamestown, N. Dak., May 26 (AP). North Dakota's eight delegates were listed today among the delegations that will go uninstructed to the National Republican Convention in Cleveland.

They were named at the State convention late last night at the conclusion of a bitter factional fight which saw supporters of Gov. Walter Welford emerge with all party offices and convention control. Losers in every test of strength were backers of former Gov. William Langer.

Langer and Welford have been indorsed for Governor by opposing wings of the nonpartisan league, dominant Republican faction.

In its platform the convention urged election of a "Progressive Republican President to the end that our national budget be balanced."

Spending Assailed.

The Republican National Committee in a pamphlet made public yesterday said the American people are "punch-drunk with figures because of the spending of the Roosevelt Administration."

"We have been needled with the hundreds of millions until a billion is so much breakfast food," said the committee pamphlet. "We forget that every time the large hand of the clock registers the hour, another million of our money flies out of a window in Washington."

The pamphlet, entitled "The Cost of the New Deal," said "we face a steady and alarming increase from year to year during President Roosevelt's term. There has been a mounting tide, not a tapering off."

Roosevelt's Plans.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt told newspapermen yesterday he would talk history—not politics—on his tour of Arkansas, Texas, Indiana and perhaps Kentucky next month.

The Executive related his plans for the Western jaunt, beginning June 8, shortly after returning from a three-day visit to the Hyde Park, N. Y., bedside of his mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, who suffered a hip fracture in a fall two weeks ago.

Mr. Roosevelt was asked if it were true he intended to steal the show away from the Republican National Convention by making speeches just as that conclave got under way.

The President smiled at the query, replied in the negative and explained the Western trip was planned months ago. He said he wanted it to fit in with the latest plans to do some sailing off Campobello Island, New Brunswick, where the Roosevelts maintain a summer home.

He repeated he would leave here June 8, unless something happens necessitating his presence in Washington, and would make his first speech in Little Rock June 10.

This, he said, will touch on the early history of Arkansas, since the occasion is the 100th anniversary of the State's entry into the Union.

Return June 15.

The same will hold true in his speeches at Dallas on June 12 and at Vincennes, Ind., June 12, he said. He will return here June 15.

The President said he would visit San Jacinto battlefield at Houston, Tex., and lay a wreath at the Alamo in San Antonio, June 11, and speak at Dallas the next day on Texas history. The Lone Star State will be celebrating the centennial of her independence from Mexico.

The speech in Kentucky will be at one of three or four historic spots, he said, but it has not been decided whether to visit that State on the way to Texas or on the return journey.

Senator Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, told newspapermen that Hodgenville, Ky., where the Lincoln farm and log cabin are located, was being given prime consideration as the site in that State for Mr. Roosevelt's speech.

Politics and People

By Franklyn Waltman

CHARGES of the perversion of the expenditure of WPA funds for partisan political purposes in various sections of the country have become so numerous and Administrator Harry L. Hopkins' denials are so monotonous that the whole subject has become tiresome. But some of the WPA projects continue to fascinate us.

WALTMAN

"Harrisburg, Pa. May 14.—One of the most unusual undertakings of the Works Progress Administration in the State is a project providing beauty treatments for women who are mentally ill.

"Scores of patients in the Allentown State Hospital have received facials, hair waves and manicures from WPA beauticians drafted from the ranks of the unemployed.

"And similar treatments will soon be available to women patients in the Philadelphia General Hospital and the Torrance State Hospital. Successful from the start, the project has brought words of praise from physicians who have observed its results.

"One of the supervisors of the work declared: 'Doctors have told us that the change brought about in patients by the beauty treatments has been remarkable. They've found that the women become much brighter in spirits, easier to handle and infinitely more concerned with their dress and personal appearance.'

"Aside from the benefits derived by the patients, the project also has taken from the relief rolls a number of women who, schooled and experienced as beauticians, could find no private employment.

"The work is under the direction of the women's and professional projects of the WPA, which supervises employment for women and for men schooled in professions, arts, letters and various skilled services."

The assertion that this is a "most unusual undertaking" is putting it mildly. More extraordinary is a reference further on in this press release to another WPA project. After reciting that there are 17,680 persons, mostly women, engaged in producing clothing and bedding for the poor and inmates of State institutions—a laudable project, it might be said—the release explains a WPA exhibit would be held in Philadelphia.

"There will be vaudeville acts by WPA entertainers, art galleries showing the canvases of WPA painters, sculpturing, concerts by a WPA band and a WPA orchestra and a sewing exhibit," the release explained.

And here is a WPA project which would seem the figment of someone's imagination if it were not reported in a reputable newspaper, the Nashville (Tenn.) Banner, accompanied with a photograph.

"Despite the inclement weather," reported the Banner, "three tables of contract bridge were played in the parlor of the Hotel Montgomery Tuesday night, sponsored by the WPA recreational committee . . . It is the plan of the committee to provide recreation and a wholesome manner of passing away leisure time for adults as well as children. Under the direction of the committee the vacant lot on Franklin and Fifth streets is being converted into a playground—and small park for children and adults. Croquet and badminton games will be played on it."

Such projects are defended on the ground that they provide employment for beauticians, bridge instructors, manicurists, vaudeville actors, painters, sculptors and musicians. The theory apparently is that not only are such persons entitled to a job, but the kind of a job they want.

The WPA proceeds on the theory that it is something inhumane and brutal to expect an unemployed girl, trained as a manicurist, to undertake sewing or cooking or some other kind of work which is useful and needed. Under the same theory a ham vaudeville actor who can not get a job should not be asked to limber up his muscles by raking leaves—or even doing clerical work; oh, no, he must be given work as an actor.

Of course what the WPA is doing is freezing the social strata of the unemployed. Once an actor always an actor. And of course on that theory we shall always have an army of unemployed because there are always too many actors—not good ones, however—and we always have too many persons who prefer to give instruction in bridge or croquet than do a little work—and too many persons who want to toot horns rather than get out and find jobs for which they are better qualified.

And at the same time there are so many useful projects which could be undertaken. Just as a quick illustration, here is the National Training School for Girls, where the inmates—most of them still of school age—lack warm clothing in winter and where the conditions generally are so bad that Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has termed them "medieval" and "barbarous." But it is not possible to get money to fix up that institution. Is it because the people of the Nation's Capital have no vote?

And just in passing, how is it that the New Deal, which seems to think of everything, has overlooked changing the name of Dupont Circle. Think of it! Washington's most fashionable and swanky circle being called by the name of a bunch of American Liberty Leaguers. And the Administration has a precedent for changing the name. Didn't it change the name of Hoover Dam back to Boulder Dam?

Senate to Call Official in RFC Rail Dispute

Barriger Will Be Asked to Explain Opposition to Reorganization Plan.

One or more Reconstruction Finance officials will be called before a Senate Interstate Commerce sub-committee Thursday to testify concerning their activity in the reorganization case of the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad, Chairman Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, announced yesterday.

John W. Barriger, chief RFC railroad examiner, who has been charged with frustrating the reorganization plans, will appear. Shipstead said he had not decided whether to call Chairman Jesse H. Jones or Frederick H. Prince, Boston financier, whose interests allegedly have been aided by Barriger's activity. He said both would be given opportunity to testify should they appear voluntarily.

Meanwhile, witnesses yesterday continued to assail the motives of Barriger in his opposition to the stockholders' plan for reorganizing the road and his allegiance to a plan of dividing it among five competing railroads in the Middle West.

Called Fantastic.

E. L. Oliver, appearing for the railroad brotherhoods, whose members face unemployment if the road is disbanded, said Barriger's plan is "wholly fantastic."

"It is the most muddle-headed, addle-pated, unconscionable plan I ever ran across," he declared.

He pointed out a number of discrepancies in Barriger's testimony before a Federal Trade Commission hearing in Minneapolis, and said:

"Barriger clearly was a proponent of his plan, and appeared to be so convinced of his ability as to render him incapable of an impartial appearance."

In computing returns to the road since its receivership, Oliver said Barriger had placed the valuation of the property at $50,000,000.

Senator Murphy (Democrat), of Iowa, interrupted, saying: "For one purpose, he estimated the road's worth at $50,000,000 and for another at $7,200,000. This would appear to support your conclusion that Mr. Barriger's mental state was biased."

Oliver said Barriger omitted certain important figures which, if presented, would have made the road's condition appear more favorable.

"Before Dismemberment."

Senator Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, declared sBarriger's efforts to influence the Federal Trade Commission while he remained an employe of another branch of the Government "is so important that Congress ought to stay in session and settle it."

Oliver urged Congressional action to prevent dismemberment of the road. He said it would throw hundreds of men out of work, and leave 50 communities without railroad service. He declared it to be his belief that a $4,000,000 loan from the RFC, in accordance with the plan of the stockholders, would save the road and enable it to operate at a profit.

Frank B. Townsend, director of the Minneapolis Traffic Association, the only other witness, urged that the road not be dismembered.

Chairman Shipstead adjourned the committee until Thursday morning, when rebuttal witnesses will be heard.

Charles B. Tavener Funeral Tomorrow

Funeral services for Charles Bryant Tavener, 68, retired worker in the District government will be held tomorrow at the home in Laurel, Md.

Tavener, who died last night of heart disease, worked 12 years in the sewer division. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Maud L. Tavener; a son, Donald, and three daughters, Mrs. Waldo Berstein, Mrs. Herbert Chadwick and Mrs. Thomas Francis. Burial will be in Ivy Hill Cemetery, Laurel.

for political reasons was really transferred to a contractor on a road job, Hopkins said.

"I assume," Hopkins told Curtis, "that as one of the paid political agents of the G. O. P., it is part of your duties to write inaccurate, misleading, and false statements to public officials. It is only on such an assumption and because of extreme political partisanship that I could believe you would deliberately misstate the facts."

Another attack upon the relief administration came yesterday from Senator Holt (Democrat), West Virginia, who charged that the WPA is "the greatest and best oiled political machine this country has ever seen." He charged that West Virginia WPA employes had been threatened by "ward heeling politicians" in the recent primary in that State.

Holt's speech was the forerunner of debate expected when the deficiency bill reaches the floor of the Senate. The committee voted down the Republican suggestion that relief money be allotted to States to be locally administered. Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, is expected to lead a fight to amend the bill to provide for such allotments.

Because the provision for money for the PWA would be in the nature of legislation in an appropriation bill, it is expected an attempt will be to suspend the rules to permt its consideration. A two-thirds vote is necessary for suspension.

Roosevelt Role That of Dictator Baker Declares

By the United Press.

Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat yesterday heard New Deal policies described as "making President Roosevelt more powerful than Mussolini and Hitler," then retired to consider his District Supreme Court decision on constitutionality of the Administration's municipal power program.

The charge came from a former Democratic Cabinet member, Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War under President Wilson. He was representing four utility companies which contended the practice of granting and lending Federal funds for publicly-owned electricity systems is outside the law.

Chief Justice Wheat will announce his decision late this week, after studying the lengthy record of almost a month of proceedings.

The last words he heard in the case was this charge from Baker:

"Mussolini disbanded the Italian parliament because he grew tired of it. But President Roosevelt won't do that.

"His Congress gave him $4,880,000,000. He's got all the money he can use and he can spend it any way he sees fit."

Power Great.

"President Roosevelt doesn't need to disband his Congress. He's already more powerful than Mussolini and Hitler."

Baker's charge climaxed a two-hour indictment of the New Deal's work-relief program as an unlawful delegation of power to the President and an unconstitutional invasion of States' rights.

He pictured Congress as a supine body appropriating money in huge, lump sums in contrast to the wartime Senate and House that demanded the privilege of deciding just how many rifles, pistols and horse blankets Baker could purchase for the Army.

He described PWA Administrator Harold L. Ickes as a "destroyer of private property" because of his $200,000,000 in allotments for 56 municipal power projects.

"These four utility companies," he said, "stand to see their investments of $3,619,000 (referring specifically to ten municipal systems) destroyed because of the Government's program. And President Roosevelt promised Congress his work relief projects would be 'useful.'"

Forest Flames Under Control; Death Toll 5

By the United Press.

Tuckerton, N. J., May 26.—The forest fire which raged over more than 8 square miles of the south Jersey pine belt since Saturday night was reported under control tonight after five men had been burned to death.

State fire wardens said that although the fire was still burning in five localities, the major danger was at an end, despite constantly shifting winds. It may take several days, however, to put out the last of the small blazes.

More than 2,000 soldiers, civilians and CCC workers battled the flames, aided by fire apparatus from 21 towns, before they were brought under control.

The deaths resulted from an accident to a truck carrying CCC workers in the fire zone. The group was driving through thick smoke when the truck crashed into a tree. Some of the workers were knocked unconscious and burned to death where they lay.

The dead: John T. LaSalle, 20, New Brunswick; Stanley Carr, 22, Waretown; Edward F. Sullivan, 20, New Brunswick; Kingsley White, 40, Whitesville, and Ira Morey, Stafford Forge. White and Morey were members of the State Forest Fire Service. The others were CCC workers.

Nine other men were injured seriously and scores suffered minor hurts.

Hundreds of persons had fled their homes before the threatening flames. Several houses were destroyed. Nine villages and towns were threatened with destruction before the fire was controlled.

State Fire Warden Col. Leonidas Coyle, directing fire fighters from an airplane, said three volunteer firemen were missing and believed burned to death. They were Benjamin Brown and Henry Updyke, of New Gretna, and Willi n P. Martin, of Tuckerton. A crew of men was trying to break through to the area where the men were last seen.

The fire started Saturday night near Chatsworth and spread rapidly. Flying sparks set new blazes. Backfires lighted by inexperienced fire fighters doubled back with changing winds and added to the horror.

Sent to Set Backfires.

The bodies of the five known dead were burned almost beyond identification, these men had been sent into the woods to set a backfire to protect the town of Tuckerton.

A shift of wind set their own fire roaring back at them. They were trapped between walls of flame, just as they reached their truck. One body was found in the embers of the truck. The others were near by, with their heads pointed toward the truck.

At Sim Place a score of civilian fire fighters had a narrow escape. They were caught between two walls of flames, a mile from the safety of the highway. They crawled on their hands and knees for a mile along a drainage ditch, with the fire crackling above them. The blistering heat overcame several, who were dragged the last few hundred feet by their comrades.

The flames could be seen for miles. Fortunately, the area is sparsely populated. The timber is mostly scrub pine, although not far away are vast stands of valuable timber. No estimate of the damage could be made tonight.

Close co-operation is being maintained in the battle with the fire by the Regular Army, the CCC and the civilian fire fighters. Four hundred soldiers were laboring under command of Maj. Donald C. Hawley. Hundreds of CCC workers have been sent into the area. Portable radio sending sets on trucks maintain communication.

Dominion House Deaf To U. S.-Canada Merger

Ottawa, May 26 (AP).—Canada's House of Commons today was not interested in the recent proposal of Representative Sirovich to merge Canada and the United States.

Herbert Wilton, Ontario conservative member, sought to make a statement on the proposal, but the members shouted "order!" and he took his seat.

The Representative from the State of Washington and his bride afforded considerable amusement for onlookers who watched them shed shoes and hose to wade in the Rockefeller Center pool during their whirlwind tour of Gotham's high spots.

of gin, honey and ice," said the Congressman. "Tropical honey. But I like rye in mine. What will you have?"

Everybody said they would have rye in their Zioncheck zippers. Soon everybody had had their rye in the zippers. Then the question came up of how to spend the afternoon.

"I would sort of like to go to the ball game," said Zioncheck. "I would like to go to the ball game and knock out a few. I would like to do a little pitching, too."

He threw an imaginary fast ball, and picked up another Zioncheck zipper all in one motion.

"But tennis really is my game," he said. "I can drop that ball over the net into the corner with a twist on it that simply drives my opponents crazy. I always do the unexpected. I never do the same thing twice. In fact, that's the way I beat all my opponents in athletics. I beat 'em by driving 'em crazy."

He raised a zipper up to the light and appraised its coil, amber color.

"These Zioncheck zippers keep the blind spot in your eye perfectly normal," the Congressman explained. He gave himself a quick eye treatment, and then, apropos of nothing, began making a political speech:

"The man I would like to see President is Mayor McNair of Pittsburgh," Zioncheck said. "He has guts. He doesn't listen to every Tom, Dick and Harry."

"Don't you think you had better get dressed?" inquired Mrs. Zioncheck.

"Okay, kid," the Congressman said, carrying his zipper over to a suitcase. Carefully putting it down, he searched for a shirt. The only one he found needed cufflinks and it seemed there were no cufflinks.

"Pin these sleeves up for me, will you, honey?" he said to Mrs. Zioncheck.

Mrs. Zioncheck pinned the sleeves up.

Soon the expedition was ready to depart. Forgotten was the baseball game; out of mind was the tennis match. Rockefeller Center was the goal. As soon as Zioncheck saw the glittering pool, he began to get ideas. Off came his shoes and socks. In he went.

Honey went in.

"Now what?" someone inquired.

"We'll get an inspiration," Zioncheck explained.

The inspiration was provided by a news reel concern which got the Congressman in tow and held him in its studios two hours while he demonstrated how to ride his new bicycle, which he brought back from his Caribbean tour, and a horse.

Then the Zionchecks returned to their hotel.

"We're out of Scotch," said Mrs. Zioncheck.

"Well, there's gin and rum," remarked the Representative, "so lets telephone your mother in Texarkana, Ark., I want to meet her."

Mrs. Zioncheck telephoned and introduced her husband.

After the Congressman had talked to his mother-in-law, Mrs. Zioncheck—who was Rubey Louise Nix, of Texarkana and Washington, before she married the Representative—returned to the phone.

"Mother says she's going to have you arrested as soon as we get to Arkansas because you married me without her consent," the bride announced.

"Okay," said the Congressman, "being arrested is a specialty of mine."

The Zionchecks plan to visit Texarkana in about six weeks—after Congress adjourns.

Zioncheck then called his mother in Seattle and introduced his wife.

"Mother was a little worried about all these stories in the newspapers about me," he told reporters, "but I told her everything was swell—just dandy. It is, too."

But the strain of two days' strenuous activities proved too much for the couple and both retired shortly before midnight without attempting another sample of New York night life.

Black Legion Inquiry Urged

prison guard, so severely that he died two weeks later.

The inquiry took another tangent today when Lieut. Van Loomis, of the Michigan State police, said that cards taken from Ray Ernest indicated the possibility that a women's auxiliary of the organization existed.

Attorney General Crowley and Oscar G. Olander, State commissioner of public safety, went to the State prison today to investigate reports, they said, that the staff of the penitentiary was "honeycombed" with Black Legion members and that every one of the nearly 400 prison attaches has been approached to join the black-robed society.

Prison Guard Ousted.

One prison guard was dismissed today and several others were suspended. Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald announced that all State employes found to have connection with the order are to be dismissed or suspended.

Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea, of Wayne County, who has been handling the inquiry in Detroit, disclosed today that he may unknowingly have signed an application for membership in the society while he was campaigning for election two years ago.

"I was more or less of a professional joiner at that time," he said. "But before I get through with this investigation, there will be no suspicion in anybody's mind that I joined such an un-American organization."

Prosecutor McCrea raised the point today in connection with investigation of Black Legion activities that the fire that destroyed Father Charles E. Coughlin's original Shrine of the Little Flower last March 17 never had been solved.

McCrea today called a meeting of the county gun board to revoke all permits for carrying firearms. By "starting all over again" in the issuance of permits, he said, those held by members of the Black Legion will be definitely outlawed.

In an incendiary fire near Jackson early today, State and county authorities professed to see defiance of the "war of extermination" they have announced against the masked night-riding band. State police said they frustrated an attempted meeting of a hooded group near the unoccupied farm of George Noon shortly before a barn and several outbuilding were destroyed by flames.

In a raid by Wayne County authorities in the Down River district this morning, five places were entered and the raiders, led by Harry Colburn, McCrea's chief investigator, seized a number of weapons and considerable literature.

Examination for the men arraigned today in Jackson has been set for June 2. In Detroit 12 men who have been held without bail on murder and kidnap warrants are to appear for examinations tomorrow.

Watch Radicals In Party, Moley Tells Roosevelt

By the United Press.

New York, May 26—Raymond Moley, former "brain truster No. 1" in the New Deal, tonight warned President Roosevelt that he must beware of the radicals within his own party lest they "use the political power that his moderate reforms provided in the earlier and more popular days of his Administration to destroy him, to destroy moderation, and to destroy the very system that he attempted to improve."

Addressing the annual dinner of the National Economy League, Dr. Moley saw the Roosevelt Administration confronted with these dangers:

1. That Federal relief agencies will be turned into political machines to perpetuate the rule of State and local politicians.

2. The tendency, "all too prevalent in this Congress, to engage in muck-raking, marauding expeditions which destroy the liberty of all of the people while they seek to restrain the abuses of a few. These orgies of public castigation * * * may be the means of furthering individual political ambitions, they may be build-ups for those with Presidential hankerings, but so far as the public interest is concerned they are simply sound an fury."

3. The tendency of those in charge of the New Deal to "over-emphasize adherence to and belief in the philosophy of the movement and to minimize the importance of competent technical administration. * * * President Roosevelt, early in 1933, wisely observed that many liberal governments have come to ruin on the rocks of unsound financial policy. He might have added that ruin lurks also in the rocks of clumsy and incompetent administration."

$25 Weekly Granted To Mrs. Leonard

Madison, Wis., May 26 (AP).—The first legal step in the effort of Mrs. Grace Golden Leonard to sever her marriage to Madison's one-time "phobic prisoner" brought her an award today of $25 a week support money pending disposition of her divorce suit.

Both silver-haired William Ellery Leonard, 60-year-old University of Wisconsin professor, and his 28-year-old wife of nearly a year were represented by counsel at the brief hearing in circuit court chambers. The whereabouts of Mrs. Leonard, who fled several days ago from their home, remained undisclosed.

Her attorneys said it might be several weeks before the papers in the divorce action were filed. Her petition charged the professor and poet with accusing her of being insane and making unjust accusations against her, bringing an impairment of her health.

Bus Fares Cut To Meet Rates On Rail Lines

Major Companies in East Slash Charges to Be Effective June 1.

Moving swiftly to meet the scheduled reductions in railroad fares, officials of the Greyhound, Blue Ridge, Great Eastern, Short Line and Safeway Trailways bus systems yesterday announced rates as low as 1½ cents per mile.

When these rates go into effect June 1, the day before the railroads were ordered to reduce their fares to 2 cents per mile, passengers will be able to travel to New York for $3.75 instead of of the present $5.50. The fare to Baltimore will be cut from 75 cents to 65 cents.

All major Eastern railroads, with the exception of the Baltimore & Ohio, have filed suit in Federal court in New York to invalidate the fare order.

Vigorously protesting any reduction, they have filed their reduced rates in conformity with the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission "under protest".

Just now the new bus rates are described as "tentative." But officials of the National Association of Motor Bus Operators asserted yesterday that schedules are being drawn up by the major lines in the East ranging from 1.5 to 1.75 cents per mile.

The Eastern bus companies, officials said, will grant a 10-cent fare reduction for round trip in addition to the cut in basic rates.

The railroads, on the other hand, will stick to the flat rate, and give no reductions for round-trip.

Those who travel by bus have the I. C. C. railroad rate decision to thank for the new low fares.

Several months ago the I. C. C. ruled that railroads throughout the East would have to reduce their present rate of 3.6 cents per mile to 2 cents, and the bus lines are making their cut to meet competition.

Roosevelt Message Read to Conference

Atlantic City, N. J., May 26.—President Roosevelt urged social service workers tonight to remember that "humanity is not society; humanity is just plain folks."

In a message to the National Conference of Social Workers delivered by Stanley Reed, Solicitor General of the United States, the President praised social workers for "making this country a more neighborly place in which to live."

"Some of our so-called leaders," the President wrote, "have made the mistake of looking upon men and women as economic and social units. * * * In matters of social welfare we should keep sight of the fact that we are not dealing with 'units,' 'individuals' or with 'economic men.' We are dealing with persons * * * Let us remember that humanity is not society; humanity is just plain folks."

Culpeper Police Head Dies After Operation

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Culpeper, Va., May 26.—Police Chief Joseph Bowers, 66, of Culpeper, died tonight in Grace Memorial Hospital at Richmond, following an operation he had undergone a month ago.

He had been a member of the Culpeper force for 19 years and chief of police for the past 6 years. He is survived by two sons, Russell, of Culpeper, and Carroll, of Richmond; a sister Mrs. Rufus Spicer, and a brother, Capt. J. E. Bowers, of the Eighth Precinct, Washington.

Funeral services probably will be held Thursday in Culpeper.

Gen. Miles, Wife Ask $25,000 in Cab Crash

A smashup between two taxicabs at Sixteenth and K streets northwest last November was made the basis for two damage suits by Brig. Gen. Perry L. Miles and his wife, Mary Scott Miles, in District Supreme Court, Monday. The suits aggregate $25,000.

Mrs. Miles asked $20,000 for injuries she suffered and which, she said, caused her to spend three weeks in the hospital, while her husband asked damages of $5,000 because of loss of her services and hospital and medical bills. The Independent Taxi Owners Association and one of its drivers were named defendants.

Ketchup Bottle Duel Is Victory For Huddleston

By the Associated Press.

Birmingham, Ala., May 26.—Conflicting accounts of a physical encounter at a Birmingham cafe came today from Representative George Huddleston and his Democratic primary opponent, Luther Patrick.

Patrick had a bump on his head and his straw hat was bashed in from a blow with a ketchup bottle. Huddleston, veteran Representative of the Ninth Alabama District, was unhurt.

The clash occurred at a chance meeting after the candidates appeared on the same radio program last night.

Huddleston said in his radio address there was "not one syllable of truth" in a statement by Patrick that Huddleston told him some time ago he would defeat him with money.

In his account of the cafe affair, Huddleston said:

"Mr. Patrick came into the restaurant, accompanied by two or three or four men and thrust his finger in my face. I naturally assumed he was there for trouble.

"I grabbed his extended hand with my left and struck him across the forehead with a bottle from the table."

Patrick said:

"I walked over to the table, extended my hand to Huddleston and we shook hands. Then I asked: 'Why did you deny our street conversation (concerning the spending of money); have you entirely forgotten it?'

"Then before I realized what was happening, Mr. Huddleston picked up a ketchup bottle and cracked me on the head."

Huddleston, leader of the fight on the "death sentence" in the administration-sponsored holding company bill, was first in a field of six in the May 5 primary.

He failed to poll a clear majority and was forced into the run-off with Patrick, whose campaign is based on "no promises."

Patrons to Be Advised On Bus Routing Plans

Changes in routing buses are to be delayed hereafter until patrons have been given at least a week's notice, it was decided by the Public Utilities Commission at a meeting yesterday.

Request for greater notice for bus patrons was made by William A. Roberts, people's counsel, in the course of consideration of a proposal to change the downtown terminal routing of the Chevy Chase rush hour bus service. Effective a week from next Monday the buses will turn south on Seventh street from Pennsylvania avenue, go around the Archives Building to Ninth to Pennsylvania avenue to Thirteenth street and over the present routing.

Putting Bees in a Barrel

Nervy Painter Saws Off Limb To Get Buzzing Bees in Barrel

But Swarm Emerges as Queen Leaves New Quarters and Same Volunteer Coaxes Them Into a Shipping Box With Sugar.

Theodore Pridmore, a painter who modestly states he "don't know a darn thing about bees," solved a ticklish situation yesterday on Capitol Hill by herding a big swarm of them into a barrel.

Pridmore was visiting a friend of his in the old House Office Building when he noticed a crowd gathering in a vacant lot just across C street. He went over and discovered a fellow trying to coax the buzzing swarm from their perch on a tree limb into a barrel.

The painter, who lives at 705 Fifth street northwest, volunteered his aid but the would-be captor said he thought he could manage it alone. But after being stung three times, he gladly turned the task over to Pridmore.

Armed with a saw, Pridmore mounted a ladder and proceeded to saw off the limb. Although at times his face and arms were covered with bees, he worked so smoothly that the roosting insects did not become excited. He said he would not have been stung under the left eye if he had not been so careless as to allow a twig to brush up against a bee seated on his cheek.

The divorced limb was placed inside the barrel but in a few moments the queen escaped and her subjects followed. They found a new roost from which Pridmore separated them. This time, however, a shipping box whose sides had been coated with sugar was used to lure the bees inside.

"I got a dollar for the job," said the red-haired Pridmore, who is now "between engagements" as a painter and decorator. "That swarm was worth $20."

Scott M. Loftin Named Senator From Florida

Ex-Head of Bar Association Gets Trammell Seat Pending Election.

By the Associated Press.

Tallahassee, Fla., May 26.—Scott M. Loftin, immediate past president of the American Bar Association, will be Florida's junior United States Senator until a successor to the late Park Trammell is elected.

Gov. Dave Sholtz appointed the Jacksonville attorney today to fill the vacancy. Sholtz will be a candidate for the office in the November election for the term which expires in 1941. The election winner takes office next January.

Loftin, a Democrat and a corporation lawyer, started for Washington soon after receiving the appointment. He said he would support President Roosevelt and the Robinson resolution proposing a new survey and possibly additional funds for the Florida ship canal project.

The appointee, a 58-year-old bachelor, said he did not seek the office and would not be a candidate for Trammell's unexpired term. Florida Democrats are expected to nominate a candidate for Senator at a special election, possibly in September. State Republicans will nominate their candidate through action of the party executive committee.

In addition to Gov. Sholtz, other seekers of the Democratic senatorial nomination are former Gov. Doyle E. Carlton, of Tampa; Claude Pepper, Tallahassee attorney, who ran Trammell a close race two years ago; C. O. Andrews, of Orlando; Robert J. Boone, of Miami, and Charles S. Broward, of Miami.

Loftin is a member of the United States Supreme Court's committee on Federal court reform. During his term as president of the American Bar Association he directed the organization's anti-crime campaign and its constitutional survey of New Deal policies.

Sweeping Reductions in RAIL FARES beginning JUNE 1ST

2 CENTS A MILE IN COACHES
YOU SAVE NEARLY ONE-HALF

EVERYBODY CAN AFFORD THE SAFETY, SPEED, AND COMFORT OF TRAVEL BY TRAIN

For example, it will cost you only 50¢ to travel 25 miles in comfortable, modern coaches—$1 to travel 50 miles—$2 to travel 100 miles—$20 to travel 1000 miles.

Rail fares for tickets good in Parlor and Sleeping Cars have been reduced to 3 cents a mile and the Pullman charges cut one-third by the elimination of the surcharge, making a very substantial reduction in the cost of Pullman travel.

What you get when you travel by TRAIN

NO OTHER method of transportation can match the marvelous safety record of American railroads.

Travel by train means Safety, Speed, and Comfort in modern steel cars. Avoid the dangers of crowded public highways—let the engineer do your driving. Most railroad terminals are in the center of cities and towns—you waste no time in getting directly to your destination.

Chain of Allies To Check Nazis, Goal of France

By the United Press.

Paris, May 26.—Further encirclement of Germany with a powerful chain of Allies will be a cornerstone in the foreign policy of the popular front Government which will take office next week, the United Press was informed tonight.

The incoming government, headed by Leon Blum, has decided to maintain, or strengthen if possible, France's relations with Soviet Russia, the world's strongest military power, and the Little and Balkan ententes as the best safeguard against an attempt by Germany to expand in Europe.

To accomplish this end the new government will be willing to allow Franco-Italian relations to weaken unless Italy agrees to come back into the Stresa front and support France in the Rhineland crisis.

Persistent reports that Germany is building fortifications in the Rhineland at top speed have aroused French fears of a possible German invasion.

Military authorities fear that unless the reported work on fortifications is stopped immediately, French troops will be effectively bottled up and unable to aid any of France's central or esatern allies in event of a conflict.

A strong anti-German policy is foreshadowed by the probable appointment of Yvon Delbos, present vice premier and minister of justice, as foreign minister.

On March 7, when Chancellor Adolf Hitler ordered troops into the Rhineland in violation of the Locarno Treaty, Delbos was the most energetic official in France demanding immediate and effective retaliation.

Arab Revolt

necting Jerusalem with Haifa and Cairo were cut. Bands of armed Arabs were reported active, particularly in northern Palestine.

(The Jewish Telegraphic Agency reported several bombs were thrown in Jaffa, where Arabs and police exchanged shots, and in other towns. There were fires at Rehoboth and Beth Veigan, both Jewish settlements, and on the Jaffa-Tel Aviv border.

(The agency reported Jacob Razili, buried last night, was the twenty-seventh Jewish victim since April 19, when Arabs began a concerted movement aimed at stopping Jewish immigration and land purchases. Martial law may be proclaimed for all Palestine, the agency said, unless the condition improves quickly.

(Curfew was lifted partially in Jerusalem Jewish quarters tonight to permit Jews to attend Shabuoth services in synagogues. Jews were not permitted to pray at the Wailing Wall, where there were sanguinary incidents in 1929.

(Jewish settlers were mobilized and armed for self-defense for the first time at Rehoboth, following severe damage to Jewish farm enterprises, allegedly by Arabs.)

In the Jezreel Valley engagement, Arab snipers hidden on a hillside fired into the Jewish village of Beth Alpha.

Trans-Jordan troops returned the fire and routed the snipers. British officers were in command of the troops.

Earlier, in two brushes near Nazareth, British soldiers repelled 200 Arabs, who fled with an undetermined number of wounded, and made a strategic retreat before frontal and flank attacks by some 250 rifle-armed Mosems. The latter troops, posted at the foot of Mount Tabor, ran out of amunition.

Garrisons Reinforced.

London, May 26 (AP).—Great Britain has substantially reinforced her military garrison in Palestine in an effort to curb outbreaks there, the House of Commons was told today.

Malcolm MacDonald, temporarily assuming the duties of colonial secretary, said:

"A state of unrest, accompanied by sporadic acts of violence, still continues in Palestine. The most serious disturbances which have taken place occurred at Gaza yesterday.

"I am glad to say order was restored there. In addition to other measures, the high commissioner has taken steps to restrict movements of agitators and strike-leaders."

MacDonald took over the colonies post when J. H. ("Jim") Thomas officially resigned today by handing the seals of his office to King Edward at Buckingham Palace. Thomas came under fire in the recent "budget leak scandal."

French Factories Seized by Workers

Paris, May 26 (AP).—Stubborn workers who took control of three large factories won two victories for labor tonight. The third group remained deadlocked with the employers.

Officials at the Hotchkiss Motor factory at Levallois met increased wage demands of 1,500 workers who refused to leave at quitting time. The pay boosts were granted after a conference between employes' representatives and the management.

Owners of the Lavalette metallurgical factory at Saint Ouen agreed to discuss similar demands from strikers who congregated in the shops an hour after closing time.

Five hundred employes at the Nieuport Plane Works at Issy Les Moulinaux, who started a "folded arm" strike this morning remained inside the grounds tonight after the management had shut the gates and gone home.

At 10 p. m. they said they would hold out "indefinitely" after being provided with food by the local Communist committee.

Woman Takes Poison, Leaves a Suicide Note

Mrs. Viola Griese, 25, of Lord Calvert nn, College Park, Md., was brought to Providence Hospital yesterday suffering the effects of poison. Her condition was said to be serious.

A note addressed to her husband, Walter Griese, was found in the woman's room. In the note she said good-by to her husband "because there is nothin' left to live for."

Codes of NRA Still Observed, Leaders Assert

Improved Wage and Hour Scales Reported, With Jobs Increasing.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 26.—George A. Sloan, chairman of the Consumers Goods Industries Committee, tonight made public a survey in which business leaders declared industry has generally maintained improved wage and hour scales since the collapse of the NRA a year ago and employment now is nearing the 1929 level.

Making the survey public on the eve of the anniversary of the Supreme Court decision which held that the NRA was invalid, Sloan said:

"American industry generally has given an inspiring example of its determination and ability to maintain and improve wage and hour standards."

Excerpts from the reports of various leaders follow:

Paul S. Willis, president of the Associated Grocery Manufacturers of America: "This year our industry is employing 15 per cent more people than in 1929. Better than 95 per cent are maintaining same or higher wages and more than 85 per cent are observing the working hour standards which prevailed under NRA."

Iron, Steel Increase Workers.

Walter S. Tower, executive secretary of the American Iron and Steel Institute: "No deviation from minimum wages and maximum hours prescribed in the code. * * * Number of employes increased approximately 30,000 during the past year * * *."

Alfred Reeves, vice president and general manager of the Automobile Manufacturers Association: "With 26 per cent less production in 1935, the automobile industry employed practically the same number of people as in 1929. Present hourly wage rates and weekly earnings approximately the same as in 1929. Prospects favorable for continued maintenance wage and hour standards. Employment this year running ahead of 1935."

William Whitfield Woods, president of the Institute of American Meat Packers: "Wage and hour standards are being maintained. We see no indication of abandoning them. Hourly wage rates higher this year than in 1929. Employment increasing."

Hourly Wage Rates Higher.

A. L. Viles, president of Rubber Manufacturers Association: "Rubber industry generally has maintained code wages and hours. Several wage increases made during code period still in effect and hourly wage rates increases made during code period today are higher than in 1929. Employment has increased 27 per cent since 1933 and is now very close to the 1929 level."

Arthur Besse, president of the National Association of Wool Manufacturers: 'Wages fully maintained. Probably less than 2 per cent have made any changes. Hours reasonably well maintained. About 5 per cent by volume have lengthened from a 40 to 44 or 48 hour week. * * * March, 1936, employment 150,900, as compared to 140,085 one year ago."

S. P. Munroe, Assistant to the president, Cotton Textile Institute: "Government reports and figures evidence a high degree of observance of basic wage and hour standards former code. Over 90 per cent of the industry is co-operating in such matters."

Socialists Seek U. S. Operation Of Industries

Party Platform Advocates Step to Curb Power of Supreme Court.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 26.—The Socialist National Convention today adopted a platform advocating constitutional amendment to provide for socialization of basic industries and to end the "usurped power of the Supreme Court to declare social legislation unconstitutional."

To accomplish this, the party urged the immediate passage of the worker's and farmer's rights amendment—the so-called Benson amendment now in the Senate, which would legalize social legislation and give the Federal Government authority to acquire and operate basic industries.

The platform also declared that the New Deal like the Old Deal had failed.

The convention voted to establish a permanent national labor committee "whose duty it will be to co-ordinate the action of Socialists within the trade union in order to carry out the policy of the party." The vote came after warnings from trade union delegates that it would drive members from the party.

Graham Leads Fight.

The fight against the policy was led by James Graham, president of the Montana State Federation of Labor, and John McKay, labor leader from Spokane, Wash.

The control of the convention by the Leftists and the Wisconsin Centrists was clearly evidenced in the election of the new national executive committee.

Eight members were re-elected: Norman homas, Mayor Daniel W. Hoan of Milwaukee, Devere Alle, of Connecticut, editor and writer; Maynard C. Krueger, of the University of Chicago; Albert Sprague Coolidge, instructor at Harvard University; Franz Daniel, Southern organizer for the Amagamated Clothing Workers; Powers Hapgood, organizer of the United Mine Workers, and State Representative Darlington Hoopes, of Reading, Pa.

Three others elected were: Max Delson, New York attorney; Max Raskin, former city attorney of Milwaukee, and George Rhodes, president of the Reading Federated Trades Council.

The convention adjourned after declaring the willingness of the party to participate in a federated Farmer-Labor Party on a national basis, and after "toning down" the much-controverted declaration of principles adopted at Detroit in 1934, which created widespread bitterness between Leftists and Rightists.

he convention's resolution said a national Farmer-Labor Party was impossible for 1936, however.

McCay declared such a policy was the "same used by the Communists in establishing cells in trade unions."

Other "immediate demands" of the platform were:

Appropriation of $6,000,000,000 by Congress for the continuation of the Federally financed Public Works program.

A Federal system of unemployment and health insurance and old-age pensions for persons 60 years of age or over, with contributions from the Federal Government, such contributions to be raised from taxes on incomes and inheritances.

Tax Increase.

A drastic increase in income and inheritance taxes on the higher income levels and of excess profit taxes.

The establishment of the 30-hour week, the abolition of injunctions in labor disputes, the prohibition of "company unions" and the prohibition of the use of the police, deputy sheriffs, Militia and Federal troops in labor disputes.

The platform proposed that farm prices be stabilized at cost of production to the working farmer, such stabilization to be made by representatives of organized farmers and consumers.

It further proposed that the marketing, processing and distribution of farm products be taken over by bona fide co-operatives and other agencies to be created for this purpose.

Unity to Be Studied By Presbyterians

Augusta, Ga., May 26 (AP).—Southern Presbyterian ordered a study of church unity today, naming a committee to investigate the proposal and recommend action to the 1937 Assembly.

A lengthy night conference, bringing together those with varying opinions, laid the basis for almost unanimous action today. It followed numerous appeals by Southern and Northern ministers for action looking to a "united Presbyterian Church" from Southern, Northern and reformed branches.

"The assembly affirms its desire to follow the leadings of the Providence of God in our relation to sister churches of like faith and order," the resolution said

The committee, headed by Dr C L King, of Houston, Tex. was instructed "to study anew the whole question of union in its varying aspects and to make recommendation to the 193 assembly as to what action, if any, be taken"

Text of Socialist Party's Campaign Platform

For a Socialist America: The Socialist Party of the United States pledges itself anew to the task of building a Socialist society, under which the industries of the country shall be socially owned and democratically managed for the common good; a society under which security, plenty, peace and freedom shall be the heritage of all.

Eight years ago the people of this country voted to continue the capitalist old deal. The purpose of this deal was to preserve the rights of the few who own most of the Nation's wealth. Under the old deal, the economic machine was plunged into the worst depression in our history.

Four years ago the voters of the United States threw their support to the New Deal. They elected to office Franklin D. Roosevelt and the Democratic Party. The New Deal, like the old deal, has utterly failed. Untold wealth was destroyed. Prices rose. Profits advanced. Wages lagged. Twelve million men and women are still jobless and hunger and destitution exist throughout the land.

Attacks on Liberties.

Under the New Deal, attacks have been made on our civil liberties, more vicious than at any period since the days immediately following the World War. Gag and loyalty bills have been rushed through our Legislatures. Labor organizers have been seized, kidnaped, maltreated, killed. The militia has been used to crush attempts of labor to organize. Lynching, race discrimination and the development of Fascist trends have continued unabated. Against these infringements of human rights the Democratic Administration has kept an ominious silence.

Under the New Deal we are now spending on our Army and Navy three times as much as before the World War, the purposes of which are the suppression of unrest at home and the protection and expansion of American imperialism abroad.

Under the capitalist Old Deal, and the capitalist New Deal, America has drifted increasingly toward insecurity, suppression and war.

Insecurity is but the logical result of the workings of capitalism. For under capitalism, new and old, the many work for the owners of the machines and land. The owners will not employ the workers unless they expect to extract a profit. Labor is forced to divide up its earnings with the owning group. With their scanty wages, the workers are able to buy only a part of the goods which they create. Goods pile up. Factories close. Workers are discharged. The country finds itself face to face with another depression.

Future Depressions.

In the past, after a period of hard times, we could depend upon the settlement of the West, the development of new foreign markets and the rapid expansion of our population to revive industry. These forces can no longer be depended upon as formerly to keep the system going, while our gross and unjust inequality of wealth, our monopoly prices and our growing debt structure are sowing the seeds of more tragic depressions in the days ahead.

Our capitalist system is also sowing the seeds of dictatorship. As unemployment increases under capitalism the masses, to save themselves from starvation, are compelled to make even greater demands on the Government for relief and for public jobs. These demands are resisted by the propertied classes, fearful of higher taxes. Restlessness grows.

Demands for greater appropriations increase. The struggle between the house of have and the house of want becomes ever more intense. Big business seeks to deny the masses their constitutional rights. Fascist trends develop, trends that only a powerful and militant labor movement on the economic and political fields can successfully stay.

Militarism, likewise, under a declining capitalism, becomes an ever greater menace. As unrest increases, the masters of industry seek to use the military forces as the bulwark of reaction at home. They support higher military budgets. They look toward Imperalist adventures abroad as a means of diverting attention from the unrest at home, and of gaining new markets, new investment areas, new sources of raw material. A race begins that can have but one ending—an international war. The Japanese seizure of Manchuria, and Italy's invasion of Ethiopia are but examples of the forces at work under capitalism. These adventures may well be the forerunners of another world conflict.

Socialism Is Solution.

In Socialism and in Socialism alone will we find the solution of our problem. Under Socialism, the socially necessary industries, would be socially owned and democratically administrated by workers, consumers and technicians. The farmer working his own farm would be secure in its possession. The workers would no longer be forced to pay tribute to private owners. They would be able to buy back the goods they created. Industry, finding a market for these goods, would run without periodic breakdowns. Unemployment, and the wastes of unplanned industry would cease. Our national income would double or treble. Every useful worker would be assured of high living standards, short hours, freedom and liberty and a chance to enjoy a good life. Industrial autocracy and war would pass. An economy of scarcity would give way to an economy of abundance.

Such a society cannot be attained without a migty struggle. Tat struggle must be made by labor organized both on the economic and political fields, and dedicated to a co-operative world.

In their fight for power and Socialism, the workers and farmers must gain new strength and unity by their daily struggle against poverty and exploitation. To improve the conditions of life and labor and thereby to weld together the strength and solidarity of the masses, the Socialist Party pledges itself to fight for the following demands in legislative halls and side by side with labor in field and factory and office.

Neews of the Times.

These immediate demands include:

1. Constitution. The adaptation of the Constitution to the needs of the times, among other things, through the farmers' and workers' rights amendment ending the usurped power of the Supreme Court to declare social legislation unconstitutional and granting the power to acquire and operate industries; through an amendment making future amendments less difficult and the child labor amendment.

2. Social ownership. We propose the social ownership and democratic control of the mines, the railroads, the power industry and other key industries. The recognition in public industries of the right of collective bargaining.

3. Relief, insurance, jobs. We propose an immediate appropriation by Congress of $6,000,000,000 to continue Federal relief to the unemployed for the next year; the continuance of WPA projects, at union wages; a Federal system of unemployment and old-age pensions for persons 60 years of age or over, with contributions from the Federal Government, such contributions to be raised from taxes on incomes and inheritances, as provided in the Frazier-Lundeen bill.

Socialized medicine. We propose adequate medical care of the sick and injured as a social function, right and duty, and not as a private or public charity. This to be financed by taxation, similar to the public educational system or governmental functions, and to be democratically administered.

4. Youth. We propose the passage of the American youth act as the only legislation for youth relief favorable to the labor movement which will meet the immediate educational and economic needs of young people.

Educational Plan.

We propose Federal appropriations for the establishment and maintenance of public schools and of free city colleges to make possible a full education for every young person.

We propose the abolition of the CCC, the National Youth Administration and opposition to any similar attempts to deal with the economic problems of youth which threaten the wage and the living standards of organized labor.

5. Taxation. We propose a drastic increase in income and inheritance taxes on the higher income levels and of excess profit taxes, and wide experimentation in land values taxation.

6. Labor legislation. We propose the establishment of the 30-hour week; the abolition of injunctions in labor disputes; the prohibition of company unions; company spying and private guards and gunmen, the prohibition of the use of the police, deputy sheriffs and militia and Federal troops in labor disputes.

7. Agriculture. We propose the abolition of tenant and corporation farming and the substitution of the use and occupancy title for family-sized farms, and the conversion of plantations and corporation farms into co-operative farms.

We propose that the marketing, processing and distribution of farm products be taken over by bonafide co-operatives and other agencies to be created for this purpose.

We propose that farm prices be stabilized at cost of production to the working farmer, such stabilization to be made by representatives of organized working farmers and consumers.

1. In the meantime, we propose: That immediate relief be provided for debt-laden working farmers by advancing credit to working farmers on such carrying charges as d onot threaten the farmer with the loss of his farm.

2. That social insurance be provided against crop failures, the cost of such insurance to be covered by income, inheritance and corporation taxes.

Free Press.

8. Civil liberties. We urge the abolition of all laws that interfere with the right of free speech, free press, free assembly and the peaceful activities of labor in its struggle for organization and power; the enforcement of constitutional guarantees of economic, political, legal and social equality for the Negro and all other oppressed minorities, and the enactment and enforcement of drastic antilynching and anti-Jim Crow laws.

9. Militarism and war. We reaffirm the historic position of the Socialist Party of the United States in opposition to war. We propose the drastic reduction of armament with a view to total disarmament; the elimination of military training from our schools; the abandonment of imperialist adventures of the military or economic nature abroad; the maintenance of friendly relations with Soviet Russia; and the strengthening of neutrality laws, to the end that we may ward off immediate wars while fighting for the attainment of a social order which will eliminate the chief causes of war.

Not a penny, not a man to the military aims of the Government, unconditional opposition to any war engaged in by the American Government.

The Socialist Party calls upon the workers, farmers and all advocates of social justice to join with it in its struggle to widen the channels through which may be made peaceful, orderly and democratic progress; to resist all trends toward insecurity, fascism and war; to strengthen labor in its battles for better conditions and for increasing power; to refuse to support the parties of capitalism, or any of their candidates, and to unite with it in its historic struggle toward a co-operative world.

Commonwealth Plan.

The convention adopted a plank, to be written by the national executive committee, and to include in substance the following Commonwealth plan:

For the purpose of ending the economic crisis which has brought untold suffering to millions and of restoring America on its forward march to greater opportunities for all, the Socialist Party asks the participation of the American people in the establishment of the Commonwealth Plan, here with described.

The aim of the Commonwealth Plan is to provide an abundance of goods and services for the whole American people, by means of a reorganization of the producing and distributive systems along such lines as will permit their capacity operation. More specifically, the plan will make possible:

1. An approximate doubling of the present annual production of wealth in the United States and its distribution broadly enough to permit the American people to buy what they would produce. Assuming no important chance in the present price level, the proper use of the natural, mechanical and human resources of the United States, with the products fairly distributed, would allow each family a minimum income of $2,500 a year, rising to more than $4,000 a year as the plan would be put into full operation.

2. A guarantee of jobs to all persons by means of (A) the expansion of wealth production, (B) reduction in working hours, (C) voluntary retirement on generous pensions for all persons 60 years of age or more, and (D) educational scholarships for young people.

3. A guarantee of security to all persons through an extensive and generous system of old-age pensions, maternity benefits, unemployment and disability insurance, and free medical and dental care.

"4. A building and improvement program which would bring fine modern homes, within the reach of every family, which would provide all communities with sufficient schools, hospitals, parks and roads, and which would extend electrical power facilities to all homes in the city nad on the farm.

Frank Green Improved.

Casualty Hospital authorities reported yesterday that Frank Green, United States Supreme Court marshal, was "greatly improved." Green collapsed Monday in a corridor of the Supreme Court building.

Women's Vote Target of Drive By Both Parties

Republicans Claim Credit for Suffrage; Democrats Name Mrs. O'Day.

By the Associated Press.

Strategic moves in the direction of the women's vote were made yesterday at both Democratic and Republican headquarters.

Women Democrats started their drive for a voice in shaping that party's platform with an announcement from the women's division of the Democratic National Committee of the formation of a "committee on suggestions to the Democratic platform committee."

Representative Caroline O'Day, of New York, was placed at the head of this group of 14 and she immediately swung into action, calling available colleagues to a dinner meeting tonight at the Women's National Democratic Club.

"Hold Power."

Mrs. Wilma D. Hoyal, director of the women's division of the Republican Party and its author, said: "Women have it in their power to swing the election next November."

She defined the issues ahead as "largely economic;" called "a Government budget out of balance" a "direct menace to the security of women and their children."

Mrs. O'Day's eyes lighted with enthusiasm as she looked over the list of women who will work with her.

"These are all such outstanding women the men cannot help but be impressed by what they have to say," she declared. "All of them have done such splendid work in their own States they not only have won the confidence of their State leaders but have acquired national reputations."

Main Interest.

"I am most interested in social welfare and peace," she added, "and I think that is really the main interest of a majority of the women of the country."

Mrs. Hoyal's purple pamphlet was the fourth of a colored-ink series she has prepared to appeal to the eyes of the feminine voters.

In it she made these statements:

In 1868, Republicans offered the first resolutions in Congress for women's suffrage. In 1872, the Republican platform made the first national declaration in behalf of women's rights. In 1892, women made their first appearance as alternates to a national convention—Republican. In 1912, women made their first appearance as convention delegates—Republican. In 1918, Ruth Hanna McCormick was the first woman appointed to take charge of women's party activities. In 1919, a Republican Congress passed the equal suffrage amendment.

New Charge Filed In Extortion Case

New York, May 26 (AP).—The grand jury today returned a third indictment charging Max D. Krone, private detective, with extorting money from prominent persons.

The new bill naming Krone, already indicted on extortion charges filed by Alfred E. Smith, jr., was returned after testimony by Samuel S. Stampleman, of Boston, safety razor company executive. Krone and A. H. Ross, Brooklyn attorney, were indicted first when Smith said $10,000 was extorted from him on threats to expose his relationship with a young woman.

Stampleman was named in a summons and complaint served on him in 1933 in a $100,000 action charging assault brought by Helen Conboy, of the Bronx. The suit was settled out of court for $5,000 in checks payable to A. Henry Ross, Hastings said.

Maj. McClellan Killed as 'Chute Fouls in Jump

Noted Army Flier Dies in Ohio Accident; Won Honors in Alaska.

The War Department was notified yesterday of the death of Maj. Hez McClellan, one of the Army's outstanding fliers and formerly attached to Bolling Field, in an airplane crash near Centerville, Ohio, on Monday.

His parachute was believed to have fouled when he was forced to bail out of his plane because of engine trouble. So badly mangled was his body that identification was made through the number of the plane.

Chief of the Army flying service at Wright Field in Dayton, Ohio, Maj. McClellan distinguished himself for his pioneer flights in Alaska. He was the first man to land a military airplane at Point Barrow, where Will Rogers and Wiley Post were killed last year, and was also the first to fly the difficult route over some of the most rugged and desolate wastes in the world, from Point Barrow to Fairbanks.

In July, 1934, he participated as supply officer in the flight of the ten B-10 Martin bombers from Washington to Fairbanks, Alaska, and return, a total distance of 8,290 miles. The following year he made an airplane survey of the routes to and from Alaska throughout the Territory. For these pioneer Alaskan flights he was recommended for the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Sibley Hospital Gives Diplomas To 25 Nurses

The Rev. Mark Depp Talks at Commencement Exercises.

Twenty-five nurses were presented with diplomas and took the Florence Nigtingale Pledge last night at the commencement exercises of the Sibley Memorial Hospital's graduating class.

The principal speaker was the Rev. Mark Depp, pastor of St. Mark's Methodist Episcopal Church in Baltimore, who urged that although the girls' training was complete for them not to stop studying so that they might be of greater service to their community.

In thea bsence of the hospital president, Charles S. Cole, the exercises werep resided over by the Rev. Benjamin W. Meeks, superintendent of Washington District, Methodist Church. The diplomas were presented by Mrs. Robert Stewart, bureau secretary of hospitals.

The members of the class were:

Gertrude Bertha Benish, Jewell Stewart Buchanan, Lucille H. Carroll, Mary Juliand Davis, Vivion Elizabeth Davis, Nellie May Demory, Wilhelmina G. Dock, Essie Isabelle Duvall, Dorothy Mae Fisk, Ruth Anita Gover, Susie Margaret Hickman, Mary Margaret Holland, Margaret Hoover, Eleanor E. Miles Is Charged With Manslaughter

A charge of manslaughter was placed against Ollie Miles, 19-year-old Accokeek, Md., farm youth, last night, after a Prince Georges County coroner's jury ordered him held for the grand jury in the fatal stabbing of his neighbor, Henry Pickerel, 36.

The stabbing occurred along the roadside at Accokeek last Saturday night. Dr. John Bowers, of T. B., Md., testified the man died from loss of blood. There were knife wounds in the left arm, he said.

Woodrow Miles, Ollie's brother, who, according to the testimony of Prince Georges County Policemen Elon Turner and Edward Merson, was at the scene when they arrived, also took the stand.

He told the court, presided over by Acting Coroner Horace J. Taylor, that he saw no fight. Jimmie Jeanette, 16, who lives near the scene, said he saw Miles knock Pickerel down, but saw no knife used.

John W. Penn, 56, whom police declared was also present when they arrived, concurred with Woodrow Miles in testifying that no fight was seen. Ollie Miles was represented by State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer. The case was prosecuted by State's Attorney Alan Bowie.

D. C. Scientist To Be Awarded Harvard Honor

N. L. Bowen, of Carnegie, to Receive Degree at Fall Exercises.

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Mass., May 26.—Sixty-six of the world's most renowned scholars and scientists, 12 of them winners of Nobel Prizes, will receive honorary degrees from Harvard next fall, the university announced tonight.

The presentation, the first for which Harvard has announced names of the recipients before actual award of the degrees, will be made on September 18, the concluding day of Harvard's 300thanniversary celebration.

University officials said the presentation, to take place in a vast open-air theater in the historic Harvard yard, will be one of the most colorful and brilliant academic events in American history.

Winners of Nobel prizes to be honored include Edgar D. Adrian, physiology and medicine, England; Friedrich Bergius, chemistry, Germany; Neils Bohr, physics, Denmark; Arthur H. Compton, physics, United States; Hans Fischer, chemistry, Germany; Werner Heisneberg, physics, Germany; Sir Frederick G. Hopkins, physiology and medicine, England; August Krogh, physiology and medicine, Denmark; Karl Landsteiner, physiology and medicine, United States; Hans Spemann, physiology and medicine, Germany; the Svedberg, chemistry, Sweden, and Otto Warburg, physiology and medicine, Germany.

The following men, the university announced, would be included among those receiving degrees:

House Unit Discusses 'Marriage Clause' Bill

The House Rules Committee discussed, but failed to act yesterday upon the Celler bill to repeal the marriage clause of the economy act and to substitute a combined salary limitation for husband and wife in Government service of $4,000 a year.

A request by Chairman Ramspeck, of the House Civil Service Committee, for a special rule, will be discussed by the committee again today. President Roosevelt on Monday informed Ramspeck that he favors passage of the measure.

Woman Sues Realtors For $25,000 in Fall

Damages of $25,000 were asked of Gorin & Horning, Inc., and Joseph F. Horning, trading as the Horning Realty Co., in the District Supreme Court yesterday by Betty Crosthwait, 4612 Fourth street northwest. The complainant said she was injured while inspecting a building under the control of the defendants.

Through William E. Deering, attorney, she declared she went to a building at 5300 Second street northwest and fell on a slippery, polished floor. The suit asserts she should have been warned of the floor's condition. The incident occurred April 11.

Seven Youths Initiated By Temperance Group

Post 14 of the Allied Youth Organization, a temperance group, met in Pierce Hall of All Souls' Unitarian Church last night to initiate seven new members. Speakers at the meeting were Earl Kernahan, former field secreatry of the organization, and Hillman Harris, local Christina Endeavor worker.

Those initiated last night were Miriam Barnady, Ellen Nelson, Catherine Stevens, June Sorensen, Charles Myers, Courtney Young, jr., nad John Harries. The group is planning to hold a dance at the hall Friday evening.

Madrid Is Threatened By General Walkout

Madrid, May 26 (AP).—Threat of a general strike hung over the capital today.

Syndicalists urged a mass protest against retention of Fascists by some employers and called a strike for midnight tonight. The General Workers' Union, however, was understood to be reluctant to join unless an agreement is reached among labor groups. A number of hotels, restaurants, theaters and breweries were closed in an independent protest.

Year Of The "Locusts."

These are the big times in the insect world, as any suburban Washingtonian will testify. The "locusts" are here. Quotation marks are used because the great beetle-size bugs with ising-glass wings, whose empty shells may now be found clinging like toasted ghosts to trees and grasses, are not locusts but cicadas. It is said that the first colonists, never before having met with the insects and believing that everything of God's creation was accounted for in the Bible, concluded they were "locusts" and the name has stuck. In any case, they appear in greatest numbers at 17-year intervals and 1936 is one of their red letter years.

Seventeen years ago fruit trees in these parts were pierced by tiny saw-like instruments, which are part of the equipment of the female cicadas, and millions of eggs were deposited under the soft bark. Hatching in a month or two, grubs emerged on the branches to drop unnoticed to the earth beneath. There they burrowed down and began a dark, subterranean existence, unobtrusively sucking the juices of roots for sustenance. After 16 and a fraction of years of this life, they awoke this spring to develop into the pupa stage and, as May wore on, the forces of instinct drove them to dig their way to the surface. Today they are shedding their drab underground uniforms and stepping forth, lustrous and winged, for a brief instant of rapture.

For two weeks, more or less, they have sunlight and wings. The males elect to spend the daylight hours singing, though for what precise purpose is not clear since the females are quite deaf. They can be heard all day long—purring soft solos or making the woods ring with a strident, monotonous chorus. Unlike the common katydids, they do not rub legs or wings together to make their music, but depend on drums on each side of their abdomens which are tensed and vibrated by strong muscles. The singing is a prelude to mating. Then, eggs having been deposited, death ends the holiday. In a few weeks, with the hatching out of the new larvae, the cycle will begin again.

What manner of Washington will stand in 1953 to welcome the next generation of "locusts?"

An Expected Split.

There is no surprise in the news from Cleveland that the Socialists have been at each other's throats again. After 15 hours of wrangling, some sort of order was restored to their national convention, but only at the price of cutting off a considerable wing of the party. The redoubtable Mr. Thomas, once again nominated as his party's standard-bearer, won the day, but already there are mutterings from the defeated "old guard" on forming a new and separate Social Democratic Party. It will be interesting to follow the course of this ousted band if its members attend the "national third party conference" scheduled to meet over the week-end in Chicago.

The Socialists opened their Cleveland convention with a controversy, though of an external rather than internal sort. The first day was given over largely to a discussion of the recent moves of several labor groups indorsing Mr. Roosevelt for re-election. It was agreed that a Democratic victory this fall would not defeat "reaction."

But having tacitly decided to stand firm against President Roosevelt, the Socialists proceeded to split their own ranks, as had been foreshadowed by the recent controversy in New York State. The schism there divided those who believe socialism can yet be accomplished under the democratic system from those who are convinced that, because of sabotage from reactionaries, force may be necessary. The majority of delegates at Cleveland voted to seat representatives of this latter view.

There is ample precedent for this split in the history of socialism in Europe. In Germany, immediately after the war, the Socialist movement, divided in just such a way; in England the same incompatibility has cropped out, and in France, even today, there are almost a score of different Socialist organizations.

Where the story of socialism in the United States differs—to date, at least—is in its inability to effect any sort of compromise at election time, either within its own camp or with any other radical movement. The reason for this probably lies in the fact that the Socialists in this country have met with such small success at the polls. Having scant reason for being anything but theoretical about their politics, they have no hesitation at splitting and resplitting in their sole business of debating doctrine.

The Function Of The Court.

From the practical viewpoint, the Supreme Court's opinion invalidating the municipal bankruptcy act does not appear to be especially significant. Only a few cities and other political subdivisions took advantage of this statute to ease their debt burdens. It was clearly an emergency measure. And since the difficulties it was intended to relieve are not nearly so acute as they were when the act was passed, no great hardship is likely to result from the court's 5-4 decision.

But from the legal point of view the opinion merits careful analysis. The majority appears to have wandered somewhat afield from the specific case at issue, as indicated by the following paragraph from Justice McReynolds' opinion:

> Our special concern is with the existence of the power claimed—not merely the immediate outcome of what has already been attempted. And it is of the first importance that due attention be given to the results which might be brought about by the exercise of such a power in the future.

The majority fears that the statute in question, were it permitted to stand, might lead to an invasion of States' rights to control their own political subdivisions. Under the Constitution the taxing power of Congress does not extend to States and municipalities. "The same basic reasoning which leads to that conclusion," the majority thinks, "requires like limitation upon the power which springs from the bankruptcy clause." That viewpoint can be readily accepted. But in the present case it appears that extensive limitations had been placed upon the exercise of this power for the specific purpose of preserving the balance between national and local authority, which both opinions concede to be essential.

As the minority pointed out, political subdivisions could take advantage of the act only through voluntary petitions approved by the State. No agreement could be approved under the act unless the taxing district involved were legally authorized to "take all necessary action to carry out the plan." In this case, moreover, Texas had enacted a law for the special purpose of authorizing her subdivisions to adjust their obligations as Congress had provided. If there had been any threat of encroachment upon State powers, the State could quickly have protected itself by withdrawing its consent to proceedings under the bankruptcy act.

The chief distinction between the two opinions seems to be that the majority deals in generalities while the minority concentrates upon the facts of the case before the court. If the majority had speculated less upon what might have happened, its conclusion might have been different. No doubt it feared that if the municipal bankruptcy act should be upheld in one opinion, possible future abuses might remain uncorrected. But that is a very broad assumption which does not seem to be in keeping with the court's traditional conception of its own proper function.

In many instances the court has pointed out that it tries cases and not statutes. From this viewpoint the invalidation of an act of Congress is merely incidental to the application of a higher law—the Constitution—to the particular case at bar. Only through maintenance of that essentially sound attitude can the court hope to retain its present high position in the American scheme of government. When the court reaches beyond the immediate issue at stake, and strikes down a statute believed to be potentially unconstitutional, it is treading on dangerous ground.

A Question Of Timing.

Arguments for and against retention of the "marriage clause" of the 1932 economy act are heard again as efforts are renewed to bring the Celler bill to vote before Congress adjourns. The Celler bill would repeal the clause.

Proponents of the bill, including many Washingtonians now without Government jobs because the clause forbids Federal employment of more than one person in a family, maintain that the emergency which brought the clause into being has now passed. Thousands of other Washingtonians today seeking new Government positions, after having been thrown out of agencies found to be unconstitutional, reply by pointing to their own unemployment as proof that one emergency still exists.

It is a difficult problem. Impartial observers find the scales almost evenly hung. Against the clause is the fact that it interferes to a certain extent with the merit system, that it breaks up families, and leads to some cases of flagrant discrimination. To exclude job applicants simply for the reason that they have a husband or wife in the Government service is to establish an unfortunate precedent tending toward lower standards in the appointment of civil servants. Moreover, there is slight doubt that the law has worked appreciable hardships on some families, particularly those in the low income brackets. On the other hand, the law was conceived and passed as a device to spread work. In times of wide unemployment, this is a very real consideration.

Ultimately, without a doubt, the "marriage clause" should be repealed. The question is, "when?" It is on this point that the House committee, in postponing action on the appeal for a special rule, must be deadlocked. The issue might well be decided by determining whether or not the employment emergency has passed.

Disturbances In Palestine.

It is a curious fact that in contrast to the recent flare-up of nationalist passions in the adjoining countries of Syria and Egypt, where economic distress intensified the opposition of the people to the control exercised by an alien power, the depression has played no part in bringing on the present state of turmoil in Palestine. The fact of the matter is that Palestine during recent years has had no depression.

Almost alone of any country in the world the Holy Land has been enjoying a large measure of prosperity. Industry and agriculture have flourished there as never before; the Jordan has been harnessed to produce electric power; the Dead Sea has been made to give up its rich deposits of chemicals; foreign trade has expanded by leaps and bounds.

During these years, while all the rest of the world has been grappling with serious unemployment problems and unbalanced budgets, Palestine has had a labor shortage and a treasury surplus. It has in consequence been able to absorb with ease large numbers of refugees from Nazi Germany, Poland and other regions where the Jews find themselves faced by a hopeless situation.

In this prosperity, the result in very large measure of the influx of Jewish capital, labor and skill, Arabs have shared with Jews. Yet, paradoxically, the great economic upsurge of the Holy Land instead of improving the relations between Jew and Arab may be at the bottom of the present turmoil which bids fair to plunge the country into an orgy of bloodletting.

For, while the modernization of Palestine has greatly improved the lot of the Arab fellahin and the Arab worker by making that land a more healthful, cleaner, happier place to live in, by permitting them to enjoy a higher standard of living than was possible in the past, it has also tended to undermine the power of the Arab ruling class.

The effendi have viewed with ill-concealed dislike the rapid westernization of Palestine with the improved labor conditions and the rising wage level it has brought in its wake. These changes foreshadow a potential if not actual weakening of their economic power and the possibility that their political power as feudal overlords will disappear. No wonder, then, that they have invoked to their aid the blind forces of nationalism and religious fanaticism. With the percentage of Jews to the total population rising, with the pace of modernization increasing, their alarm has grown.

It is not surprising that they chose the present moment to demand suspension of Jewish immigration, although that would be contrary to the pledge given by Great Britain to the Jews in the Balfour declaration.

In Syria Nationalist pressure has recently resulted in substantial concessions from the French. In Egypt Great Britain has been faced by growing opposition from the victorious Wafd, the Egyptian Nationalist Party. The victory of Italy in Ethiopia has been a serious blow to British prestige. The Arab leaders have gambled on the possibility that in its present weakness Great Britain might be forced to give way to their demands and modify its policies in line with Arab Nationalist demands.

But thus far the British reply has been to increase the Jewish immigrant quota and call out additional troops to preserve order. More than a challenge to the Jews, the Arab uprising in Palestine is a challenge to the mandatory power. It is incumbent upon it to keep the balance between the various elements in Palestine. Despite the present disturbances it is to be hoped that a modus vivendi between them can be established. Only through the cooperation of Jew and Arab can Palestine go forward.

The Military Prophet.

Maj. John H. Burns in The Cavalry Journal.

Military history has failed in its sole function. All the information on the subject of past wars has not even enabled us to predict the problems of future wars, let alone suggest solutions for them. . . .

You may say that we are asking too much of the military historian. But are we? The tactical pattern of the World War was clearly discerned by one man, and he not a soldier. In 1897, Monsieur Bloch, a Pole whom the soldiers thought mad, saw with clairvoyant eye the stalemate, the trenches, the slaughter, and the stabilization. This man was a banker and a pacifist; but had any one of the great powers based the organization of its pre-war force on his conception, that power would be master of Europe today.

If a civilian can do it, why not a soldier? . . . The major reason lies in the fact that military historians have confined themselves narrowly to the study of bodies of troops in battle and campaign. They restrict their investigation to the physical details of battle—the geometric pattern of war—and ignore its psychological implications. They fail to see that even if the battle pattern could be reconstructed to the last physical detail, any conclusions drawn from it would be incorrect, because moral factors were not considered.

Change Of Front.

Dr. Isaac Goldberg in The Gilbert & Sullivan Quarterly.

A favorite bill used to be "Pinafore" followed by "Cavalleria Rusticana." Once, attending a performance with a friend who was not destined to become a music-lover (he grew up to be an architect) I noticed that he had fallen asleep during the intermission. I allowed him to pursue his slumbers.

He was awakened by one of the opening choruses of Mascagni's piece. He rubbed his eyes, and looked for help toward me:

"That's funny," he yawned. "What sort of opera is this? What became of that ship and those sailors? And what are these cousins and aunts doing in this church?"

Refusals To Salute.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is unpleasant to one reader to learn that the heroic American Legion is up in arms over the Oxon Hill, Md., flag case. The legion assumes that one cannot express a love of country without the mechanics of saluting; likewise, it can be assumed that one cannot really pray without genuflection—which is clearly false.

The one question in my mind, is inspired by a civic consciousness: Is this Lutke family indecent or unmoral? I believe that if this condition were true, the facts would be emphasized by the news services; the omission of these declarations induces a belief that there is nothing strange about this family; that its members are undoubtedly good citizens. Surely, if there is a better test for patriotism than good citizenship, I should like to be informed of it—perhaps the legionnaires would, too.

These soldier worthies in prating of their Americanism remind me of so many Pharisees. The freedom of worship, as given to the American people through constitutional government, is an unqualified freedom.

I suggest that the Lutkes be forgotten, or else the legion will demonstrate how easy it is to behave like a bunch of prize boobs.

S. L. WECHSTER.

Washington, May 25.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This writer hopes the Civil Liberties Union will take up the right of the Lutke children and their parents and defend their liberty to salute, or not salute, the American flag. With most people it is nothing but a slavish habit to appear 100 per cent in the eyes of others.

This writer has no sympathy with the superstitions of Jehovah's Witnesses or any other religious cult, but he does respect the right of any person to be true to his conscience and not play the coward or hypocrite. EDWIN EVANS.

Cycling Advice.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I witnessed recently two falls on the part of cyclists, and will point out the cause and remedy—both falls occurred in about 20 minutes.

First, because of the narrowness of the walk, cyclists had better ride single file and should never speed. The "speedway" is where the autos run.

The cause was that riding double, one dropped back just enough so that when the maintenance of the balance required it the guide wheel of the second machine couldn't turn without striking the rear wheel of the bicycle. It is apparent that when riding single file there ought never to be less than a wheel's length between the two bicycles, and that only when the view ahead is clear and there is no traffic. A full bicycle's length would be better.

District Unemployment.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With its usual disregard for facts and in order to defend the wholesale lay-offs that are taking place, and in view of the fact that there is no longer any relief available for the employables, the District WPA office recently released figures to the press tending to show that private industry is taking up the slack and hence those being laid off will not face starvation.

The latest published figures of the Bureau of Labor Statistics show, however, that this is far from being the actual case. Employment in the District, according to the bureau's Monthly Labor Review for April, 1936, showed a declien of 8 per cent from the previous month. At the same time, the combined active file of those seeking employment through the District office of the United States Employment Service and the District reemployment office showed an increase of 2,848 registrations, making a total active file of 48,807 people seeking employment in the District.

The release further carried a statement to the effect that there were 11,964 persons at work in the WPA here, including those assigned to Federal departments, but omitted to state what proportion of the total number were non-relief and whether or not the 2,000 or so WPA administrative employes were included in that figure.

The present juggling of employment statistics would appear to resemble the action of the Hoover Administration, which took the bread lines off the streets and put them into alleys.

Correction.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Unfortunately, in your printing of my letter in The Post of May 25, your compositor used the word "selfishness," as applied to Congressman David J. Lewis, instead of "selflessness," which was the word I used.

This of course changes the meaning of the sentence. I should greatly appreciate the courtesy if you will print this correction, as it would be very unfair to Mr. Lewis to charge him with being a selfish legislator. His record proves that he is an unselfish and self-sacrificing public servant.

Washington's Negroes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The glowing tributes in the press of May 19, paid to Paul Robeson, the actor in "Show Boat," in the recent screen production, suggests that few Washingtonians are aware of much of the entertaining talent contributed to the world by native Washington Negroes.

How many Washingtonians know that "Duke" Ellington is an Armstrong High School boy? His fame in international. Claude Hopkins, of Alexandria and our Washington schools, is equally renowned for musical productions. Turner Layton, son of a former director of local public school music, is famous in the music halls of London and on the continent of Europe for his written compositions.

There have been many nationally known Negroes in other artistic performances who are native Washingtonians, and who are not without recognized honor save right here where they lived and developed. Alabamans claim with pride Joe Louis, Jesse Owens and Eulace Peacock. Rutgers College, where Paul Robeson won four varsity letters, the Phi Beta Kappa key, national oratorical honors, and an all-American football berth, claims Paul with honor, although American conventions have recently made him prefer living in the artistic circles of Moscow.

Why cannot Washington, regardless of race, color or creed, acclaim in some public way the exploits of its colored artists who frequently are honored by royalty and democracies elsewhere?

Trades Unionism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Freedom of contract, as exemplified in the "open shop" is supposed to enable the individual worker to accept or reject a job. Actually, however, the individual or open-shop worker has to accept the terms offered or face the bitter consequence.

Under the system of unrestricted freedom of competition that has prevailed in the past, labor has been reduced to the status of a commodity subject to the fluctuations of the so-called law of supply and demand between the corporation—or even the individual employer—and the individual worker, there is no real freedom of contract. As against the isolated worker, the employer or corporation is a collective person who has a powerful ally in hunger and want. Unless the worker forms an alliance equally strong—one composed of himself and his fellow workers—his formal rights to free bargaining becomes an illusion. Left to individual bargaining, the worker is at the mercy of capital. To actually obtain fair and reasonable terms, he must reply on collective bargaining.

This is the philosophy and historic background of trades unionism. It is something that has been hammered into the consciousness of veteran trade unionists as a result of bitter experience, but will bear re-emphasis at this time to those not fully realizing at what cost these advantages were obtained and with what constant effort they were sustained. Trades unionism and collective bargaining have been born of stern necessity and calls for constant vigilance and militancy if we are to maintain our much boasted American standard of living.

Insurance Wording.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The writer was delighted to read that Representative Cannon has proposed the passage of a bill in Congress whereby insurance companies will be compelled to recognize just claims.

There are many persons, I for one, who have been cheated in this way but unfortunately nothing could be done about the matter.

The companies invariably try to make it appear that the policyholders do not understand the wording of their contracts, however simply worded they may be. If this be true, then the insured have a right to demand that the insurance companies change their policies to read in such way that they cannot possibly be misinterpreted.

It is sincerely hoped that the bill mentioned 'may be passed during this session of the Congress.

More Arguments In Orchestra Debate

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The attitude of Mr. Richard E. Adlof, jr., toward the National Symphony Orchestra in his letter to The Post of May 18 is surprising.

It seems rather that it is the union, which has taken "the dog in the manger" attitude. The union prefers to lose 80 jobs for its members and to see a good orchestra, which has made an excellent record and rendered inestimable services to the community, close down rather than to allow a few persons from a different city who are better qualified and whose places cannot be taken by local musicians to participate in the benefits.

For five years, local artists have had the opportunity to fill these gaps, but have failed. Certainly, if the orchestra is to progress these places must be filled, and in the failure of local talent, it is only reasonable to allow talent to be imported rather than to see the whole enterprise fail.

Concerning wages, it is well recognized that the salaries of the musicians comprise the principal expense of a symphony orchestra. During the five years of its existence, the National Symphony Orchestra has been supported by the contributions of its sympathizers. Instead of decreasing as the orchestra gained a foothold, the deficits beginning with $30,000 have steadily increased each year until the sum needed this year has reached $100,000. From this, it is evident that the orchestra is paying its musicians amply, if not too much.

A man, whether of the union or not, cannot expect to be paid more than he is worth. If he wishes more, the union musician should earn more. Even charity must be limited, and one cannot expect the patrons who have already been so generous to dig down further into their pockets.

DONALD DOWNS.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now that Mr. Shure has spoken his little piece I would like to see a little fairplay.

Mr. Bunchuk was not imported to conduct. He was here when the National Symphony's board of directors had decided on no summer concerts.

The performance Mr. Shure speaks of in reference to Harold Bauer, I take it, was the "Ravel Concerto." We have very capable harpists here who can play that part.

Mr. Shure's humble opinion of conductors is rather humble. Did he ever hear of Stowkowski and the greatest we ever will have, Toscanini? JACK DELANEY.

The Post Impressionist

Anecdotal Diarist.

Post Office, Wednesday.

WHEN John Bailey was a candidate for the chair of poetry at Oxford, he wrote to a partisan:

"Of course, it's absurd enough that there should be any question of my sitting in M. Arnold's seat, and I should be horribly frightened at exposing my unlearning. But it is very unlikely, as . . . few have heard of me. A friend of mine canvassing Oriel Common Room was naturally met by 'Who is John Bailey?'"

That was a baker's dozen of years ago—and the candidacy was indeed unsuccessful. Though England—at least, literary England—came to know who John Bailey was, America remains rather unaware of him. The publication of his "Letters and Diaries" hasn't changed all this: the work, published in London, has had, so far as we are aware, no edition in the United States, though Paul Elmer More does a great deal for it through an appreciation in the American Review.

* * *

After all, by far the larger portion of Bailey's writing was anonymous. His little books on Milton and Johnson had some sale, but it was through his essays in the Literary Supplement of the London Times that he best expressed himself—and these, if you please, were never signed.

Besides, he was an apostle of centrality, an enemy of extremes, in a day—not yet ended—when the surest method to catch the popular ear was writing at the top of the voice. There is this entry in one of the early diaries, concerning himself and Bruce Richmond, editor of that London Times Supplement:

"Much pleased with a letter from Bruce, who . . . wants to know how I manage to be interesting and yet 'keep to the middle of the road.' It is just the praise that pleases me. The thing is to make the true seem new, not to make the new seem true."

Dr. More's comment suffices:

"Mr. Bailey had his reward; but sobriety is not the path to noisy renown."

Nevertheless, this anonymous critic knew and was loved by scores of worthwhile people, and into his diaries he puts some of the best things said to him, or in his presence by the best of them.

* * *

There, for instance, is Balfour, diplomat, scholar and gentleman. Can you imagine him at the same table with "horrid creature" hack Harris—Frank Harris? Well, such a juxtoposition did occur, although once only.

Its record, you may be certain, doesn't escape the eye of Dr. More. Indeed, his version of the tale improves on Bailey's.

"It was," says he, "at a dinner of grave statesmen. Harris was straining to draw attention to himself, as such creatures do, and finally shouted:

"'The great curses of modern life are Christianity and journalism!'

"There was silence; and then Balfour, the Christian, quietly:

"'Christianity of course—but why journalism!'

"Harris was quite extinguished."

Herbert Paul was one of Bailey's friends, and Bailey shows that that generally gentle soul could adequately defend itself, when the need arose. Paul was fellow-guest at a house-party with a man whose one enthusiasm centered upon machinery.

Nobody could stop his talk until Paul, in one brief pause, sighed:

"Thank God I was educated at Eaton and Oxford, and have no idea why the water comes out of the pump!"

Well, there was the Oxford fellow, away back in the last century, who happened to let fall the statement that he had been presented to Napoleon I.

"What," asked the less lucky dons, "did you think of him?"

"Oh," came the unimpressed reply, "you could see he was not a university man."

It's no long stride, psychologically, from Napoleon to Bismarck. Bailey writes that Lady Amphill told him how, showing her his study, the Iron Chancellor waved a hand toward its walls:

"You see," he said, "I have not got many pictures here. There are only three—my wife, my king and my friend."

That friend was Disraeli.

"John Bailey, Letters and Diaries, 1864-1931," paints a worthy picture of a literary critic who deserves more of his fellows than his fellows are ever likely to give him. However, and apart from that, for the sake of its anecdotes of other people, this columnist recommends the book to American publishers—and so to the American public.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Pullmans And Derbies.

There has been considerable excitement in the papers over the feat of a little gelding named Rushaway, which won the so-called Illinois Derby, at Aurora, Ill., just outside Chicago, Friday afternoon and won another so-called Derby at Latonia, Ky., just outside Cincinnati, 24 hours later. Rushaway cooled out nicely, as the professional phrase goes, shipped well overnight—a distance of 300 miles—and arrived fresh and ready to run.

A. G. Tarn, the owner and trainer of Rushaway, reports that his steed lay down and slept—unusual conduct in a horse riding the cars. But not to deny the little critter any credit which is legitimately due him, it might be pointed out that he did not have to remove his pants and underwear and climb into his pajamas behind a curtain in his car and sleep on a shelf during his 300-mile journey. Neither did he have to haul on his lingerie and trousers again in the morning while lying on his back behind a curtain and maintaining due care not to crack his skull against the upper berth.

The cars in which they ship the racing hides to keep their dates are much more conveniently arranged than the Pullmans, and the privacy provided for the horse makes for better repose and closer knitting of the raveled sleeve of care.

• • • •

Horses do not wear suspenders, and they are prey to neither modesty nor self-consciousness. They do not have false teeth, toupees or trusses to embarrass them in the presence of their fellow passengers, and if a horse wants a face full of water in the middle of the night he need need not fumble around in the little hammock to find his bathrobe and grope under the berth for his slippers in which to walk to the cooler. He just waves his tongue a couple of licks, and his caddy comes a-running with the bucket and sponge to wipe down his lips and ooze a gentle splash into his neck. He hardly wakes up, unless he has something on his conscience or some business worry.

I doubt very much that Rushaway would have been as fresh at Latonia if he had to perform the acrobatic feat of pantsing himself in the morning, snapping his suspenders over his shoulders, shoving his shirt into his trousers and adjusting his buttons, at the same time maintaining his privacy and nonchalance.

This is the ordeal which makes traveling drummers old before their time.

The Pullman Co. offers nowadays an accommodation known as the single room, but having made the offer almost invariably withdraws it. The single room is something on the style of the old-time first-class cabin of the American Line steamships, containing all the comforts and the privacy of a hotel room within the capsule walls of a telephone booth. But they never have any single rooms left because there is so little demand for single rooms that they cannot meet the demand. Invariably they could sell a dozen more single rooms if they could get them, but the rooms are not available because it is impossible to sell them.

The story goes 'round and 'round and comes out nowhere, and the customers are then invited to pay the Pullman Co. a bribe of $2.75 to refrain from pulling down the upper shelf and shutting out the ventilation and cramping the compass of the lower berth. If you don't pay the $2.75 the unfortunate porter pulls down the shelf, on which you will bust your skull if you don't take care.

And the unfortunate customer gets so sore that he determines to get even with the Pullman Co. by cheating the unfortunate porter out of his tip, which he wouldn't need if the Pullman Co. would pay its own help their honest wages for their honest work instead of appealing to the generosity of the customers. And, of course, any company which refuses to pay its employes honest wages and puts them on the generosity of the public is in no position to appeal to the public generosity. And so, again, the story goes 'round and 'round and comes out at this point.

And the point is that the little horse Rushaway, winning two nominal Derbys in 24 hours with a sleeper-jump in between, has nothing on Paavo Nurmi, the fish-eating Finn who came to this country in 1923, broke an old world record for the mile on his first night ashore, broke another world record in Chicago the next night and broke a third one back in New York the third night of his American visit.

Derby has become a cheap name for horse races in the United States. Any broad jump for a stake of $10 and a collar of carnations presented by some politicians more than half soused on mint juleps is a Derby in America. The accounts of the Latonia Derby exclaimed that not even in England could they match the record of the little gelding which won two Derbys in 24 hours. That is quite true. In England, Derbys happens once a year.

Heimwehr's Plans Are Kept Secret

Vienna, May 26 (AP).—Prince Ernst von Starhemberg's dissatisfied Heimwehr kept its plans secret tonight after a meeting at which members of the private army were addressed by their leader.

However, one Heimwehr officer said: "Austria must decide whether it is to say 'Heil Starhemberg' or 'Heil Hitler.'"

Starhemberg recently was ousted from the government by Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg, and there has been Heimwehr talk since that the administration was veering toward a rapprochement with Germany.

The Heimwehr, it was reported after the session, agreed to support Von Starhemberg "100 per cent."

Der Fuehrer's 'Unity'

Former Berlin Correspondent Amplifies Hitler's Boast Of A Contented Germany With Figures On Imprisonments.

Mr. Bouton was for many years a correspondent for American newspapers in Berlin. Expelled from the Reich by the Hitler regime in 1934, he is now in this country writing a book based on his experiences in post-war Germany.

By S. Miles Bouton.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

SPEAKING to a world which he obviously believes to be as ignorant of what is happening in his Third Reich as are the masses of the German people themselves, to a world which he also obviously regards as incapable of drawing conclusions from those happenings, Adolf Hitler continues to boast of the "unity" of the German people. Only a trifle more than 1 per cent of them, he and his followers point out, voted against Nazi rule at the last "election." There is, it would seem, no opposition to him.

It would be natural to conclude that in such idyllic circumstances there can be little work for the police and the courts, for the Germans are a notably law-abiding people. But either this conclusion is wrong or Herr Hitler is wrong, for prosecutions and punishments of political opponents have reached proportions that are appalling. A comparison with former regimes in Germany casts a devastating light on the "unity" of this tragic land.

In 1879 Bismarck succeeded in getting his Ausnahmegesetz, or special law against the Socialists, enacted. It expired by limitation ten years later. In those ten years, 1,560 members of the party were sentenced to a total of roundly 1,000 years' imprisonment, or an average of 8 months per person. All but a few of the offenders escaped hard labor.

In the following 20 years (1890-1910) total sentences of 1,238 years' imprisonment were imposed on the Socialist opposition, of which only 111 years were at hard labor. This made an average of about 60 years' imprisonment in each year of the period. In 1912 the Socialists became the strongest party in the Reichstag, and no prosecutions of any importance were recorded until Hitler came to power.

Political Opponents Feel Nazis' Retaliation.

INCOMPLETE statistics for the three years of his rule in a "united" Germany make a different picture. They show sentences of 3,553 years Zuchthaus (hard labor) and 2,092 years Gefaengnis (penitentiary) for 1933, a total of 5,654 years' imprisonment, and 5,662 years at hard labor and 3,957 penitentiary, a total of 9,619 years, for 1934. For 1935 the number of persons sentenced is also available. They numbered 4,541, and were sentenced to 8,773 years at hard labor and 3,320 years penitentiary, a total of 12,093 years. This makes two years and eight months on the average per person, all but a negligible number of them political opponents, imprisoned merely for their opinions.

More graphicaly put: Ten years of the anti-Socialist law under Bismarck brought 1,000 years of imprisonment; three years under Hitler brought over 28,000 years. Under Kaiser William hardly one year in ten of imprisonment was at hard labor; under Hitler it is more than one in two.

Nor do these figures include the tens of thousands thrown into concentration camps. They are outside the jurisdiction of any court, subject only to the will of the Gestapo, the secret political police. In an unguarded moment the Nazi government permitted the number of such unfortunates to be known for the year, June 30, 1933, to June 30, 1934. It was somewhat more than 49,000—and these figures are almost certainly false; the actual number was much greater. The total number of political prisoners today is estimated at around 115,000.

Hamburg Particularly Noted For Terrorism.

SOME individual cities in this "united" Germany have a fearsome record, among them Hamburg. In 1933, 1934 and 1935, 16 anti-Hitlerites were executed by beheading, and more than 1,500 years of imprisonment, with negligible exceptions, at hard labor, were imposed. An incomplete list contains, furthermore, the names of 51 opponents of the regime who were murdered either on the street, in prisons or concentration camps.

Prosecutions for "treason," the regular accusation made against Socialists, Communists and pacifists, keep the courts busy. As many as 600 defendants have been involved in single processes of this kind. Last December saw a prosecution of this kind in the Wuppertal district. Maitre Nogueres, a lawyer, was sent by the Confederation Generale de Travail to investigate the situation. He reported:

"I can declare, on the basis of absolutely irrefutable information, that the Wuppertal and accompanying prosecutions were based solely on conflicts dealing with working and wage conditions."

For months a wave of arrests of political opponents has been sweeping through Germany, especially the northwest and Saxony, the latter the former "Red Kingdom," which sent 1 non-Socialist and 22 Socialist deputies to the Reichstag in 1912. More than 500 men and women were arrested in the rural sections of Saxony at the end of March. More than 100 workmen were arrested in the Siemens factory in Berlin in connection with passive resistance to the introducing of monthly instead of weekly payments. Forty workmen suffered the same fate on the grounds of the military aviation academy in Kladow, near Berlin, for protesting against a reduction of wages. Reports of other arrests—and hundreds of these are never made known—justify estimates of a total as high as 7,000 in March of this year.

Few Germans Dare To Protest Injustices.

ONE DOES not have to be a psychologist to know what 28,000 years of imprisonment mean; what the imprisoning of tens of thousands of men (and women), the tourturing of thousands of others, the "shootings while trying to escape," and the memory of the hundreds slain in the bloody purge of June 30, 1934, mean. Knowing that their opposition would mean for them in the best case imprisonment, in the worst case death, it is obvious that by far the greater part of the opponents of Hitlerism have taken to the sanctuary of silence and obedience. In no country does more than a tiny fraction of the people court martyrdom, and the fraction is still smaller in regimented Germany.

It is not only arrests and prosecutions that cast a light on Hitler's "unity." Every week brings incidents, unimportant in themselves, perhaps, but in the aggregate significant. Here is an official circular order from the district head of the German Labor Front, the Nazi "labor union," in Kiel:

"Urgent reasons compel us to call attention to the fact that no comradeship evenings may be held hereafter without the approval of the district leadership of the National Socialist 'Strength Through Joy" movement. It has frequently happened that comradeship evenings were held in a form which showed an entire absence of all National Socialist principles."

Women standing in front of the shop of a butter dealer in the Invalidenstrasse, Berlin, complain to the policeman on duty about the shortage of butter, and ask how long such a state of affairs is to continue.

"You asked for it," says the policeman. He is arrested by four Black Shirts.

War May Be Salvation Of Imprisoned Thousands.

BARRING two miracles, neither of which seems likely to happen, war in Europe is inevitable. Dark as the outlook is, however, there is foundation for hope in the facts and figures given above. War has been many times the father of revolutions. Even those observers who knew Germany well did not predict or even regard as possible the overthrow of November, 1918. But it came—and history can well repeat itself.

Off the Record.

Foreign Parts

This being my next-to-last column as book editor of The Post, I am in a heady mood. As the genial Post-Impressionist at the next desk put it, using the fine old Pennsylvania Dutch phrase, "You must be journey-glad already!" I am. True, the foreign parts to which I am going are about as foreign as a buckeye tree, but that, as any save the map-hog traveler will understand, suffices. The next street, the next county, the mind of a new friend, the job of the man next door—all these can be foreign parts, with their peculiar gift of sheer stingo.

• • • •

Take a Southerner, for example, who has never seen the country north of Fredericksburg, Va.—as I have never been south of that point. Consider the entrancing alienity he would find in Eleanor Early's small but complete guide, "And This Is Cape Cod!" (Houghton Mifflin, $1.50).

Whaling ships and bayberry candles, Sandwich glass and tea-caddies brought home from Canton, quahaugs and baked cod, sand dunes and bright sea and gulls, the intelligentsia at Provincetown and the Portygee fishermen and cranberry pickers at Falmouth, and in between the grand folk of whom Joseph Lincoln wrote so often without running dry. There's the cape in three lines. But you must let the indefatigable Miss Early do it justice, with her careful eye and her fine hand at turning an anecdote or a tale.

The one I liked best was about John Young, a boatswain out of Truro, who went whaling (this was more than a century ago) and deserted his ship in the South Seas. But instead of becoming a beachcomber he became the favorite son-in-law of Kamehameha I, first King of the Hawaiian Islands. When missionaries arrived, pretty astonished to find a Cape Codder so well settled before them, it was Young who helped them persuade the Hawaiian women to wear long "Mother Hubbards" called holokus—and bad cess to him for that stupidity! But also, when Kamehameha died, it was Young who dissuaded the native chiefs from eating his heart and brain to gain his virtues. And long years afterward a little Hawaiian girl was brought back to school at Chatham, Cape Cod, and, as Miss Early says, "hardly anyone knew that one of her great-grandfathers was a cannibal king, and the other a Yankee boatswain."

A nice yarn, but it maligns the kanakas. They were never cannibals, Miss Early. The symbolic eating of human flesh is something else again.

For obvious foreign parts scarcely three days' drive from us here, there is nothing to compare with the Gaspe peninsula. It looks, feels, smells, and sounds like a foreign land. In "Gaspe the Romantique" (Crowell, $2), Olive Willett Smith takes us on the peripheral tour by the Perron Highway, telling us (she is a Gaspesian herself) all the stories of local history, pointing out spots we would never otherwise see, entertaining us with the full flavor of that charming peninsula.

I wish I'd had the book before I came back from the Gaspe last summer with little more than three French-Canadian words, a curious idea of French-Canadian breakfasts, and a transmission full of belabored gears. But for anyone thinking of visiting one of the last remnants of a distinctive and unspoiled countryside in the East, let me recommend Mrs. Smith's work. The photographs alone, if you haven't considered a Gaspe tour, will set your imagination bubbling.

Upstream from Matapedia, in the Gaspe, is Restigouche—an Indian reservation of the Micmac tribe, settled in 1620 and still the home for 600 Micmacs. Published there is one of the oddest papers in the world, printed amazingly in the picturesque hieroglyphics of the Melicite language which the Micmacs use.

And that is the sole alphabet I know of which I can't find in the "Manual of Foreign Languages" (Government Printing Office, $1.25). Arabic, Chinese, Georgic, Hebrew, Javanese, Glagolitsa, Gaelic, and even the incalculable ligatures in Greek and Latin—they are all here. That redoubtable scholar, George F. von Ostermann, the foreign language editor of the G. P. O., has even enlarged this third edition by the addition of a whole new section on African languages, as well as by more material in grammar and vocabulary under the languages already included.

If you don't know one of the most fascinating books which the Government issues—and it is the only copyrighted book from that source—you have a very curious experience ahead. To be sure, it is a little baffling as straight reading. A long while ago, for example, I compiled a small glossary of Swahili words from the African novels of Stewart Edward White. Now, with the help of page 335, I will be able to pronounce them glibly. You can never tell whom you are likely to meet in Ohio.

Pilot, 2 Passengers Escape Plane Blaze

Chicago, May 26 (AP).—The pilot and two passengers on an American Airlines plane escaped without injury today when the ship caught fire as it took off from Municipal Airport and was quickly brought to a safe landing before the blaze disabled it.

The plane, a Stinson, valued at $15,000 by company officials, was consumed by the fire in the center of the big southwest side landing field.

Pilot Ed Coates, of Chicago, reported that he noticed smoke coming from the baggage compartment after he had attained an altitude of 500 feet as he took off for Detroit on his regular run.

Recognizing the possibility of serious trouble, he circled the field to a safe landing spot and called to the two passengers to jump out as he throttled the taxiing ship to a stop.

The others, W. T. Carnegie, of Chicago, an employe of the company, and R. A. Altalo, of Detroit, jumped safely and were not injured.

Bonus Delivery Pointers Given D. C. Veterans

Recipients of Bonds Urged to Be at Home When Postman Calls.

Veterans, get acquainted with your postman.

That's the advice Postmaster Vincent C. Burke urged veterans' leaders yesterday to relay to Washington's former soldiers who want to get their adjusted service bonds—to be issued June 15.

It will be necessary for every veteran receiving a bonus bond to be identified by the letter carrier before the registered letter containing the certificate can be delivered, the postmaster said.

To expedite delivery, the 400 letter carriers in Washington will make a special night run over their regular routes June 15 or 16, Burke said.

"We think this will be the best time to find the men at home, and we are asking the men who have applied for bonds to be home and to have some way to make their identity known to the letter carrier," the postmaster said.

Relatively few postmen become acquainted with the men on their routes, Burke pointed out. If their wives know the carriers they can identify their husbands; if not, the veteran must have another witness.

27,000 in District.

The Treasury Department reported it was working day and night to have the bonds ready. There are 27,000 veterans in the District, but all of them have not applied for the bonds.

In the conference with Burke were J. H. Collier, Postoffice inspector; C. E. Schooley, superintendent of mails; Joseph J. Malloy, department commander, American Legion; Earl G. Hendrick, rehabilitation representative, District of Columbia Department of Disabled American Veterans; Thomas Kirby, national legislative chairman, D. A. V.; F. M. Sullivan, secretary of the national legislative committee, American Legion; Edward K. Inman, department commander, Veterans of Foreign Wars; Theodore Lindstrom, rehabilitation chairman, D. A. V., and Samuel Rose, Veterans' Administration.

Able Drama Critic

By William Lyon Phelps

The death of Percy Hammond on April 26 removed one of the ablest drama critics in America. He was born in Cadiz, Ohio, in 1873; thus he was 63 years old at the time of his death. The age of 63 has for many centuries been known as the grand climacteric, and regarded—superstitiously rather than rationally—as a most dangerous year. The superstition is that every multiple of seven is periolous in a man's life; seven times seven, the age of 49, the most dangerous up to that point; but the most dangerous of all is 9 times 7, the age of 63, known as the grand climacteric.

Mr. Hammond always loved the theater; when he was 15, he ran away to Pittsburgh and sold papers in order to buy tickets for plays.

Later he became first-string drama critic in Chicago, where his reviews gave him an enviable reputation throughout the Middle West.

He was invited to New York in 1921; and during tese last 15 years of his life his reputation steadily rose. He was not only an able drama critic, he was a literary artist. He loved words for their own sake, and took delight in playing with them.

As a critic he was fearless, honest and often brilliant. He had a style all his own.

I had the honor of knowing him well, and I admired him immensely. The death of his wife last autumn was such a terrible blow to him that I feared he would not long survive her.

Queen Mary Marks Her 69th Birthday

London, May 26 (AP).—Servants of Buckingham Palace raised glasses of champagne to toast the health today of their mistress, widowed Queen Mary, upon the occasion of her sixty-ninth birthday.

The day, an active one for royalty, coincided with the second levee of King Edward's four months' reign.

Britain's bachelor ruler made his first state drive through the capital since his accession. Seated in a golden coach, he was drawn by four horses from Buckingham Palace to St. James's Palace, where he held the levee in the vast throne room.

Crowds lined the streets for a glimpse of him, disdainful of cold weather. Red-plumed Horse Guards escorted the monarch.

37 Are Drowned In Sea Tragedies

London, May 26 (AP).—Tragedy struck today at a ferryboat filled with gay children and at a fogbound fishing vessel in the North Sea, with a toll of 37 dead.

The ferry, carrying picnickers across the Thaya River near Auspitz, Czechoslovakia, capsized as the laughing children crowded the deck, waving to their friends on shore. Thirty children and a man were drowned; 9 were saved.

Shoreline watchers saw the ferry tip, heard the children scream and saw them slide into the water. A rearing horse, still hitched to its coach, tumbled onto the victims.

In the North Sea, six fishermen lost their lives when the steam trawler Picador collided with the tanker San Salvador and foundered within three minutes. Fourteen other Picador crewmen were rescued by the San Salvador.

Still Hell Bent

Chapter 4.

"Because We Planned It That Way."

Having seen how impossible and absurd it is to try to fasten the depression upon any one man, or group of men, or political party, let us see whether it is equally absurd to give the credit for getting out of a depression to any one man, or group of men, or political party.

When Mr. Roosevelt returned from one of his fishing trips in Southern waters not so long ago, he made it quite clear what he thought about this matter. He said:

"Yes, wear e on the way back—not by mere chance. Not by a turn of the cycle. We are coming back more soundly than ever before because we planned it that way, and don't let anybody tell you differentl."

It is perhaps not surprising that, if Mr. Roosevelt can make himself believe that Mr. Hoover made the depression, he should also be able to make himself believe that he himself has caused the recovery.

The important thing, however, is not what he can make himself believe, but what he can make a majority of the people believe.

It would be possible here to produce a great mass of statistical material to show that the bottom of the world depression was actually reached in the summer of 1932; that recovery in other countries has been more rapid than recovery here; and that we, the richest country in the world, today are lagging behind other countries which have managed to recover without any New Deal.

But I do not believe that most of us care much for such statistical demonstrations.

And so it would be futile, I think, to attempt to show the empty arrogance of Mr. Roosevelt's assertion by arraying the facts and figures against him.

Fortunately there is a much simpler way.

But let me first eliminate one possible source of misunderstanding before I embark upon it. I do not intend to convince you that Mr. Roosevelt has done nothing to promote recovery; he has done quite a few things. To deny them would be as unfair and as foolish as the attempt made to saddle Mr. Hoover with the depression.

Recovery Natural, Not Result of Plan.

But I do intend to convince you, if I can, that when Mr. Roosevelt says that recovery has come about, not from natural causes, but because "he planned it that way," he gives evidence of a slight confusion between the functionings of the chief executive of one country—no matter how large the country—and the functionings of nature, or the Deity—whichever you choose to call it.

What is a recovery "from natural causes?" What is "cyclical recovery," which we are not—according to Mr. Roosevelt—enjoying at present?

The reason we are likely to accept Mr. Roosevelt's statement without much thought is that to most of us the phrase, "natural" or "cyclical" recovery connotes a recovery which comes about by itself without any one's making any effort. That, of course, seems ridiculous, and therefore we are willing to accept—if we don't think about it—the statement that recovery has come about because Mr. Roosevelt "planned it that way."

But, if we do think about it, we get an entirely different picture.

We have traced briefly in the preceding article the origin and course of the depression. We have seen how the failure to recognize facts and make the necessary post-war adjustments caused us to embark upon ten years of economic lunacy. We have seen how the bubble was blown up and how it burst.

When it burst we came to our senses. But, not only did we come down to earth with a crash, we also got so badly frightened that for quite a long time we would not even try to get back on our feet again. The shock had been so great that we had lost our nerve, and stark fear stalked throughout the land.

Some of this fear was undoubtedly caused by apprehension—justified as it turned out—as to what Mr. Roosevelt would do, in spite of his very clear promises, in regard to monetary and fiscal matters.

Conquering Fear His Greatest Victory.

But, even if Mr. Roosevelt contributed to these fears—even if, as some think, he was himself largely responsible for the ultimate spasm of the bank panic—it was in conquering fear that he made his great contribution toward recovery.

What Mr. Roosevelt did for recovery was done in the first few weeks of his Administration, during which he restored hope and self-reliance. One might almost say that he did this in his inaugrual address and his first "fireside talk" to the Nation explaining the re-opening of the banks.

That was a great contribution.

But that is not what Mr. Roosevelt means, when he says that recovery has come about because he "planned it that way."

What he means is clearly that if wages and prices and employment figures are higher now than they were in March, 1933, this is because of his four great recovery measures—devaluation, the NRA, the AAA, and the spending program.

Without going into statistical detail—without going into a discussion of these four measures—it is sufficient commentary to point out that real recovery, in just those factors of wages and prices and re-employment, began in June, 1935, after the Supreme Court decision invalidated the NRA.

Did Mr. Roosevelt "plan" that decision?

If he did, then why was he so extremely irritated by it?

But let us come back to this question of a "natural" recovery.

To understand fully what such a recovery is, you need only think back a little over your own personal experience. Think back to your own state of mind and the state of your own affairs, whatever they may have been, in the winter of 1932-1933. Think back to the things you did to pull yourself out of the difficulties in which you then found yourself.

Recall Sacrifices Of the Individual.

Recall to your mind the sacrifices you made—how you spent less money, worked harder, reorganized your business, or your household, or whatever it was that you did.

Remember also how your wife or husband pitched in and helped you to do these things. Think of what your parents did, or your children, or your friends.

Think back and recall before your mind the picture of countless individuals and families and businesses, all doing the same sort of thing—namely — tightening their belts and getting down to work.

That is what a "natural" or "cyclical" recovery means!

Millions of people each one of them trying his or her hardest to stage a comeback. And, as a consequence, idle wheels beginning to turn again, workers finding employment, farmers able to market their crops.

In spite of—I say—not because of pants pressers being sent to jail, crops being plowed under, little pigs being slaughtered, gold and silver manipulations, and billions of dollars of the people's money being wasted on socialistic experiments.

If we are better off today than we were in March, 1933—and we are better off—it is because the cycle of depression had run its full course by the middle of 1932—it is because Mr. Roosevelt injected a new note of courage when he first took office—it is because we have a marvelously rich and fertile country—and finally, it is because we have an honest, hard-working people living (at least until March, 1933) under the greatest system of government ever devised by man.

If, in spite of all this, we lag behind other countries in recovery—

If, in spite of all this, we still have somewhere in the neighborhood of 10,000,000 unemployed, and more families on relief than ever,

This—and not what measure of recovery we have achieved—has come about because Mr. Roosevelt "planned it that way."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

("The Eala, best of the United States steamship inspection service boats, was used for Florida junkets and various pleasure trips, it was alleged."—News item.)

There's work to do, my hearties, aye!
A thousand ships need checking;
Too many vessels sail the seas
Unfit, except for wrecking.
So let us rush some guests aboard—
Include a winsome beauty;
Below the vintage wines are stored—
Equipped are we for duty!

II.

We'll need a few more lively guests,
Convivial and witty;
Inspection trips need quips and song—
To lack them is a pity.
We'll need guitars for moonlit nights
And episodes romantic;
One must be in the mood, you know,
When on a job gigantic.

III.

A steamship in a northern port,
We hear, is shot to pieces;
It is a crime to let it sail,
So call our aunts and nieces,
And let us put to sea at once,
The SOUTH our destination:
The weather is more pleasant there

IV.

A lot of steamships are unfit,
We're well aware, for sailing;
Our Uncle Sam is firm
For vigilance unfailing.
There isn't any time to lose;
(Some girl friends we're inviting);
So off at once for waters warm—
We hear the fish are biting.

V.

It pains us much to get reports
Of maritime disasters;
It grieves us when old hulks put out
With helpless crews and masters;
Ours is a most important task—
Shipwrecks are gruesome topics—
But duty calls; heave off, my lads,
And head her for the tropics!

Fearing the Worst.

A cellulose substance is being prepared, it is said, which will make it possible for tailors to "pour" a suit of clothes onto a man. It will be just our luck when we go for a fitting to have the tailor use a leaky hose.

Positively.

The depression must be over. When a girl tells her father that a young man has proposed to her he no longer dismisses it with an abrupt: "Okay. When do you both move in with us?"

King Edward may sell Buckingham Palace. He is reported tired of forever wandering about wondering where he is and how he got there.

Folks who have lived in a big house appreciate the King's plight and know that old yearning for a little place where one can get from the dining room, say, to the library, without running into a lot of detour signs.

Secret Session Weighs Action On Townsend

2 OARP Witnesses Fail to Appear Before House Group's Inquiry.

Still in a state of indecision, the House Committee investigating old-age pensions met in closed session for three house yesterday afternoon discussing what it should do about the action of Dr. Francis E. Townsend in "taking a walk" from its hearing.

At the end of the prolonged discussion, Chairman Bell (Democrat) Missouri, issued this statement:

"As chairman of the committee, I am permitted to say that there has been no action taken yet on Dr. Townsend."

Added to the committee's problems was the failure of two Townsendites who had been subpenaed as witnesses to appear when their names were called. They were John Kiefer, Chicago, and the Rev. Clinton Wunder, New York. In one of his numerous defiant statements, Townsend announced several days ago that he had "ordered" officials of his organization not to appear.

The committee, however, was inclined to be lenient. It will call the names of witnesses again today, giving them another opportunity to appear or to join Dr. Townsend as a subject of the discussion of what form contempt action, if any, shall take.

The committee's session was well guarded. A policeman sat smoking a cigar outside Bell's office, where the meeting was held, and shooed away the curious.

Once during the meeting Representative Lucas (Democrat), of Illinois, a member of the committee, emerged from the room. His coat was off, and in a fighting voice he told reporters:

"We can take it."

Pressed for details, he added:

"We are taking it temporarily because the most important issue before the American people is involved."

He declared instructions by Townsend telling witnesses not to appear was "the most despicable contempt of all."

"The committee will come out on top in the end," he predicted as he plunged back into the room.

Bell said that the committee today would hear a Chicago economist, whose name he couldn't remember, and Charles M. Hawks, of Boston. Townsend manager for Massachusetts. Bell declared he was told Hawks would appear, although he had been ordered by Townsend not to do so.

Wunder was in Washington yesterday, although he did not respond when his name was called at the hearing.

Committee members continued to predict that Townsend, and possibly some of his followers, would be forced to answer contempt charges, maybe before the end of this week. It is expected contempt citations will be made before the House and the case will then be turned over to the District of Columbia Supreme Court.

McGroarty Called.

When the two Townsendites failed to appear the committee called to the stand Representative McGroarty, author of a Townsend old-age pension bill. Besides being a member of Congress, McGroarty is poet laureate of California.

McGroarty told about arrival in Washington in the spring of 1935 of a "Congressional action committee" determined to see that the McGroarty bill was passed. The committee, however, the witness said, left after a short time because it was under the impression that Townsend was attempting to delay passage of the measure.

Bell suggested that Townsend wanted the delay "to keep revenue coming in." McGroarty replied that he "wouldn't say that." He said that Robert E. Clements, co-founder of the Townsend movement and former secretary-treasurer of Old Age Revolving Pensions, Ltd., had worked hard to obtain the bill's passage.

McGroarty agreed his bill would not provide $200 a month for everyone over 60 years old, but that it provided for "not to exceed" $200 a month. He said he still had as much faith in the bill as ever.

The California Representative denied he had political ambitions.

"I wouldn't be President of the United States if it were handed me on a gold platter," he told the committee.

Belgian Cabinet Quits After Voting

Brussels, May 26 (AP).—The Cabinet of Premier Paul van Zeeland resigned today following Sunday's parliamentary elections in which Socialists made sharp gains.

The Van Zeeland government was formed March 25, 1935, with the premier also holding the portfolio of minister of foreign affairs. One of the Van Zeeland government's main tenets was the maintenance of the Belgian franc (belga) on the gold standard.

Authortative sources said the resignation was purely a postelection formality and that Van Zeeland probably would be asked to form a new Catholic-Socialist coalition cabinet himself.

head voted with him, in the face of the Presidential demand, while Speaker Byrns, in the chair, helped the Texan at every opportunity.

Blanton's first resolution, about 1,000 words long, was withdrawn after Snell and Representative Maverick (Democrat), of Texas, had raised points of order against it on the ground it was not a resolution but a "stump speech." The secondary resolution merely gave the conferees instructions on the three most controversial items.

Two Republican members—Gifford, of Massachusetts, and Michener, of Michigan—chided Blanton about his resentment toward Washington newspapers, his efforts to penalize the District, and for taking time on the House floor and space in the Congressional Record to repeat his attacks on District persons and institutions.

Not a member arose to defend the municipal government or the Budget Bureau's recommendations.

Blanton said the House conferees desired the instruction so that they could "tell the Senate conferees something" and "not have to sit there like mocking birds."

Girl Reporters Given Lessons In Lariat Work

Mrs. Brosseit, Western Cowgirl Demonstrates Roping Art to Club.

The members of the Women's Press Club "rode their chairs" yesterday noon, while Mrs. Mary Brosseit, of Belle Fourche, S. Dak., demonstrated the ways of roping and hog-tieing livestock.

The last 16 years of Mrs. Brosseit's life have been spent "wrapped around a horse" in rodeos or on ranches in the West wrangling dudes and trying to "bring them back alive."

"At present I'm working on a buffalo and elk ranch in Martinsdale, Mon.," said Mrs. Brosseit, pushing her broad sombrero back on her head, "but the real fun of ranch life is going in to town to the rodeos."

Once the rodeo gets in your blood, she said, you can't get away from it. She told the story of a friend of hers, "Bunny" McCarroll, who for years played all the rodeos in the West.

Finally, Bunny decided to get married and leave the game. As a final fairwell spree before going to California to settle down on a farm, Bunny and her husband went to the Pendleton rodeo.

When her friends saw her, they insisted that she have one more try at it, as she had started her career at the Pendleton rodeo, so she ought to end it there. The first broncho she rode threw her, and she died within ten days.

"I've had some pretty close ones myself," said Mrs. Brosseit.

"Once I was trying to pull a horse off a bridge with a rope attached to my saddle horn. The horse fell off the bridge, dragging my horse and myself over on top of it. I wasn't even scratched."

Its not very often that you travel without a rope on the range, she continued, but when you do you always regret it.

Once she was riding along when she came to a sink-hole in which a young calf had fallen. Unable to pull it out because she had no rope, Mrs Brosseit had to climb down into the sink-hole and push it out.

Children to Colelct Memorial Flowers

Flowers for decorating graves of veterans in Arlington Cemetery will be collected by public school children, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. Margaret Hopkins Worrell, chairman of the natural flower committee of the Grand Army Memorial Day Corporation.

Charles B. Degges, secretary of the board of education, has divided the 174 public schools into 70 districts and the larger schools will be used as centers for the collection of the flowers. Wreaths and flowers will be donated by the Botanical Gardens, the Agricultural Gardens, by various greenhouses and by private citizens.

Trucks to convey the flowers to Arlington from the schools have been contributed by the Army, the Navy, the Naval Air Station, the Marine Corps, the Veterans' Administration and the sanitary engineers division of the District.

S. A. Golden, president of the District Grocery Stores, has contributed the use of baskets in which the flowers will be taken from tents at Arlington to the graves of the soldiers.

Mrs. Worrell and her committee, Miss Emma F. Hayward, Mrs. K. P. McElroy, Mrs. Susanna Myers, Mrs. Myrtle Buckles, Mrs. Nan Thurber, Mrs. Alice Howard and Mrs. Charles Wilson, on Friday, will supervise the placing of the flowers in the tents. Early on the morning of the thirtieth, the Boy Scouts, under direction of Col. E. L. Mattice, will place the flowers on the graves.

Inauguration Plans Provided in 4 Bills

Four resolutions anticipating the Presidential inauguration of January 20, 1937, were introduced in the Senate and House yesterday by chairmen of the Senate and House District Committees.

The resolutions, requested by the District Commissioners, probably will be called up under unanimous consent before Congress adjourns so that preparations for the inaugural ceremony may be begun before the Seventy-fifth Congress convenes.

One of the resolutions authorizes an appropriation of $2,500 for public order and the protection of life and property. The major portion of this money will be used to employ additional policemen.

Two of the esolutions authorize the Secretary of Interior to allocate space for the quartering of troops in public space and to grant permits for the use of public buildings and grounds. The latter also covers the lending of tents, cots, and the like by the War and Navy Departments.

Tax Parley With President

ed by both House and Senate committees.

It was learned that the House corporate tax rates formed a focal point in the discussion, with the President's insistence on the full amount of revenue he had asked previously. "Cushions" for debt-burdened and financially weak corporations, and preferred treatment for small companies, were considered.

Recess Is Planned.

Secretary of the Treasurer Morgenthau, jr., and Herman Oliphant, Treasurer general counsel, participated in the round table discussions, and agreed to supply new tables asked at a meeting of the committee this afternoon. King said he would move for a recess when the committee meets this morning, to give the Treasury time to complete its Others attending the conference were Senators Byrd, of Virginia; George, of Georgia; Walsh, of Massachusetts; Clark, of Missouri, Bailey, of North Carolina; Barkley, of Kentucky; Connally, of Texas; Lonergan, of Connecticut; Gerry, of Rhode Island; Black, of Aalabama, and Guffey, of Pennsylvania.

Ready for Final Vote.

The conference with the President was called just before the committee, sitting late in the afternoon, virtually completed preliminary revision of their own bill, by rejecting a ½-cent a pound processing tax on sugar, but accepting, by an 11-to-5 vote, import taxes on certain fish and vegetable oils that may yield an additional $10,000,000.

Conservative committee Democrats, who balked from the start at high surtaxes on undivided corporate profits, but finally accepted a 7 per cent maximum, declared privately they would not yield further, but were ready and willing to receive the President's views.

After refusing on several prior votes to inject the tariff issue into the revenue bill, the committee, at its meeting yesterday, accepted an amendment by Senator Josiah Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, imposing what amounts to an import tax on some fish and vegetable oils.

Approval came in the face of a communication from the State Department pointing out that increased import taxes are in conflict with Administration's present trade policies.

Under the Bailey amendment, taxes ranging from 2 to 4½ cents a pound on coconut, palm, olive, sesame, hempseed, kapok, whale and fish oils would be levied. Regardless of Administration opposition to injecting import taxes into the present revenue picture, it was learned, this action by the committee was not discussed last night at the White House.

Tibbett Makes Plea.

One other change was speedily made in the bill following an unexpected personal plea by Lawrence Tibbett, Metropolitan Opera star; Efram Zimbalist and Mrs. Amelia Sperry, of Nashville, Tenn. The committee heard informal testimony from the artists that under a ruling by Commissioner of Internal Revenue Guy T. Helvering, memberships in the Community and Civic Concert Association are subject to the Federal admissions tax.

Pleading that local concerts conducted by the association are without profit and provide encouragement for struggling young artists, Tibbett asked that an exemption be written into the pending bill. Dismissing the witnesses, the committee immediately approved the exemption.

Refusal to levy new processing taxes on sugar, asked by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, came with acceptance of a sub-committee recommendation that such taxes should be considered only in connection with sugar quota legislation pending before the House Agriculture Committee. King made clear that this does not prejudice future action on the tax if the House should move first.

Other Proposals Rejected.

Early in the day several sugar beet farmers, Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan; Senator Murray (Democrat), Montana, and Representative Cummings (Democrat), of Colorado, appeared in opposition to the tax at sub-committee hearings, contending it would injure both the beet producer and sugar consumer.

An amendment proposed by Senate Minority Leader McNary, which would have extended the $2,500 income tax exemption to married persons not living together, if one was supported by the other, was flatly rejected.

Other proposed amendments quickly voted down would have reduced the fur tax from 10 to 3 per cent, increased exemptions of corporations making charity donations, and exempted retailers doing a small jewelry manufacturing business from the jewelry tax.

To further distribution of corporate earnings, the committee early in the day agreed to language strengthening administrative provisions of the present law. The change would compel corporations retaining more than $15,000 or 40 cent of earnings, whichever is greater, to file a statement setting forth reasons for withholding dividends. The Treasury would examine the statements, and if retentions were considered "unreasonable," could levy penalty taxes. King said the change was "more a matter of psychology than realism."

Highlights of Bill.

Highlights of the committee bill carried to the White House last night, substantially modifying the Administration measure passed by the House, include:

An 18 per cent flat tax on corporate income.

A 7 per cent surtax on undistributed corporate earnings.

Exemption of $1,000 for companies earning $15,000 or less.

A 4 per cent normal individual income tax on dividends.

Exemption of banks from the 7 per cent surtax.

Two Washington officers have been selected for postgraduate instruction in civil engineering at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, the Navy Department announced yesterday. They are Ensigns William C. G. Church and Richard L. Mann.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Piano recital by Norman Freuenheim in Wesley Hall Tuesday night. Program: Chromatic Fantasia and Fugue (Bach), Hornpipe in D (Purcell), Arietta (Leo), Gavotte (Gluck-Brahms), "Papillons" (Schumann), Impromptu in G flat, Polonaise in E flat minor, Nocturne in C minor, Mazureks in F sharp minor and A flat, Etudes in A flat and G flat (Chopin), "Reflets dans l'eau" and "Le vent dans la plaine" (Debussy), "Canco i Danca" (Mompou), "Gracovienne Fantastique" (Paderewski).

On the several occasions that I have heard him play, Mr. Frauenheim has been more technically precise than he was last evening, but never more completely in the vein for imaginative coloring and poetic impetuousness. Almost without exception, the compositions on this program were in the mood of fantasy, even the formidable chromaticism of Bach with which he began, and his playing had a vitality that made it eminently pleasurable. Because of his inspirited readings, I enjoyed his music-making more keenly than I would if he had been intent upon academic perfection of every phrase.

It is intelligent poesy that makes piano playing more significant than a display of technical proficiency. Mr. Frauenheim has a secure mastery of the keyboard, but that is only the basis for his disclosure of a mentality that is both analyitical and creative in interpretation. One may take as an example his treatment of Schumann's "Papillons" in which the dynamic problems had been carefully worked out and put aside in memory, so that the reading, apparently spontaneous and rhapsodic, was in remarkable rapport with the composer's temperament.

In selecting his Chopin group, he avoided for the most part the hackneyed works and gave his auditors the lovely G flat Impromptu, the mysterious Polonaise in E flat minor, the anguished C minor Nocturne, and the most fascinating of the Mazureks—the one in A flat major with its curiously shifting harmonies.

I was grateful for his inclusion of Federico Mompou's "Canco i Danca," because this Catalonian composer deserves more attention than he receives in recitals. He has written comparatively little, but each of his pieces is exquisitely fashioned as a cameo. Calling himself a primitivist, he uses the utmost simplicity of expression. He writes miniatures so delicately limned that a single not has the effect of a plangent discovery.

Parties in Texas Pick Delegates; Peace Prevails

Unprecedented Harmony Is Shown by Democrats and Republicans.

By the Associated Press.

San Antonio, Tex., May 26.—In unprecedented harmony, the major political parties of Texas today elected delegates to national conventions.

The Democrats at San Antonio rebel-yelled their approval of President Roosevelt's New Deal Administration but rebuffed Postmaster General James A. Farley's recommendation for abrogation of the time-honored two-thirds rule for Presidential nomination.

In Fort Worth New Deal policies were the target for bitter shafts of Republican speakers.

Although speakers, in deference to leaders' wishes that the delegation be not obligated to any candidacy, guarded against mentioning names in speeches. Delegates in private conversations and meetings voiced sentiment for Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas.

Keynoter George Hopkins, of Dallas, shouted:

"They tell you President Roosevelt is outstanding. Well, so was Benedict Arnold. Arnold would have delivered the Government to a despot. President Roosevelt would deliver it to a worse despot—communism."

Vice President Garner was renominated national committeeman unanimously by the Democrats without opposition and Mrs. Clara Driscoll Sevier, wife of the former Ambassador to Chile, was again named national committeewoman.

Democratic resolutions declared the President rescued the country "from the depths of the depression" while Republican speakers assailed the New Deal as a "double deal" and charged the Administration with "duplicity."

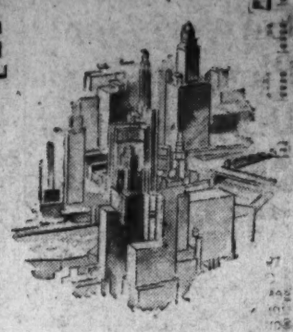
ZEPHYR SERVICE to DENVER



BEGINS SUNDAY MAY 31st

STREAMLINED . . . .
DIESEL POWERED . . . .
BUILT OF STAINLESS STEEL . . . .

The BURLINGTON ZEPHYRS will inaugurate the first 16-hour service between the Great Lakes and the Rockies on May 31, 1936, to signalize the opening of the western summer vacation season.

1039 MILES OVERNIGHT

Advance Zephyr No. 1 Westbound	Advance Zephyr No. 10 Eastbound
Lv. Chicago 5:30 pm (C.S.T.)	Lv. Denver 4:00 pm (M. T.)
Ar. Denver 8:30 am (M. T.)	Ar. Chicago 9:00 am (C.S.T.)

This new service which reduces the westbound running time by almost 12 hours, will be initiated by the original ZEPHYR, the famous "Silver Streak" that ran from Denver to Chicago in 785 minutes in May 1934, averaging 77.6 miles an hour to win the long-distance, non-stop world record for railroad trains; and by another champion of the rails, the Mark Twain Zephyr that holds the high speed record of 122 miles an hour.

At the outset there will be coach accommodations only, with all seats subject to advance reservation. Free Pillows. Economy meals (35¢ supper and 25¢ breakfast). Hostesses. Radio. No extra fare. Tickets at the lowest coach fare of less than 2¢ a mile will be honored. Both trains completely air-conditioned, of course.

VACATIONERS!

Everybody's going to the Rockies this year. The round trip railroad fare from Chicago to Colorado every day is only $34.20. Throughout most of July and part of August the fare on week-ends comes down to $27.50 from Chicago for round trip coach tickets good 16 days. No surcharge to pay. Not even Pullman fare if you dash out to Colorado on one of the Advance Zephyrs that at times attain a speed of 90 miles an hour.

Reducing the running time to just overnight, these champions of the rail actually add two full days to your Colorado vacation.

No change in the ARISTOCRAT

This famous king among steam trains will continue to operate between Chicago and Denver on its present schedule:

Westbound: Lv. Chicago 10:30 am (C.S.T.) Ar. Denver 1:15 pm (M.T.)
Eastbound: Lv. Denver 5:00 pm (M.T.) Ar. Chicago 7:15 pm (C.S.T.)

Completely air-conditioned. Matched Pullmans, lounge-observation car, reclining chair car (seats free), radio, valet service, barber, shower bath, economy meals and free pillows to coach and chair car passengers. No extra fare.

Farmers Spurn Plans to Leave Drought Areas

Evacuation Laws Projected for 'Dust Bowl' as Rain Falls.

By the Associated Press.

Oklahoma City, May 26.—A suggestion by the State soil conservation commission that sections of the Southwest's "dust bowl" be evacuated in a 10-year fight against soil erosion brought defiant protests tonight from Oklahoma panhandle farmers, encouraged by recent heavy rains.

F. L. Vaughan, commission vice chairman, announced that complete evacuation of all "non-urban" sections of the panhandle, center of severe dust storms in the past, would be recommended to the next State Legislature. Kansas, Colorado, Texas and New Mexico would be asked to enact similar laws.

"Of course none of the States can force a landowner to abandon his property, but we can offer them inducements to move to greener fields, at least if the Government promises to make his property more valuable," Vaughan explained.

Best Rain in Five Years.

But panhandle farmers protested vigorously. The suggestion came shortly after the "best rain" in five years had turned dust dunes into quagmires and the farmers were preparing to plant row crops.

Authorities of other States had no immediate comment on Vaughan's suggestion. But Edward O. Foster, director of Colorado's planning commission, said proposals for zoning that State's dust area probably would be submitted to the next Legislature.

"Out in the plains country our studies indicate the dust problem could be met by such a long time zoning program, providing that the land is set up in large grazing units under strict control," Foster said.

Vaughan said conservation experts of the five States had agreed the dustlands "never could be reclaimed as long as private landowners remain on it." His plan is for a 10-year program of Government control, with systematic planting of the dry area. He said there would be no harvests over a period of years.

Farm Law Nullified.

"Old Stuff," retorted Henry A. Long, of Guymon, Okla, chairman of a Federal soil conservation program in the heart of the State's dust bowl.

"I can tell you a simpler way than that. Give us some more of this rain that we have had the last few days."

A. O. Ackenbom, Guymon, said the suggested plan would be unpopular throughout the panhandle.

"These folks have had the gumption to stick it out here through the worst five years," he declared. "You can't get them to move out now."

At Topeka today the Supreme Court declared unconstitutional that State's soil drifting law which made contour farming mandatory.

Civic Unit to Fete Police Boys Club

Police Boys Club No. 4 will celebrate the first anniversary of its founding at 8 p. m. tomorrow as guests of the Southwest Citizens Association. The celebration, originally scheduled for two weeks ago but postponed because of rain, will take place in the 400 block of I street southwest. The section has been roped off for the occasion and seats provided for more than 1,000 persons.

Guest speakers at the affair will be J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation; Judge Robert E. Mattingly and Maj. Ernest W. Brown.

Entertainment will be furnished by the boys themselves. There will be boxing and wrestling matches, tumbling and other athletic exhibitions. Music will be provided by the Police Boys Club 64-piece band, the harmonica band and the "hillbillies." Campaign returns yesterday swelled the membership fund from $44,215 to $45,426, including 761 associate memberships turned in by eight police precincts. The highest individual contributions were from Jesse Metcalf, Senator from Rhode Island, and from the Pioneer Laundry Corporation. Each contributed $50.

Ship Grounded on Bar In Chesapeake Bay

Baltimore, May 26 (U.P.). — The freighter Commercial Alabaman, bound from Baltimore to New Orleans, was aground in Chesapeake Bay tonight.

Lewis Praises Women in Talk At Gunston Hall

London Times Correspondent Speaks at Program; Diplomas Awarded.

The level of civilization can be and is being raised by the influence of women, Sir Willmott Lewis, Washington correspondent of the London Times, told the graduating class of Gunston Hall at annual commencement exercises yesterday.

He addressed an audience of more than 200 members of the school and their guests.

"The life of the individual is becoming more and more precarious, however," he warned, "because no one can any longer be self-sufficient in our present complex civilization.

Diplomas were awarded members of the graduating class following the address.

Those who received academic diplomas were:

Those receiving collegiate diplomas were:

Emma Louise Ashley, Fame Coulter Craig, Nellie Frances McCain, Josephine B. Willis, Sarah Dean Witz and Martha Woodrum.

Holland Is Named To Succeed Ritter

To fill the Federal judgeship vacated by the Senatorial impeachment and conviction of Judge Halsted L. Ritter, President Roosevelt yesterday sent to the Senate the name of John W. Holland, of Jacksonville, Fla.

Holland was named for United States Judge in the Southern District of Florida.

Holland was proposed to the President by Senator Duncan U. Fletcher (Democrat), Florida. He has been a practicing attorney in Jacksonville since 1910, and has been district attorney since July, 1933. He is 52.

In April, Ritter was found guilty of a charge that he brought his court into "scandal and disrepute" by receiving $4,500 in cash from his former law partner, A. L. Rankin, while the latter served as a receiver in a bankruptcy case in Ritter's court with fees totaling $90,000.

Mental Patient Flees Walter Reed Hospital

The man's disappearance was reported by Capt. John R. Wood, of the hospital guard. He described the fugitive as 29 years old, 5 feet 10 inches tall and weighing 150 pounds. He was clad in gray hospital clothing.

Bus Fund Gone, Crippled Pupils To Miss School

Lack of Transportation to Affect 50 Children After Today.

Failure of Congress to pass the District's deficiency bill makes this the last day of school for more than 50 of the 83 pupils who attend public school classes for Washington's physically handicapped boys and girls.

Notices, authorized by Superintendent Frank W. Ballou, were forwarded to parents of al lthe children yesterday that buses which have been transporting the crippled pupils to school must stop after today. The fund for this item in the school budget has been exhausted.

The classes will be continued, as a few of the children get to school without the bus facilities, their teachers said. In the Weightman School, where 45 white children are enrolled, only four are brought to school by their parents now. Many of them, living in outlying sections of the city, have long distances to go to their classes.

In the deficiency bill, which is expected to come before the Senate for discussion today, there is a school board request for $1,350 to provide buses for the crippled children the rest of the school year. School officials fear, however, that Congress wil lact too late to make the money available before the end of the school term in mid-June.

Dr. Ballou, reporting that bus funds were nearly exhausted at last week's meeting of the Board of Education, said he would not take responsibility for expending money from any other item in the budget for this purpose. The board supported him by unanimous vote.

In addition to the pupils at Weightman School, 38 colored children enrolled at Magruder School are affected.

Capital Ad Club Selects Heads Of Committees

Activities for Summer Are Outlined by New Directors' Board.

The newly elected board of directors of the Advertising Club, at a luncheon meeting yesterday, formulated a program of activity that will start in the summer and run through the year under direction of President Norman C. Kal.

James W. Hardey, chairman of the lecture committee of the spring season, was renamed. Kal also renamed James Rotto, W. N. Freeman, Walter D. Barkdull and A. D. Willard, jr., to the lecture panel.

First Vice President Rotto was named and confirmed chairman of the program and activities committee. Associated with him are Ernest S. Johnston, Louis D. Krakow, Allen V. DeFord and B. G. Viens.

Director J. A. Anderson was unanimously chosen chairman of the membership committee. He will increase the personnel of his committee and a campaign will be started early in June.

Director G. B. Burrus was elected chairman of the publicity committee. His associates will include Donald M. Bernard, Vincent F. Callahan, Walter D. Barkdill, Howard Parish, Ernest S. Johnston, William Dolph, A. D. Willard, John E. Shoemaker, Col. Leroy W. Herron, Joseph P. Marshall, J. D. Dingwell, jr.; Isidor Cohen, Forest Entwisle, Robert Dougan, C. Melvin Sharpe, George W. Harris and E. P. Hogan.

Committee on finance and budget —Louis D. Krakow, chairman; Ernest S. Johnston, W. N. Freeman, J. A. Anderson and Charles J. Columbus.

Audit committee—Vice President George F. Kindley, Ernest S. Johnston and Walter Coates.

At the close of the meeting members of the jamboree committee of the officers and board of directors presented Alvin Q. Ehrlich, chairman of the dinner dance, with a watch as a token of appreciation.

SEC Vacates Its Order Against C. C. Willson

The Securities Exchange Commission yesterday vacated its order of April 2 refusing registration to Charles C. Willson, of room 507 Woodward Building.

How a Baby Grows

By Dr. Arnold Gesell, M. D.

Creeping Part Four

CocoanutGrove Opening Draws Merry Throng

Pete Moss and His 14 Men Provide Dance Tunes at Night Spot.

By Chanticleer.

Several hundred of the local citizenry attended the grand opening of the town's newest after-darkerie—the Cocoanut Grove. You'll find Pete Moss and his 14 musicians providing the music for the floor shows and for your dancing at this new home of artificial light and genuinely good victuals.

The location—Fifth and K streets northwest. Abbreviated facts—Three floor shows nightly . . . cooling system . . . blue room bar . . . large dance space . . . and a restaurant first and foremost.

* * * * *

For an out-in-the-country atmosphere and dinner — Griffith Farms, 3 miles beyond the District line on the Marlboro pike. Everything from old-fashioned chicken dinners to seafood and steaks. For your dancing, Raymond and his Hawaiians.

Terrace to Open Soon.

Great activity at the Shoreham, pending the opening of the Terrace, which can't be much more than a matter of hours. No definite announcement as yet, however. Al Kamons directing the band this week in the absence of Barnes, visiting in Chicago. Lester Cole and his Texas Rangers stop the shows in the ballroom these nights.

* * * *

Earl Lindsay's Eight Coquettes are being held over again at the Lotus. With several new attractions, including the Leinardes, musical comedy and rhumba team; Audrey Gibson, in high kick and modern dance interpretations, and Eva Harlan, personality dancer. Air conditioned, two floor shows nightly.

* * * *

Never can tell what will happen at the Amabssador's Hi-Hat room. Last night a young lady from Asheville surprised the Hi-Hat's guests by singing in impromptu fashion—and most beautifully. She was on her way from the French Casino in Miami to N. B. C. in New York for an audition. Name: Alice Fry.

* * * *

Moe Baer is being pushed for tops in popularity for one in his life—and by an inanimate thing, too. Its the Hamilton's air-cooling system! You'll find both in the Rainbow Room.

* * *

Another summer opening is scheduled for this week-end. The Powhatan Roof, with Pete Macias and his orchestra, begins its usual summer season of dining and dancing Friday night. Ramon is already taking reservations.

Gail Lee Held Over.

The little blonde hoofist at Maryland Club Gardens last week so stampeded the audiences that she is held for this week. She's Gail Lee—and Gail says dancing is the coming art because there is no emotion that can not be portrayed effectively and beautifully by a skillful dancer.

The ear-to-the-ground department reports that Milt Barrett may discontinue floor shows at the Dude Ranch for the summer.

Dancing at the Lotus This Week

Audrey Gibson, exponent of the ultra modern in dance interpretations, is headlining the floor show at the Lotus this week. Earl Lindsay's Eight Coquettes also are presented.

Culbertson On Bridge

"Dear Mr. Culbertson:

"Accept my enthusiastic congratulations on your new 'asking bids.' In my opinion, and in the opinion of the group with which I play, these bids are of inestimable value in slam bidding. As a matter of fact, most of our arguments used to arise over the fact that we all bid slams when they could not be made, and failed to bid them when they were 'cold' (a common enough malady, I suppose).

"Anyway, since we began using these asking bids, I am positive that our slam accuracy has increased several hundred per cent. I am inclosing a hand on which my wife and I proudly arrived at a grand slam and were thrilled to discover that we had successfully located, in the bidding, every key card.

"Thankfully yours,

This was the hand:

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	NORTH
	♠ J 10 6 4 ♥ A ♦ A K 8 3 ♣ K 10 6 3
WEST		EAST
♠ 9 7 ♥ Q J 8 6 5 ♦ 10 9 5 ♣ 4 5 2		♠ 8 3 2 ♥ 10 4 3 ♦ J 7 4 ♣ 9 8 4 3
	SOUTH
	♠ A K Q 5 ♥ K 9 7 2 ♦ Q 6 5 ♣ A Q

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	3 spades	Pass
4 clubs	Pass	4 no trp.	Pass
5 dimds.	Pass	5 no trp.	Pass
6 hearts	Pass	6 no trp.	Pass
7 spades [final bid]

The hand was admirably bid, each response to the successive asking bids building up a complete picture for South's guidance. When North's four no trump response to the first asking bid of four clubs showed two aces and second round control of the asked suit, South had a preliminary picture of the North hand such as this:

♠ J x x x ♥ A x x ♦ A x x ♣ K x

When the second asking bid (five diamonds) was responded to by five no trump to show second round control of the diamond suit, South mentally added the diamond king to this picture. The heart asking bid meeting with a positive response, showing second round control which, in view of South's king, could be only a singleton. South now had almost a card-for-card portrait of North's hand, and his final bid of seven spades was made on the virtual assurance of finding 13 tricks in the combined hands, which indeed he did find.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

An additional annual appropriation of more than $30,000,000 is needed to place the civil service retirement and disability fund on a sound financial basis, it is indicated in the report of the board of actuaries.

BAKER.

During the year ended June 30, 1935, the Government appropriation made to the fund was $21,000,000, which was considerably lower than the board recommended. An amount "equal to" $40,000,000 was appropriated for the fiscal year 1936, which was nearer the correct appropriation than any of the previous years of the present and immediately preceding administrations.

"This change would seem to indicate," the board reports, "that an effort is going to be made to place the fund on a sound financial basis. However, comparison of this appropriation with the amount of $72,392,000 needed indicates that the Government appropriation is still falling short of the amount estimated by the board to be necessary."

There is no saving to the Government, it is further pointed out, in not making the necessary appropriations because any deficit in amounts paid will have to be made up later with interest.

Credited to Fund.

The necessary appropriation is the amount which needs to be credited currently to the fund to equal the liability which will ultimately have to be met on account of service being currently rendered by employes and which is a current expense of the Government. The appropriation of this amount is held to be just as important as the appropriation of the amount of the salary necessary to cover the employes' contributions which are credited to the fund.

Liability for the existing annuitants' roll alone has increased from $121,552,338 in 1930 to $408,350,440 in 1935, it is shown. The assets of the fund in 1930 were $156,546,419, or enough to pay all of the benefits to annuitants and leave something to refund part of employe contributions in case the fund was abolished.

As of 1935, the assets were $271,729,708, which at first glance seems better, but it should be noted that the annuitants' roll has so increased that these assets would only pay about two-thirds of the benefits to the annuitants on the roll without allowing anything for the active members who have contributed to date, the board says.

Value of Present Assets.

Another comparison may be made—that of the relative value of present assets to the contributions of employes. In 1930 the estimated total contributions of employes were $190,248,016 and the assets were $156,546,419, indicating that the Government had created no reserve for future liabilities and had borrowed from employes the difference, which it must replace by future appropriations to pay the major part of future benefits.

In 1935 the estimated total contributions of employes were $335,000,000 and the assets were $271,729,708, which indicates that during the five years the Government not only has failed to pay off its previous loans, from employes contributions, but it has run behind to the extent of $63,270,292.

The Government started the fund on what was regarded as an unsound basis, then adopted what was regarded as the better basis, then lapsed into a sort of intermediate plan. Last year a move was made to restore the fund to the basis recommended by the board which is used by the leading Governmental retirement plans of America.

An instrument of considerable military value has just been patented by Charles D. Fator (F), War. It is a device for operating a number of controls from a single control handle.

Federal Golf Tournament.

The Interdepartmental Golf Association will hold its tenth annual golf tournament at Beaver Dam Country Club, June 8 and 9. According to J. L. Acuff (P), PWA, president, departments may enter golfers in three classes, A, B and C in teams of four to play for cups and other prizes. Individual prizes will be awarded in addition to team trophies.

Acuff urges golfers in each office desiring to enter the tournament to contact any one of the following department representatives:

Agriculture, Arthur J. Haidle; City Postoffice, M. Robinson; Government Printing Office, Robert H. Perry (C); Interior, Paul Swope; Interstate Commerce Commission, Max Meyer; Justice, Elmer Butts; Navy, W. H. Lines; Patent Office, C. L. Shelton; PWA, Hickman Greene; Treasury, Ralph Shepard; Veterans' Administration, C. P. Medley, and War, Frank Butler.

Golfers in departments not listed are urged by Acuff to contact him or Shelton. All entrants must be filed by June 2.

The civil service law of Jefferson County, Alabama, in which are located the cities of Birmingham and Bessemer, is being installed in all offices. This move follows the decision of the Alabama Supreme Court in upholding the constitutionality of the law last month.

Diary Guest Tickets.

If F, P or C follows your name in this column call in person on the Federal Diary editor today only between 3:30 and 5 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, Gertrude Niessen, the Elida Ballet and other acts; screen, Francis Lederer in "One Rainy Afternoon") or to P. Loew's Palace (second week of Janet Gaynor and Robert Taylor in "Small Town Girl"); or to C, Loew's Columbia (Paul Cavanaugh in "Champagne Charlie").

Two technical bulletins just issued at Agriculture include one on cotton, by K. Melvin Downey (P), and Ruth E. Elmquist (C), Bureau of Home Economics, and another on trees by Ernest J. George (C).

Navy Yard Vacancies.

Applications will be accepted not later than June 1 for the position of packer, it is announced by Civil Service Commission. Vacancies in the Washington Navy Yard at pay ranging from $5.76 to $6.72 a day for a 40-hour week, and in the Quartermaster Service War Department, $3.83 a day, will be filled from this examination. The compensation is subject to a deduction of 3½ per cent toward a retirement annuity.

Applicants must have had at least six months of experience as packer, which must have included the making of boxes, packing crates, etc., and must be in sound physical condition.

Additional information on these and other positions may be obtained from Civil Service Commission, Seventh and F streets northwest.

On the Air Today

An Italian navigator named Columbus once brought a very famous trio of ships to these shores, and any school boy will tell you that Christopher and his vessels are about as well known names as the history of the seven seas ever has recorded.

Fancy what hue and cry would have resulted in 1492 if Columbus had been surrounded by microphones. More persons will actually hear the ceremonies today attending the maiden sailing of Britain's Queen Mary—more nationalities and more remote areas—than knew that Columbus and his ships existed 444 years ago.

Those same persons will have the opportunity of hearing the progress the Queen Mary makes on this first voyage. From day to day broadcasts will originate from aboard the great liner, to reach American and European audiences via short wave.

The first of today's broadcasts will be heard through WJSV, at 9:15 a. m. You'll get a picture of the scene at Southampton just before the huge anchor is hauled in and the Queen Mary puts out. At 10, WMAL will present a full hour of the gala scene including the final salute. (At 10:15, WJSV again presents a quarter hour from the dock.). At 11, the N. B. C. broadcast shifts to WRC for a quarter-hour with descriptive comments from the dock and the ship itself.

At sailing time British Broadcasting Corporation announcers will interview passengers and officials and mikes will pick up the ship's band as "God Save the King" is played. Commodore Sir Edgar T. Britten also will be heard from the bridge as the liner leaves the dock.

The final airing for this first day comes through WJSV, at 6. At least two broadcasts from shipboard are planned daily by each network. The New York plans are elaborate with a typical welcome a la Manhattan.

* * * *

Today's features:

Derby Day: Running of the famous Epsom Downs race, WMAL, at 8:45 a. m. From England by short wave.

"Chinese Lullaby:" Lucy Monroe observes fiftieth appearance in "Lavender and Old Lace," singing her personal favorite, from "East Is West," WMAL, at 7:30.

Cooking School Winners: Including Mrs. Frances Irwin, who works in the Treasury Department here, from New York, WJSV, at 3:30.

Frank Knox: G. O. P. candidate, from WMAL, at 9:30. From journalistic fraternity dinner in Chicago.

"Ici Paris:" Originating in Montreal, comes to WMAL, at 9, as new weekly feature. Spotlights Andre Durieux and his Parisians.

"Cupid" Allen: Comedian brings back two amateur winners who got vaudeville engagements, fell in love and married. WRC at 8.

Mr. Henry Kaufman, advertising agency executive, is at it again this year. Meaning that another annual contest is under way to determine Washington's best announcer. Radio writers again will be among the judges. The idea is inspired by Mr. Kaufman's belief that an announcer will do a better job if he thinks judges are listening to him at unsuspecting hours of the day and making up their minds whether he merits the huge silver cup now standing on a table beside Kenneth Berkley's desk in N. B. C. executive offices. The cup is there because Bill Coyle, who gets his pay from N. B. C., won the honors last year when the competition was introduced by Mr. Kaufman.

By the by, who do you believe to be the best announcer in Washington?

* * * *

15,000 Austrian Youths To Get Military Training

Vienna, May 26 (AP).—The semi-official newspaper Weltblatt announced today 15,000 youths would report for a year's military service June 10.

Austrians living abroad were said to be subject to examinations at consulates.

(A general military conscription decree was announced in Vienna this spring. The Little Entente protested without result that it was a violation of the Treaty of St. Germain.)

General Strike Threat Averted in Philippines

Manila, P. I., May 26 (AP).—Any threat of a general strike in the near future appeared to have been averted today, but labor leaders announced their determination to fight for higher wages.

Official support of the move for minimum pay, promised by Commonthwealth Labor Secretary Ramon Torres, was seen as having a quieting effect on the agitated situation created by recent talk of a general strike.

Irgens–Post Marriage Takes Place

St. Margaret's Church Scene of Diplomat's Wedding.

Bridegroom Is Secretary of Norwegian Legation Here.

Miss Margareta von Post yesterday afternoon became the bride of Mr. Francis Irgens, First Secretary of the Norwegian Legation. The marriage took place at 4 o'clock at St. Margaret's Episcopal Church, with the Rev. Dr. Herbert Scott Smith officiating.

The bride was given in marriage by Maj. George Oakley Totten, whose wife is her first cousin. Mrs. Frank S. Goodwin was matron of honor and Capt. J. Galbe, Counselor of the Norwegian Legation, was best man.

After the ceremony the Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom entertained at a reception at the Swedish Legation, at which the Norwegian Minister and Mme. De Morgenstierne and members of the Swedish and the Norwegian Legations were present. Also present were the Minister of Denmark and Mme. Wadsted, the Minister of Finland and Mme. Jarnefelt, and close friends of the bride and bridegroom.

After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Irgens left for Havana, Cuba, where Mr. Irgens has been appointed Charge d'Affaires of Norway for a few months, after which the couple will return to Washington.

Mr. Irgens was secretary of the Norwegian Legation before his appointment to Cuba.

Lyla Townsend Returns to City

Miss Lyla Townsend, with her brother, Mr. Preston Townsend, has returned to Washington after a world cruise on the Franconia. They have joined their father, Senator John G. Townsend, jr., at the Shoreham Hotel for a few days, after which they will go to New York to obtain baggage from the ship, which has not yet arrived.

With them for a brief stay is Miss Betty Carter, of Johannesburg, South Africa, whom they met on the cruise, and who will sail shortly for England.

Miss Townsend, Miss Carter and Mr. Townsend left the ship at Los Angeles and traveled across country to Washington. Miss Townsend, who is the former president of the Daughters of the Senate, will go from New York to Rehoboth Beach for the summer, making occasional visits to the Capital during the season. She and her brother left America on January 6.

Close friends of Senator Morris Sheppard, of Texas, dean of Congress, tomorrow will give him 61 kindly pats on the back—and one to grow on. It is his sixty-first birthday anniversary. Senator Sheppard has the friendship of all groups in Congress, New Dealers, Old Dealers, the stalwarts of the Republican ranks and the eager youth of the Progressive element of the upper chamber.

The Senator and Mrs. Sheppard no doubt will be kept busy answering congratulations and it is safe to wager that the theme of conversation among the callers will be the Texas Centennial and the more or less open house these popular Texans plan in the family home at Texarkana.

The pages of memory's book turn backward for those who view the attractive new portrait of the late Mrs. Archibald Hopkins, for many years president of the Washington Home for Incurables. Bjorn Egeli was commissioned to do the portrait which has just been hung in the assembly hall at the home. It is a profile pose and the attitude is much that of Whistler's "Mother." The artist has caught the fine contour of face and head which made Mrs. Hopkins a notable figure in any group of women. The present board of the home, led by Mrs. Hugh Campbell Wallace, is urging the public to attend the benefit opening of the gardens of Dumbarton Oaks tomorrow for the home.

The Navy paused in affectionate tribute to a company of defenders of America yesterday for the unveiling of the mural painting by Charles R. Patterson of the battle between the American frigate Constellation and the French frigate l'Insurgente off the Leeward Islands during the naval war with France in 1799. The picture is in the Memorial Hall of the Annapolis Naval Academy.

The mural was presented by Mrs. Willard H. Brownson, widow of Rear Admiral Brownson, one-time superintendent of the United States Naval Academy, and was unveiled by their grandson, Midshipman Thomas C. Hart, son of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Thomas C. Hart.

The Brownsons are well known in Washington as they lived here many years. They were prominently identified with social, civic and philanthropic activities in the city and their daughters, Miss Caroline Brownson and Miss Harriet Brownson, were popular members of the younger set here. Miss Caroline Brownson became the wife of Thomas C. Hart, now Rear Admiral Hart, and Miss Harriet Brownson was married to a naval officer, afterward Rear Admiral Charles L. Hussey, whose recent death was a great loss to the Navy. Mrs. Hussey was active in the National Service Schools for Women and in the Woman's Naval Service during the World War.

One Christmas Day during the war a stunning bouquet of orchids was delivered to Mrs. Hussey from her husband, then on sea duty, address unknown even to his family. It made bright an otherwise cheerless Yuletide for Mrs. Hussey.

Lindsays Plan New York Trip To Greet Liner

British Envoy and Wife to Leave on Saturday for Queen Mary Fetes.

By Dudley Harmon.

The Ambassador of Great Britain and Lady Lindsay will go to New York Saturday to welcome the liner Queen Mary when she arrives at her East River pier Monday. Gala shipboard parties, dinners, and a grand ball at the Waldorf-Astoria are some of the events scheduled to mark the arrival of England's newest and largest liner.

On June 4 a banquet and reception will be held on one of the promenade decks. Among the guests of honor at the ball will be Sir Percy and Lady Bates, who will be passengers on the maiden voyage of the ship. Sir Percy is chairman of the board of the Cunard-White Star Line, and it is expected that he and Lady Bates will come to Washington toward the end of next week to pay an official visit at the British Embassy. Among other titled passengers on the first voyage will be Lord and Lady Essendon and Sir Alfred and Lady Booth, who were in this country last winter visiting friends in New York.

The English Speaking Union of the United States will entertain in honor of the officers and distinguished guests of the liner at a luncheon at the Waldorf Astoria. Speakers will include Sir Percy, Lord Essendon, and Sir Gerald Campbell, British Consul General in New York. In addition, Lady Lindsay has been named honorary patroness of a ball to be given at the Waldorf, proceeds of which will go to the Seamen's Church Institute of New York.

Although the list of passengers westward-bound when the Queen Mary returns to England has not been completed, among those on board will be Mrs. Henry M. Hoyt, of Washington who will have with her her daughter, Mrs. Nancy Hoyt Curtis, and Miss Anne E. Curtis. Among others going from Washington and according to the steamship company, hundreds were turned away—are Mr. and Mrs. James Carmack and Miss Gertrude Snell. One of the maiden voyage passengers who is returning from England is Mr. Frederick Simpich, an editor of the National Geographic magazine, who has been in London gathering material for a story.

Miss Phipps Wed To Stuart Janney

Cereony at Roslyn, N. Y., Unites Society Couple.

Miss Barbara Phipps, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Carnegie Phipps, of New York and Palm Beach, Fla., was married yesterday afternoon to Mr. Stuart S. Janney, jr., of Baltimore, in the Trinity Episcopal Church, Roslyn N. Y., near the Phipps country estate, according to a dispatch by the Associated Press. The Rev. Harry L. Rice, rector of the church, officiated.

The bride is a granddaughter of the late Mr. Henry Phipps, an associate of the late Andrew Carnegie, a niece of Mr. Ogden L. Mills, former Secretary of the Treasury, and a cousin of Mr. Winston F. C. Guest, Raymond Guest and Michael Phipps, polo stars.

Mr. Janney, a member of an old Maryland family, is a graduate of Princeton University and of the Harvard Law School.

World Tired of Whining Women, Says Author

Creator of "Mrs. O'Mally" Calls Her Character a 'Social Symptom.'

By Hope Ridings Miller.

THE WORLD is tired of whining women. Disgruntled wives and mothers and maiden aunts, who break into complaints at the slightest strain, have exhausted themselves and their companions both in life and in literature.

So thinks Anne Cameron, author, whose most widely known fictional character is "Mrs. O'Malley" an indomitable, optimistic type of woman who made the most (if not always the best) of her opportunities.

She pointed out that Mrs. O'Malley is a sort of "social symptom" of our times. A woman with three children, no money, a rattle-trap automobile and a home in first one tourist camp and then another would naturally be confronted with difficulties. The way in which this one matched her wits against the world wasn't exactly respectable, but she at least kept herself and her offspring from starving; and the fact she had courage and persistence and was virtually invincible made her appealing and her experiences more or less entertaining. Besides, she is a definite part of the modern American scene. That, also, enhances her appeal to American readers.

ANNE CAMERON, author, who believes the world is worn out with whining women, and therefore welcomes fictional characters who are courageous and indomitable.

Traveled 150,000 Miles.

Gathering her material for stories about Mrs. O'Malley, and her tin-can tourists, the author said she drove about 150,000 miles around the country, stopping in auto-camps, observing others who stopped there, hearing them grumble and wish they were "back home;" seeing them drive in and haggle over the price of cabins; seeing them set up housekeeping for a day and night, a week, or two weeks, and then pack up and move on.

She noted particularly the foibles and frailties of women in those camps and put some of them into the O'Malley stories. "But Mrs. O'Malley, herself, is not any one woman I observed in traveling around from camp to camp. She is a composite character," she explained. "I never saw any one like her. I'm sure I never shall."

Mrs. O'Malley made a hit with the first editor to whom Anne Cameron introduced her. Such a hit, in fact, he suggested that the author should write a series of stories about her. "I did about 30, I think," she said. "Then I put Mrs. O'Malley on the air and killed her."

"Those O'Malleys" was the title of the radio program for which Miss Cameron wrote the script. Broadcast from Hollywood, it ran four times a week for seven months.

"But much as I have been interested in the indomitable Mrs. O'Malley and her children, I didn't like writing radio programs around them," she admitted. "Their appeal is purely a humorous one, anyway, and you have no idea how difficult it is to make anything funny sound funny over the air. The only sure way is to thumb through an old joke book, find the most moth-eaten material you can, and incorporate that into your script. The average radio listener likes his jokes to be tottering with age, to be those his grandfather listened to, and liked. Fresh, humorous touches go right over his head."

Whether she will ever exhume Mrs. O'Malley for further stories, Miss Cameron has not yet decided. "But I don't think I ever shall. I'm trying to create another character now."

Pefers People to Writing.

She averages writing from six to eight short stories a year. "Not more than that, because I'm too lazy and like people much too well to spend all my time writing," she said. She also wrote a screen play for Will Rogers, but admitted "it was the worst thing he ever appeared in." Her first novel, "The House of Trujillo," is now being made into a motion picture. Published last year, this book is set in South America and is one of the few things she has ever written "that makes no attempt to carry an undercurrent of irony."

Child's Complaint Of "It's Not Fair" Should Be Heard

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

When a child begins to say, "It's not FAIR!" it is well to stop, look and listen at once. Either he is imitating someone else, or has a very definite sense of grievance, which should be traced back to its source and cleared up. The accusation may or may not be true, but, if he believes it, it is equally harmful either way.

The first time the child says "It's not fair" is the time to deal with the situation. If the attitude of mind which such a statement denotes becomes a habit, it is hard to get back to the first cause and eradicate it. No matter how hurried one is at the moment, the words "It's not fair" should be remembered. It may not be possible to have the matter out then and there, but at the next quiet moment the parent should recall the circumstances and the remark to the child and ask for an explanation.

If the youngster can give no good reason for saying such a thing, he must be made to understand that such an accusation cannot be made without just cause. If he has a reason, he should be given a fair chance to state his case and have it impartially judged.

Sometimes the child is right. Quite unconsciously the parent has discriminated against him, punished him for something he did not do, demanded of him more than he could be expected to accomplish, denied him something he should have had. If the parent acknowledges the error and tries to correct it, the child will have an increased respect for him.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Mother Who Would Entertain for Son's Bride Uncertain How to Proceed; Asks for Suggestions.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I like to read your correspondence in The Post, but I have never before written to ask your help. I do not live in Washington but in a small Virginia town. My son is to be married in the fall and since this is the first wedding in my immediate family, there are a few conventions that I am not sure about.

* * * *

My son has always gone with a different group socially from mine. He prefers a group which regards the social whirl as the main preoccupation in life. Mine is a more simple, homey life. We are not people of means. He is bringing his bride to our little town, where she has visited many times.

* * * *

I do not entertain very much but I want to do all I can to make his bride happy and comfortable in her new role. Would you advise me to attempt to entertain for her? And, if so, should I entertain both groups—their group and my own group? And what type of entertaining do you recommend? There are many in their group of friends whom I know only slightly. I will appreciate your help. M. G.

* * * *

A Sunday Tea.

DEAR M. G.: I suggest you entertain with a tea or an "at home" some afternoon from 4:30 or 5 o'clock to 7, and invite both your children's and your own friends. You can ask your son and daughter-in-law to draw up a list of their friends whom they would like to have asked; and to this you can add all your own friends whom you would like to have meet your new daughter. Some of your daughter's friends can be asked to assist, as well as some of your own.

* * * *

Your daughter-in-law can receive with you at the door, and introduce to you friends of her and her husband's whom you have not previously met, and you, of course, can present her to those of your group. Or, if you wish to do the thing a bit more formally, you can have a maid or a man at the door to take the names of arrivals and announce them to you.

* * * *

Sunday afternoon might be a nice time for the party. If you are uncertain how to go about planning the details of a tea, consult any good book of etiquette, preferably Emily Post's "Etiquette: The Blue Book of Social Usages." Here you will find all manner of tea entertainments outlined, from the simplest and most informal to the larger and more formal affairs.

* * * *

At a later date you might give a small dinner or buffet supper for a company of about 12 persons, half of whom might be your closest friends and the other half your son's and his bride's closest friends. If you have an inviting yard or garden, you might string up a few Japanese lanterns and serve cocktails out of doors before dinner. The buffet supper could be served from the dining room and chairs and tables comfortably arranged on porches and in the yard or garden. Another type of buffet supper which I have encountered hereabouts is a sort of "sit-down" affair, where a menu of delicious cold foods, with one or two hot dishes, is served to a company seated about the dining room table. At one of these, a very pleasant informal affair, guests were received in the garden at 7:30 for cocktails and the buffet supper, so called, was served in the dining room around 8:30. There were no place cards, and the hostess simply took her place and said, "So-and so, will you sit here?" and "Miss Blank, you are at So-and-so's right," etc.

* * * *

Whatever entertaining you do, do it in keeping with your mode of life and your means. Be simple, homey, friendly and hospitable, and your guests will have a good time, no matter how formal or giddy the entertaining to which they are accustomed. M. H.

For Love or Money

By ROB EDEN

Brenda Fayre, 22, has become involved in a world of lies because of her loyalty to her invalid sister, Lally, who cannot walk. Brenda, broke and at her wits' end, has accepted a job of which she is ashamed—"siren" for Walter Jason, salesman of worthless gold mine stock. Her job is to entertain Jason's prospective victims.

Brenda has been more easily able to deceive Lally about her work because Lally has fallen in love with Val Sargent, brilliant young writer, who lives in the apartment above theirs. Brenda has guessed her sister's secret love and knows it is because of Val that Lally is determined on an operation which may enable her to walk. And Brenda knows, too, that Val does not love her sister, but herself. To her, her own feelings in the matter are of no moment. She is solely concerned in protecting Lally and avoids Val. Jason also is in love with Brenda, though she scarcely realizes it. The person who does realize it is Ethel Rush, Jason's woman partner, who loves him.

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN.

"SWEET——"

"Please, Walter——"

"But you are sweet, Brenda. I don't think I've ever met anyone quite so lovely and quite as sweet."

"You promised me if I came to dinner with you, you'd be very good."

"That was to get you to come with me. You should have known I wouldn't be good. You should have known I had no intention of being good. I wanted you to come with me so I could tell you how lovely you are, how sweet, and how much I love you."

Brenda had known he wouldn't keep his promise. But it was a question of staying home and seeing Val, running the risk that Lally might guess his interest in her, or getting away from the flat and going out with Walter.

Last night, she had had a legitimate excuse to be away from the flat, for she was working. The date had been with a candy manufacturer in town on business, a man whom Walter had met at some club and whom he hoped would come through with $10,000 for the Gold Oak mine. The candy manufacturer had saved her from seeing Val. Walter was saving her tonight, for Val was having dinner at the flat.

Tomorrow night, but she couldn't be away every night. That wasn't fair to Lally. Yet she couldn't bear the way he looked at her, smiled at her, the way his eyes tried to telegraph to hers that he loved her. Afraid every minute that he'd give himself away to Lally, say something, do something and Lally would know. Above everything Lally couldn't know.

Lally's Secret.

She didn't know. She was the same Lally that she had been since Brenda had discovered her secret, and the secret shone like a light all around her. The room, the flat, everything seemed to glow with it. She didn't know yet, but Brenda didn't see how she could go much longer without knowing.

At night, when Brenda came home she came in nervously, hoping that Lally didn't know yet—that she could have her secret and her love a little longer. When she saw that everything was as usual, she breathed a great sigh of relief, and the nervousness went away. When she phoned home during the day it was the same thing, that frightful moment before she heard Lally's voice, the fear that Lally knew; and the same relief when the voice came over to her intensely happy, eager.

A week had gone by since Brenda had found out how Val felt about her, a week of torture for the girl. The discovery that Lally loved Val was shocking, but not as shocking as the fact that Val loved not Lally, but her.

Brenda had the feeling that she was standing still, and everything was moving very fast about her, so fast she didn't know which way to go, or where to turn. She had the feeling, too, that it was time to move, get along, and yet where to go was the problem. So she stayed, jostled here, jostled there, watching the flying faces that passed her, trying to read some decision for herself in them, and in the wind of the passionate movement about her.

"Please, Brenda, will you pay some attention to what I'm saying!" Walter begged.

"Sorry," she returned automatically.

"You don't look sorry. I've been trying to tell you that I love you."

"Really?"

"Really and truly. Can't you look amazed, or a trifle happy, or something? It is discouraging when you just sit there and don't care. Can't you pretend that you do care—a little?"

"I asked you yesterday not to say anything more like that——"

"And yet you came out with me tonight knowing that I would say the same thing over and over again, Brenda. You knew I wouldn't keep my promise. Promises like that aren't to be kept, and besides I like telling you that I love you. I always like to tell a lovely girl that I love her. Sometimes I do it when I don't love the girl, but I'm not saying what I don't mean tonight, dear. I mean every word I'm saying. You believe me, don't you?"

"No." But she couldn't help smiling across at him because his eyes were pleading so.

"How can I make you believe me?"

"Don't try, Walter. It's useless."

"But it isn't useless. Nothing's useless until you try, and I'm used to trying to make people believe me. That's my business."

They both laughed, and Walter reached in his coat pocket and pulled out a small black velvet box.

"You might look at that," he said casually as he pushed it across the table. Rather nice, I think."

No Presents.

The girl looked at the box, and then at him. "I don't want any presents from you, Walter."

"You haven't even looked at it yet. You don't even know what it is. Besides, if you don't take it, on the way home I'm going by the lake, and in the lake it will go."

"Don't be silly."

"I'm not silly. I'm serious; never was more serious in my life."

Brenda took the box in her fingers and snapped open the cover. Inside on a bed of pale gray was a ring, the diamond in the center was a brilliant large stone and around it smaller stones.

"Nice?" Walter asked.

"Very nice——" she said slowly, lifting out the ring.

"If you'll look inside the band you'll see a message for you."

She obediently looked inside the band and saw engraved on the platinum in minute letters, "Love to Brenda, September, 1935. W. L. J." The engraving circled the entire band.

"Would you mind slipping it on your finger and letting me see how it looks?"

"I wouldn't mind at all, Walter, but I'm not going to keep it."

The ring fitted perfectly, and Walter sighed with mock relief. "I usually get rings the right size. I'm a genius at guessing sizes. No, don't take it off," for she was pulling it off. "I want you to have it. I bought it for you. And it's not going to mean a thing, Brenda, unless you want it to mean something.

Keep It.

"I'm telling you that I love you, but I'm not asking you to marry me. I think you understand that. I'd like you to keep the ring even if you're never going to love me, although I'm going to try to make you."

The band of the ring was over the first knuckle on Brenda's finger. Another movement would have taken it off and put it back in the box. Instead her right hand stayed where it was for a few seconds, and the ring stayed in the middle of her finger, neither on nor off. Then the right hand pushed down instead of pulling up, and the ring was again fully on, glittering brightly in the dim light of the little booth.

"You are going to keep it?" Walter cried jubilantly.

"I am going to keep it." Defiantly.

"For a minute I was afraid you weren't. And you're going to wear it?"

"I'm going to wear it. It's a beautiful ring, Walter. Thank you. You don't know quite what you've done to me, giving it to me——"

"I don't understand——"

"You needn't." The feeling of static uncertainty was gone. Her mind was made up. She would wear Walter Jason's ring. That would solve one of her problems—Lally's problem.

MANNERS IN PUBLIC

RESTAURANT etiquette! Should you check the coats? Who follows first behind the head waiter, Bob or Lucy? Who goes first if there is no head waiter? Who orders dinner?

What a flustered feeling you can work up when dining in public, if you don't know the answers! Lucy follows the head waiter, of course, and Bob would lead the way if there were no head waiter. Bob checks his coat, Lucy keeps hers. Either the waiter or Bob helps her off with her wrap and pulls out her chair.

It's amazing how even experienced people may be weak on some point of etiquette. Our 40-page booklet, Etiquette for Every Day, warns of slips and tells how to avoid them. Written for our everyday American life, not for the problems of grand dukes and duchesses. Entertaining, simple, helpful.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Etiquette for Every Day," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Recipe Contest Prize Winners Of Week Listed

Mrs. Virginia Mundy Is Awarded First for Marshmallow Roll.

MARSHMALLOW-garnished sweet potatoes and marshmallow-sweetened frozen desserts led all other entries last week in The Post's contest for recipes including this light, toothsome sweet. Other than the sweet potato concoctions, desserts and salads featured most prominently among the recipes entered.

First prize, $5, is awarded Mrs. Virginia Mundy, 2400 Twentieth street northwest, for her recipe for cottage cheese - date - marshmallow roll. Second prize, $3, goes to Mrs. James Taylor, 719 Third street northeast, for her recipe for chocolate marshmallow roll. The three remaining prizes of $1 each go to Mrs. George Canalle, New Market, Va., for her recipe for chiffon meringue; to Miss Sarah Murphy, 1114 Morse street northeast, for her recipe for prune mallow, and to Miss Bertha E. Huplet, 288 First street, Eastport, Md., for her recipe for golden fluffy salad.

Cottage Cheese-Date-Marshmallow Roll.

1 pound marshmallows
10 large graham crackers
1 pound cottage cheese
½ pint heavy cream
½ pound pitted dates, sliced
½ cup finely chopped walnut meats

Crush crackers with rolling pin and set 1-3 aside. Add rest to served cottage cheese, and add cream, chopped dates and marshmallows which have been cut with hot scissors into quarters. Add half the nuts and mix well. Form into loaf or roll and coat with remaining cracker crumbs and finely chopped nuts. Wrap tightly in waxed paper and put in coldest part of refrigerator cabinet overnight. To serve, cut in slices.

Chocolate Marshmallow Roll.

4 eggs
1 cup sugar
1½ squares (ounces) chocolate, melted
¼ cup milk
Few grains salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 cup cake flour
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
Marshmallow cream

Beat the egg yolks and sugar until light. Add the chocolate, the milk and vanilla. Then fold in alternately the egg whites, beaten stiff, and the flour, salt and baking powder which have been sifted together. Pour into two pans, and bake in thin sheets. Turn out on paper, sifted over with confectioner's sugar. Quickly spread cake with marshmallow cream and roll up like a jelly roll. To serve cut in slices.

Chiffon Meringue.

10 marshmallows, cut in quarters
1 cup milk
1 cup whipping cream
2 egg whites
¼ cup powdered sugar

Let marshmallows stand overnight in the milk. Beat egg whites until they hold a point; beat in sugar, fold in cream, which has been beaten stiff; add softened marshmallows. Pile lightly on cold pie or strawberry shortcake.

Prune Mallow.

1 cup prune juice
20 marshmallows
1 cup whipping cream
1 cup prune pulp

Heat prune juice and marshmallows in top of double boiler until latter are melted. Remove from stove, add prune pulp, and turn into refrigerator tray to cool. Adjust refrigerator temperature to coldest setting. When mixture begins to stiffen, turn into chilled bowl, beat with rotary egg beater, add whipped cream, and return to refrigerator to freeze. Serves six to eight.

Golden Fluffy Salad.

1 cup dried apricots
1 cup water
24 marshmallows
1 cup pineapple juice
1 tablespoon lemon juice
3 oranges
1 cup whipping cream
½ cup mayonnaise
1 cup finely cut pineapple

Wash apricots; cook in the water until tender; cool, and cut in fine strips. Quarter marshmallows; soak in pineapple and lemon juice for 30 minutes. Peel oranges; remove sections from membranes and cut in small pieces. Whip cream; add mayonnaise. Combine all ingredients; pour into 3 1-pound baking powder cans (or pour into refrigerator pan). Freeze in automatic refrigerator 3 to 4 hours, or pack in 3 parts ice and 1 part salt for 4 hours. If frozen in cans, dip quickly in hot water to unmold. To serve cut in thick slices and serve on a bed of greens.

New Fly Swatter Penetrates Corners

A fly swatter that penetrates into corners, attacks lampshades without damage, doesn't scratch polished surfaces and gets its game even on rounded corners has made its appearance. All of this because the nature of the swatter section is a resilient, reinforced sponge rubber which is flexible and yet has body enough for efficiency. The handle is the usual stiff type—sufficiently long to make the implement completely functional.

Furthermore, while this swatter renders the fly hors de combat, it does not stain home furnishings by mashing the insect unduly.

Hollandaise Ideal Sauce for Asparagus Tips

Though a real Hollandaise has always been considered by the epicure as the perfect sauce for hot vegetables, it is not as popular with housewives as it might be, because it is both tricky and expensive to prepare. But the inexperienced cook working on a limited budget can charm the palate of her husband with this inexpensive sauce pictured above. See accompanying story for recipe.

Hollandaise Perfect Dressing For All Sorts of Vegetables

Rapidly Becoming a 'Must' on Most Grocery Lists; Lemon Flavor Adds Zest to Delicacy Once Reserved for Special Occasions.

The making of a Hollandaise sauce has remained for years in the realms of black magic. The original true Hollandaise must have been put together by a secret society of Parisian chefs who went off in the dark of the moon to whip up this excellent but always tricky hot sauce.

Although the epicurean delights of Hollandaise as the perfect sauce for hot vegetables have always been much admired in American households, few indeed are the cooks who have had the courage to make it a feature of every day menus.

But these days, with the aid of a salad dressing and a bit of lemon juice, a delightful 10-minute Hollandaise can be the adornment of any dinner table. With the new type of salad dressing—neither too oily nor too sharp—available everywhere on markets today—the perfect basis for an estimable hot dressing is ready on call. Salad dressing, with its many uses for salads of all sorts, has come to be a staple in most households, and the addition of this new and interesting use for it makes it a "must" on most grocery lists.

The new 10-minute Hollandaise, hot, spicy and smooth, is the perfect dressing for all sorts of new spring vegetables—for asparagus tips, broccoli, for artichokes. These green spring beauties are so delicately flavored, so tender and tempting that they deserve a setting which pleasantly points up their inimitable goodness. The mild but distinctly lemon-flavored essence of this sauce provides a subtle flattery for all of the season's delicious vegetables, an intangible accent on flavor.

This simple new kind of Hollandaise is prepared thus: Place one cup of salad dressing in the top of a double boiler. Heat over boiling water for about 10 minutes. When the dressing is thoroughly heated, add two tablespoons of lemon juice. Mix well and serve on hot cooked asparagus, broccoli or other spring vegetables.

A hot macedoine plate, with Hollandaise as the glorifying agent, is both unusual and most attractive at this season of the year.

Hot Macedoine Plate, With 10-Minute Hollandaise.

Artichokes, cooked
Cooked beets
Cooked peas
Pimento strips
1 cup salad dressing
2 tablespoons lemon juice

Place a hot cooked artichoke on each plate. Add a portion of cooked beets and one of peas, garnishing the latter with a pimento strip. Serve with Hollandaise sauce made with salad dressing placed over hot water for 10 minutes, then blend well with the lemon juice.

1 cup salt codfish
2 cups raw potatoes
2 tablespoons milk or cream
2 eggs
1 tablespoon butter or other fat
Pepper

Place the fish and potatoes together in enough boiling water to cover them, and let them boil until the potatoes are done. Drain thoroughly, mash the potatoes and fish and beat them well with a fork, adding white pepper, butter, milk or cream. The mass should be made light with vigorous beating. Then beat in the well-stirred yolks of two eggs, and lastly fold in the well-whipped whites. Arrange the souffle in an oiled baking dish and bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) about 20 minutes, until it is brown.

Today's Health Talk

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Relief in Angina Pectoris.

Many are familiar with the condition called intermittent claudication. The symptom is described as a pain, ache, or cramp localized in certain muscles and brought on by exercise. If the signal is not heeded the muscles will cease to function. One may be walking along the street and be seized suddenly with a sharp, stabbing pain in the calf of the leg. So intense is the attack that the individual stops short. After a minute or two the cramp usually disappears. Walking may then be resumed, possibly at a slower pace, without recurrence. In some cases the spasm will reappear periodically until an extensive recovery period of rest has been provided.

A curious thing about these affairs is that they do not occur during nonactive periods, and generally a few minutes of quiet, even without change of posture, is all that is required. The sequence of events is supposed to arise because the muscles have been deprived of sufficient blood for their nourishment.

One of the most distressing types of pain with which man is blessed (?) is angina pectoris. Whenever we deprive a muscle of its needed supply of blood there is only one way in which the fact can become known and that is through the sense of pain. The heart is a huge, muscular structure that must be fed constantly, and the vessels that supply life giving fluid are called the caronary arteries. Pain—angina pectoris—follows whenever too little blood flows through these channels.

The various forms of treatment attempt to prevent spasms of the arteries and to remove all the factors bringing about lack of blood. Drugs such as nitroglycerin and amyl nitrate produce immediate relaxation and hence cessation of pain.

In 1926 Frey and Kraut isolated a constituent of the urine which lowered the blood pressure of animals when injected intravenously. Later they found that fluid from a pancreatic cyst produced similar effects. Other workers then perfected an extract of the pancreas and, upon injecting it under the skin of patients with angina, noted that the severity and frequency of seizures were diminished.

Cake, Other Food Amply Protected With 3-Piece Set

A new note in dust protectors is now found in a three-piece set for cake and other food. Round in shape and made of cellulose film, laminated to wide mesh gauze, in double thickness, these covers are useful in keeping cake, pie or stacks of sandwiches moist and dustproof until the guests are ready to partake. The set consists of three covers ranging in size to accommodate a glorified layer cake from the caterer's or a small pie from your own oven.

The moisture proof quality has the added advantage of making these sets easy to clean.

Formal Meal Each Evening Aids Manners

Children Never Should Be Corrected While Still at the Table.

By Margaret Wallace.

Many Washington households have "a company dinner" every night. This does not mean that there is always company. But most parents believe that good manners in the home contribute to good manners when the family goes out of the home. Manners of the family dinner tables have a real effect on the future of the boys and girls who gather about these dinner tables.

The well-bred family "dresses for dinner." This does not necessarily mean donning dinner clothes or even changing the costume. But it does mean that each person about the family dinner table, adults and children alike, present a neat, fresh appearance.

The family dinner table should be set as carefully as when there are guests. Mother may not want to use her best glassware and china every day, but the china and glassware that is used can be carefully arranged. It is possible in these days for every family to have some kind of a centerpiece on the family dinner table. A pretty bowl filled with artificial flowers or fruit will do. Some families place real fruit in a colorful bowl. When flowers are possible they add to the festive air.

It is not good form to correct the table manners of a member of the family in the presence of the others. If this is necessary it should be done quietly after the meal is over.

Children should be instructed to follow the examples set by their parents in eating and in the use of table implements. Very young children who come to the table should be seated by one or the other parent and quietly guided.

In most households, even servantless ones, very young children eat before the family dinner hour. Sometimes when the family dines early, the small children have a low table by the side of their mother's chair. But if the children do not dine with the family, their table manners should be watched carefully. Even in the most formal households very young children are allowed to come to the family dinner table for midday luncheons on Sundays and holidays. Older children who still eat at a separate time from the rest of the family, are sometimes allowed in these formal households to come to the table for dessert. Parents and governesses alike believe this is part of their education.

Query—My sister brings her two children to Sunday midday dinner at our house very often. My two children have very good manners and are very quiet at meal times. My sister's children have not been taught how to use their knives and forks properly. They talk all the time during the meal. Do you think it would be polite for me to mention certain rules of good table manners to them when they are guests at my house?

Answer—It would be better to talk to the children alone. Or perhaps your sister would not be offended if you call her attention to the children's manners. Do not correct them before your own children. You might invite them to luncheon with your children some time without their mother. You could tell the children that you are proud of the good manners of your children and ask them to be polite.

Query—How do you eat artichokes?

Answer—The leaves are broken from the stems with the fingers one at a time and then the tip is dipped into the sauce. The soft pulp with the sauce on it is the only part to be eaten. Lay the leaf back on the plate.

Query—How should children be addressed by servants?

Answer—Very young children are called by their first names. Older children are called Master or Miss prefixed to their names. Boys and girls of high-school age should always be addressed as Mr. William or Miss Dorothy.

Post Recipe Contest for Week Helps Introduce Picnic Season

Ideal Dishes for Outing Must Appeal to Appetite, Carry Well and Not Grow Loggy on Trip; Entries Must Be Filed by Saturday.

DECORATION DAY brings the official opening of the picnic season. And so what could be more appropriate this week than a recipe contest sponsored by The Post with picnic dishes as the theme?

There is a real art to picnic dishes. First of all, they must appeal to the outdoor appetite. Second only in importance to appetite appeal, the picnic dish must be one that will carry well, arriving at its destination as attractive and fresh as when it went into the picnic hamper. Sandwiches that get soggy upon standing, cakes that crumble, salads that wilt or grow soft—all these are taboo as far as the picnic menu is concerned.

But there are many dishes just made to order for the picnic basket. These are the recipes requested by The Post this week. Cash awards will be given to the five best picnic dishes submitted this week. First prize will be $5, second prize, $3, and the three remaining prizes, $1 each.

Your picnic dish may be one that it prepared at home, or if you prefer the kind that is prepared over the picnic fire.

To enter the contest merely write out your favorite picnic recipe and send it to Dorothea Duncan in care of The Washington Post. Be sure to mail your recipe in time to reach this office by Saturday morning.

Garden Federation To Gather Today.

The annual meeting of the Maryland Federation of Garden Clubs will be held today, at the old Quaker Meeting House, Sandy Spring, with the Little Garden Club and the Howard County Garden Club, entertaining jointly, when Mrs. Milton H. Bancroft and her sister, Mrs. Joseph Tilton, entertained the Little Garden Club of Sandy Spring for luncheon at their home, Norwood.

The gardens adjoining the 200-year-old box walk of Norwood, as well as the old colonial home, and the garden of Mrs. William H. Hough, with a number of show places and gardens in Howard County, will be visited after luncheon. Mrs. Smead Alvord, sr., and Mrs. Dean Acheson were appointed to assist the hosts at Norwood in receiving the guests with Mrs. William H. Hough, having Mrs. Ervin Kemp and Mrs. Eric Englund to assist her. The reception committee at the meeting house will include the president of the Little Garden Club, Mrs. A. Douglas Farquhar, Mrs. Henry W. Owings, Mrs. Mahlon Kirk 4th, with Mrs. Mortimer O. Stabler, chairman of decorations. Mrs. Kirk and Mrs. P. Garland Ligon were named to act as hosts at Olney Inn during the luncheon period, and Mrs. Charles E. Bond and Mrs. Smead Alvord, jr., will be hosts to those lunching at Pheasant Farm Inn.

After the last business meeting a talk of herbs was given by Mrs. Raleigh Chinn, of Rockville.

Sprinkling of Spice Helps Buns, Rolls

Women with gardens, and even women with nothing bigger than a window box, are busy with seeds at this time of year, and it should be a logical transition to turn attention to the great variety of seed spices which are planted on top of aromatic batters and doughs instead of deep in the earth. The seed spices are numerous, but are sadly neglected in American kitchens.

Among the better known seed spices are caraway, poppy and anise. However, this list should be augmented by cardamon, coriander and cummin, each of which gives a distinctive flavor to foods. For rolls and buns and kuchen these are often sprinkled on top, but many cookies are given new elegance by stirring a seed spice right into the dough.

For anise cookies, use any sugar cookie recipe and add ¾ cup of seeds for every three cups of flour. For caraway, add 3 teaspoons of seeds for three cups of flour.

Women of 30 Nations Aid in Novel Food Recipes

Menus of Country Folk of World Gathered by Association.

By Dorothea Duncan.

COUNTRY women the world over have swapped recipes over their back fences or in their parlors for generations. This custom is as general in foreign countries as it is in the United States. But never, until this year, have rural women of different nations exchanged their native recipes. Stories have been written, of course, about the famous dishes of many countries, but a real cook book with recipes for native dishes from the rural districts of 30 countries is a novel and interesting publication.

Just such a cook book has been made possible through the work of the many organized groups of country women from 30 nations which are affiliated with the Associated Country Women of the World, which is holding its third triennial conference in Washington next week.

The cook book is the result of a special project upon which these many groups of women have been working for the past few years. It was the idea of the various groups that the publication of many traditional recipes, never before printed and heretofore confined to one country or locality, the exchange of information on national practices in conserving and storing food products, of ways of combining different foods in one course or dish, which have been handed down through generations but are rarely found in modern cook books, may affect farm diets in many countries.

Food Preservation International.

A survey of the book proves that many national traditional methods of preserving or drying food products would be applicable in other countries, and the "helpful hints" from the farmhouse wives of one nation may be useful to women everywhere engaged in feeding farm families.

Many of the recipes, too, although they describe the preparation of national specialties, call for ingredients available to farm homemakers anywhere. It is entirely practical for the American rural housewife to make dried apricot mebos, a popular confection in Natal, or Scotch oatmeal-meal wafers, for her children's school lunches, and there is no reason why Boston brown bread could not become a popular Saturday night dish in the rural homes of Latvia.

Government departments, embassies and legations, as well as rural women's groups of all the countries included were active in collecting the material for this unique cook book. The recipes from each group and questionaires pertaining to food production on the farm, conservation, use in the home, and disposal of surplus food products were filled out by the rural women and sent to the London headquarters of the Associated Country Women of the World, where the information was tabulated and compiled by experts.

Book Is Practicable.

This book has been compiled by Lady Howard and Mr. Sholto Watt, editors; Baroness Schroeder, Mrs. Charles Russell, Mrs. Alfred Watt and Miss Elise Zimmern, representing the Associated Country Women of the World, and Mrs. E. Bunting, representing "The Countrywoman."

The practicability of the recipes from the rural sections of foreign countries for use in varying our American menus can be understood after reading the following recipes printed in this comprehensive study of world-wide cookery.

Cucumber Soup (Samoa).

Two ounces butter, 2 ounces flour, 2 cups milk, 2 cups or more, according to quantity required, of good, light stock. Melt the butter in saucepan, add flour and milk, and stir in a double boiler until it thickens. Then add stock and a grated cucumber. Season with salt and pepper and a little mace, or according to individual taste.

One sole, ½ ounce butter, 1 tablespoon flour, salt and pepper, 1 ounce almonds, lemon.

Skin and fillet the sole and wash and dry the fillets. Blanch the almonds and chop roughly. Heat the butter, dip the fish into the seasoned flour, and fry carefully in the butter. While frying cut thin rounds of lemon, or lemon butterflies. Dish the fish on a hot dish, without a dish paper. Put the almonds into the pan and fry in the butter until a golden brown. Sprinkle on top of the fish, squeeze a little lemon juice over the top and garnish with the lemon rind.

Stuffed Pigeons With Mushrooms.

Forcemeat
1 ounce butter or bacon fat
2 tablespoons chopped onion
½ pint stock
1 teaspoon lemon juice
Seasoning
1 cup shredded mushrooms
1 dessert spoon flour

First prepare some ordinary forcemeat, then bone the pigeons. Lay the birds on a board with back uppermost and cut through skin, down center of back, cutting flesh carefully, being careful not to make holes in the skin. Disjoint the legs and wings unboned. Spread the pigeons out on a board. Season with salt and pepper and put forcemeat in center of each; fold over and sew into their original shape; truss up as for roasting and dust over with flour. Melt butter or bacon fat in saucepan. When very hot, brown pigeons well on all sides, then lift onto a plate. Add chopped onions to the fat and brown. Add the flour and brown also, then pour in the stock and stir till boiling. Now return the pigeons to the pan, cover and cook slowly. When tender, lift out, remove trussing strings and keep warm. Skim sauce left in pan, add lemon juice, and then the mushrooms, simmer for a little, then pour around pigeons. If fresh mushrooms are used, allow them time to cook before serving.

Mien-tao (Chinese Noodles).

Flour and water, any kind of flour-bean, kao-liang, millet or wheat.

Mix flour and water into dough as for bread, with flour on the board, roll dough to ⅛-inch thickness. Fold up the dough, back and forth in a pile about 3 inches wide, and then cut up the pile in fine strips. The water must be boiling when the strips are put in, and they are taken out when the water resumes boiling. The noodles are then put into individual bowls, salt, vinegar, oil and pepper and some finely chopped vegetables added, to taste.

Cooking Hints From Samoa, S. Africa, China Show Universality.

Chewing on Clove Is Ancient Custom

The custom of chewing on a clove to perfume the breath had its origin in the third century B. C. among the Chinese. These Oriental people probably traded with the natives of the Spice Islands, where the clove tree is profuse, long before Europe was conscious of their existence.

The Portuguese were the first European nation to deal in cloves, but a century later the Dutch got possession of the East Indies and monopolized the trade, even going so far as to limit the growth of the clove tree to a single large island. This regulation had to be withdrawn quickly, for it was a native custom throughout the islands to plant a clove tree at the birth of each child as a sort of record of its age. The Dutch edict to destroy existing trees and forbidding the planting of new ones stirred the chieftains to rebellion. Finally the Dutch capitulated, and the clove tree still flourishes in the East Indian group. Zanzibar and Pemba, however, islands off the coast of Africa, now yield about 90 per cent of the world's supply of this spice.

Florida Canal, Quoddy Dam Before Senate

Commerce Committee Vote Is Favorable; Vandenberg to Fight Proposal.

By the Associated Press.

An Administration effort to revive the Florida ship canal and the Passamaquoddy tide-harnessing projects, upon which Congress once before had turned thumbs down, yesterday was brought before the Senate.

The Senate Commerce Committee, by a divided vote, decided upon a favorable report on a resolution that would authorize a new engineers' study of the two huge projects, and, if a favorable report is made to the President, an immediate allocation of $19,000,000 for continuing work upon them.

The action promptly brought forth signs of a heated struggle on the floor of the Senate, where the major tax and relief measures must be fought through within little more than a week if Congress is to meet its June 6 adjournment date.

Vandenberg Plans Fight.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, who led the original fight against the two projects, announced his intention of opposing the resolution. He added:

"If this Administration, at the moment when it is sweating over the job of extracting $600,000,000 more from the taxpayers, is prepared to waste one-third of that amount on two utterly uneconomic projects, I'm perfectly willing to let Congress vote and the people decide whether to approve this sort of indefensible exploitation, extravagance and recklessness."

Senator Fletcher (Democrat), Florida, who has been fighting to save the Florida ship canal since the Senate turned down an appropriation for it weeks ago, said he would call up the resolution today. He forecast its approval.

Introduced by Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic leader, following a White House conference, the resolution was approved by the Commerce Committee on a 12-to-5 vote, with eight of the ballots cast by proxy.

Would Provide for Survey.

Specifically, it would authorize the President to appoint two boards of engineers of three members each to study the two projects and report by June 20. If the conclusions are favorable he would be empowered to allocate $10,000,000 more to the ship canal, provided its total cost would not be more than $150,000,000, and $9,000,000 to the Maine tide project if the total cost would not be more than $42,000,000.

Senator Robinson said the resolution probably would be amended on the Senate floor to provide more time for the studies.

Body of Woman Found in Potomac

The body of an unidentified woman about 25 years old was found floating in the Potomac River near the Naval Research Laboratory at Bellevue, D. C., early yesterday. It was taken to the District Morgue.

Homicide squad detectives were called into the case when no marks of identification could be found on the woman. She was fully clothed, wearing a blue cotton dress encircled by a wide, red belt. She wore high-heeled shoes that bore the name of a downtown shoe store and flesh-colored stockings.

The body was noticed floating on top of the water by the skipper of a tugboat. Unable to stop the tug, which was towing a barge, the river man called the Harbor Police. The body had been in the water about four days.

At the District Morgue no marks of violence were found on the body. Detective Sergt. George Darnell, chief of the homicide squad, said it was a case of drowning.

Elusive Treasure-Hunting Ship Bobs Up, Only to Vanish Again

S. S. 'Girl Pat,' Believed Seeking $15,000,000 Loot Buried by Captain Kidd, Reappears for Brief Time on African West Coast.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 26.—A deep-dyed mystery of the sea, involving the missing motor vessel Girl Pat and a tale of Capt. Kidd's loot, darkened tonight when the 25-ton Will o' the Wisp bobbed up on the African west coast, only to vanish just as suddenly.

Lloyds agents, who have kept a sea eye peeled for the Girl Pat in many ports since early April, today reported she had reached Dakar, Senegal, with her food and water gone and her mate ready for a hospital.

But tonight, Lloyds was informed the ship suddenly put out again to sea after the skipper announced he wanted to try his engines. It was reported the craft took on fresh water, food and fuel.

The Girl Pat has led owners and underwriters a merry chase over many leagues.

An adventurous band of English fishermen vanished with the ship, the owners charged, and were believed to have chugged away in search of the $15,000,000 in gold Capt. Kidd purportedly buried in the Salvage Islands.

Lloyd agents in the Canary Islands previously had reported the ship sighted off the Salvages, about 180 miles south of Madeira. Dakar, westernmost tip of Africa, is many miles farther south.

Charges of barratry, or marine theft, had been lodged by the owners and Scotland Yard had been asked to consult the admiralty on sending a warship to chase the treasure hunters.

The Girl Pat disappeared from Grimsby, England, on April 2, supposedly bound for the North Sea fishing grounds on a regular trip for her owners.

Ten days later, however, she appeared suddenly at the port of Corcubion, on the northwest coast of Spain. There Chief Engineer G. F. Jefferson was left ashore and the craft once more put to sea, destination unknown, leaving behind an unpaid $1,175 bill for supplies and repairs.

By that time the owners had given the craft up for lost, but further inquiry disclosed a strange story which indicated the skipper, Capt. George Osborne, didn't intend to go fishing at all.

Before departing, Osborne consulted an old mariner who had visited the Salvages on previous treasure hunting expeditions. From him he received maps and charts of the island region where Kidd's "buried treasure" and another big hoard of gold, lost when a Spanish vessel foundered 20 years ago, have lured numerous adventurers.

All U. S. Alert As 50,000 Vote To Join Strikes

Thousands More Involved in Disputes Threatening Walkouts.

By the Associated Press.

Police and National Guard officials were asked last night to take precautionary measures in more than half a dozen sections of the country, where thousands of industrial and agricultural workers were on strike.

At least 50,000 were involved in the walkouts, according to labor estimates, and thousands more were involved in disputes of a varying nature which threatened to cause strikes.

There were few instances of trouble in the strike centers, the most serious being clashes between strikers and non-strikers in the California vegetable fields, where three men have been shot.

Thirty Awaiting Trial.

At Akron, Ohio, 30 union workers of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. awaited trial on charges of violating a State anti-rioting statute. Three National Guard officers watched the plant.

At Portsmouth, Ohio, an affidavit was filed in Municipal Court charging a special guard for the Wheeling Steel Corporation with directing company guards to fire 40 or 50 shots at a group of pickets early yesterday. The guard was Al Bridwell, 48, former sheriff of Scioto County. National Guard officers investigated strikers' requests for protection. About 5,500 workers are affected.

Union leaders at Syracuse, N. Y., ordered a strike of all worker in six plants of Remington-Rand, Inc., situated in the East and Middle West. They estimated 6,000 workers were involved; company officials placed the figure at 4,200.

6,000 Barbers Called Out.

In New York, 6,000 barbers in lower Manhattan were ordered on strike. Anthony Merlino, union vice president, said 23,000 barbers in the Bronx, Brooklyn and the Times Square and west side sections of Manhattan already were out.

In east Arkansas, the Southern Tenant Farmers Union asserted 3,000 workers were on strike, but cotton planters insisted cultivation of fields was under way as usual.

Six thousand loggers were out in Oregon. One mill, employing 300 men, was shut down for lack of logs.

About 1,500 persons in various industries were on strike in the Philadelphia area.

1,000 Strike on Coast.

In the Los Angeles area, 1,000 were involved in the celery field strike. Two hundred ships' carpenters, calkers, and joiners walked out at San Pedro.

Labor spokesmen at Milwaukee estimated 2,500 were involved in strikes in Wisconsin.

Other strikes and the number involved:

300 Butchers Idle.

Sioux Falls, S. Dak.—Three hundred butchers at Morrell Packing plant.

Minneapolis—About 500 millrights, fur and cereal workers.

St. Paul—Fifty laundry workers.

Indiana—about 175 on strike, including 100 crane operators in stone quarries, 50 employes in enamel works at Terre Haute, and 25 in Kowomo Pottery plant.

Des Moines, Iowa—One hundred of the 150 employes of the Burch Biscuit Co.

200 Are Besieged.

Portsmouth, Ohio, May 26 (AP).—About 200 office workers and company police remained under virtual siege within the strike-closed plant of the Wheeling Steel Corporation tonight.

R. M. Pilkington Federal labor conciliator, said after a telephone conference with Secretary of Labor Francis Perkins in Washington that "neither side has yielded a thing" in the strike which has kept 5500 workers idle since Friday.

Two National Guard observers, sent here by Gov. Martin L. Davey, and Adjt. Gen. Emil Marx, reported there was no need at present for troops, although sporadic clashes between pickets and non-striking employes resulted in minor injuries to more than a score.

Most of the office force and company police inside the plant have been there since Friday.

Remington-Rand Guarded.

Syracuse, N. Y., May 26 (AP).—Police tonight guarded six Remington-Rand factories, deserted by an estimated 6,000 workers called out in protest of the company's announced plan to move its Syracuse plant to Ilion. Labor leaders said the strike affected all factory workers in the six Remington-Rand plants.

Remington-Rand factories in Ilion, N. Y.; Tonawanda, N. Y.; Middletown, Conn.; Norwood, Ohio,; Marietta, Ohio, and Syracuse were affected. Picketing began at the company's plants in Middletown, Ilion, Tonawanda and Syracuse. There was no disorder.

Breach Widened.

Chicago, May 26 (AP).—The breach between the International Seamen's Union and striking members of the Atlantic and Gulf district was widened tonight as each side rejected proposals to end the controversy.

David Grange, a vice president of the I. S. U., said it would be "a fight to the finish," after the strikers committee left for New York with the union executive board's counter offer—a three-point plan calling for prompt ending of what it referred to as the "alleged strike." Predicting the board's plan would be rejected, Joseph Curran, leader of the four-man committee from the striking group, said it "offers nothing."

NRA Still Argued.

On the eve of the first anniversary of the invalidation of NRA by the Supreme Court, labor and industry still argued last night over effects of the abolition of Blue Eagle codes.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, called this week's outburst of strikes "a manifestation of what was bound to follow the Supreme Court's decisions destroying such great principles as the NIRA and Guffey act established."

D. C. to Pipe Water to Aid Sanitorium

System Will Be Aided by Prince Georges, Sultan Says.

After more than three years of trying to drill a satisfactory well to supply water for the Children's Tuberculosis Sanatorium at Glenn Dale, Md., water will be piped to the institution from the District and Prince Georges County systems, it was announced yesterday by Col. Dan Sultan, District engineer commissioner.

The well would have cost around $10,000. The new plan will cost the District approximately $90,000 for construction of a water main from Cheverly, Md., to Glenn Dale, and the annual charges for the water which the Washington and Suburban and Sanitary Commission computes against Washington.

Proposal to construct an independent water main from the District line to Glenn Dale was discarded, Col. Sultan said, because of its prohibitive cost. The District faced the responsibility not only of constructing 19 miles of water main, but also the difficulties of acquiring the right of way for its line, he pointed out.

Negotiations have been under way with the Sanitary Commission for some time looking to providing city water for the sanatorium. The commisison has authority to condemn right of way. The District does not have that right through Maryland. The District water supply system already is connected with the Prince Georges County water system, at the District line, and is carried as close as Cheverly to Glenn Dale. The sanitary commission mostly uses its own water and depends on the District water as an emergency supply.

Col. Sultan said it probably would be necessary to construct about 4 miles of water main from Cheverly to the sanatorium. Cost of construction would amount to about $150,000. Of this the District would be charged approximately $90,000. The difference would be allowed for extending the water supply to intermediate points.

The connecting main, it was pointed out, would begin with a circumference of 16 inches and would be reduced to 10 inches at the sanatorium.

It is estimated that the water supply requirements of the sanatorium will not exceed 200 gallons per person per day. The sanatorium is to have 700 beds for patients. It is estimated the staff will number 300 more persons.

Construction of the well has been pursued by direction of Col. Sultan, because, if prognostications were borne out the santorium would have had an adequate water supply at a considerable less cost than would result from extending the pipe line.

The Virginia Well & Machinery Co. held the contract for drilling the well. The company began drilling one well and that was abandoned. It began drilling another and lost its drilling tackle at the 830 foot level last December. Weeks were passed in trying to get the lost tackle out of the hole. Finally the contractor went around the tackle still in the hole. He struck core rock yesterday at 950 feet depth. An adequate supply of water was found. Quality of the water, however, was no better than that found at less depth. The water was healthful, but it contained minute mineral and other particles which would have to be filtered out before it would be economically safe to use in the sanatorium machinery.

37 Graduated From Gallinger Nursing School

Diplomas Presented by Dr. Bocock; Dr. Morgan Is Speaker.

Thirty-seven girls, in snowy, white uniforms, were graduated last night from the Capital City School of Nursing at Gallinger Hospital before an audience that packed the auditorium.

Unlike most commencement exercises, it was the graduates who were the most comfortable last night. While the girls looked cool and fresh, spectators and friends were uncomfortable in the crowded room.

From a flower-decked stage, Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent of Gallinger Hospital, presented the diplomas. Dr. William Gerry Morgan, past president of the American Medical Association and former dean of Georgetown Medical School, made the address to students.

Following presentation of nursing society pins by Superintendent of Nurses Catherine E. Moran, the girls took the "Florence Nightingale pledge." The valedictory was given by Edna Mae Howard, honor student for the three-year course.

School to Stage Rose Show Today

Today will be Rose Day at John Burroughs School, Eighteenth and Monroe streets northeast.

Carrying the finest blooms from their home gardens, the boys and girls will come to school this morning with red, pink, yellow and white roses. They will bring single specimens and elaborate displays.

Each class will select its best entries and send them to the school auditorium, where judges from the Potomac Rose Society will pick the winners.

The roses, with ribbons attached to the prize exhibits, will go on display to parents and friends at 11 a. m.

Mistrial Feared, Juror Put in Wheel Chair.

Unwilling to risk a mistrial in the long-drawn-out Willacy County, Tex., conspiracy case that has been on trial in District Supreme Court for five weeks, Justice F. D. Letts yesterday ordered deputy marshals to provide a wheel chair for Moe L. Lounsbury, 250-pound alternate juror.

Lounsbury was stricken with a minor ailment last week, and the trial of seven men, charged with conspiring to defraud the Government in connection with the Texas project, was postponed until Monday to give him a chance to get medical attention.

Yesterday Lounsbury was comfortably rolled about the courtroom in a wheel chair, to the envy of others of the jury. Originally, 14 jurors were chosen, 2 of them being alternates. Last week one alternate became ill, and now Lounsbury is ailing. The trial is expected to last another month.

Beard's Counsel Seek Reduction In His Sentence

Sam R. Beard, one-time overlord of the city's gaming establishments, yesterday appealed to Justice Joseph W. Cox in the District Supreme Court to reduce his sentence of from two to six years. Meantime the 12 men convicted of conspiring with him to violate the gaming laws, sought also to have their sentences of from one to three years reduced, or, in the alternative, to have probation granted them.

Justice Cox rejected a similar plea last month, but at the request of defense attorneys agrred to keep open the term of court so that he could maintain jurisdiction of the 13 defendants and, if he chose could modify the punishment.

A battery of attorneys, including former United States Attorney Leo A. Rover, Martin F. O'Donoghue, John J. Sirica, Maurice McInerney and Joseph W. Sherier, yesterday in papers filed with the court maintained the sentences given their clients were out of proportion when sentences given others in similar cases were considered.

They pointed out that the alleged conspirators did not drag persons into their place to bet, and that there was no violence in any form. The main charge, they said, was that Beard and his lieutenants disseminated race track information services to places in the District where bets were taken on the basis of up-to-the-minute track information.

Beard is in the Atlanta Penitentiary while the others are at Lorton. The alleged master-mind of the enterprise is not eligible for probation because of a prior record, but the others, described as mere employes, are. Action on the plea will be taken next week.

P. U. C. to Hold Public Hearing In Bus Wrangle

Reverses Its Prior Stand on Monroe Street Issue and Averts Suit.

Whether Capital Transit Co. buses shall run only over Monroe street northeast or shall run one way on that street and return on Lawrence or Newton street is to be decided at a public hearing to be called by the Public Utilities Commission.

Decision to hold a public hearing on the question was reached at an informal meeting between members of the commission and William A. Roberts, people's counsel.

The commission rejected the proposal of petitioning residents of Monroe street that buses running two ways on their street unduly increased the traffic hazards and annoyances. After much maneuvering Monroe street residents, headed by A. G. Sievers, asked Roberts to intervene. Roberts did. The commission said he, too, was out of order.

Public threat to appeal to the District Supreme Court to compel the commission to grant a hearing on the proposal was disspelled during the meeting in the course of which Roberts said he did not want to achieve a court victory against the commission and the commission said it did not want to be put in the position of having to defend itself against the people's counsel.

Residents of Monroe street do not want buses running east and west on their street. Residents of adjoining streets, now free of buses, are reputed to be equally opposed to having buses put on their streets.

Junkman Slugged And Robbed of $20

Struck on the head by unidentified assailants while he was opening his shop yesterday, Edward Becker, 33, of 646 Newton place northwest, suffered a fracture of the skull. His condition in Providence Hospital is said to be critical.

According to police, Becker, the proprietor of a junk shop in the first block of Virginia avenue southwest, had gone to his shop shortly after 7 a. m. He was found unconscious in front of the door by a passerby.

At the hospital he recovered consciousness long enough to tell police he was truck from behind. He was unable to give any description of his attackers.

Becker said $20 was taken from his pockets.

Dying Mt. Rainier Man Wants None of It.

Washington police were mystified yesterday by the strange request from the dying lips of Frank Pierce, 78, that "no information be given out" about him. Pierce, a retired dairy farmer and former resident of Mount Rainier, uttered the words just before he died of a heart attack at Emergency Hospital. He was taken there after collapsing at Seventh and G streets northwest.

The man's Washington address was not known. He had spent most of his life in Mount Rainier and moved to the city only recently. A brother-in-law, Richard Harvey, lives in Gaithersburg, Md.

Democrat Loses His Speech But 'Show Goes On' Anyway

J. Raymond Nunan, president of the Young Democrats of America, District of Columbia Division, wrote a good speech, for the induction of officers at the Willard Hotel last night. But he lost it.

Nunan carried off the situation with perfect grace. No one among his audience of more than 100 suspected his speech about harmony and Franklin Roosevelt, "the greatest President in the history of modern times," had not been prepared.

Then he went on to read a list of regrets from such high Democrats as Postmaster General Farley, W. Forbes Morgan and J. F. T. O'Connor as the crowd sighed with obvious disappointment.

Pinch-hitting for the occasion, J. H. Birdsall, general counsel of the F. D. I. C., delivered a long address on the Constitution, during which he said that liberty was born at Runnymede.

Hoover Views On Parole Act Are Attacked

Association Says Tongue of F. B. I. Director Needs Curbing.

Copeland Says Lack of Probation Funds Is Cause of Trouble.

Although avoiding criticism of J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, proponents of the parole system for criminals yesterday said they agreed with the spirit of the National Probation Association's resolution on the attitude of the bureau chief toward treatment of criminals.

The association, at its thirtieth annual conference in Atlantic City, yesterday dispatched letters to President Roosevelt and Attorney General Cummings asking them to curb the tongue of the chief of the Bureau of Investigation.

Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York, author of the Federal probation law, and the Rev. Russell J. Clinch, president of the Council of Social Agencies, both spoke for parole.

Work Is Approved.

The association's resolution read: "That while we register approval of Hoover's work and his bureau for the detection of crime and the apprehension of criminals, we deplore that false and inaccurate statements have been made which have tended to mislead the public into a belief that probation, parole and other agencies for the individual reclamation of offenders, are harmful to the cause of law enforcement and that only methods of force and severity are effective in controlling and preventing crime."

"There is no more fallacious thing in the world," said Senator Copeland, "than the thought that punishment is a deterrent to crime."

He cited as an example the fact that at one time 150 offenses were punishable by death in England. Pickpockets were hanged in the public square, but authorities had to abandon this punishment because so many of the spectators had their pockets picked at the hangings.

Much-Needed Note.

Mr. Clancky, an outstanding proponent of penal reform, said:

"The resolution strikes a much-needed note in regard to our present attitude toward the apprehension of criminals. Our tendency now is to be impatient with methods involving social adjustment and personal rehabilitation and to use instead the quicker and more spectacular methods of force and ruthless handling.

"This may solve a few situations, but cannot be depended upon to solve the deeper situations which condition criminal tendencies nor deal with those persons who may be changed from potential criminals into useful members of society."

In the letters to the President and Cummings, the delegates to the conference in Atlantic City said, according to wire dispatches, "until more accurate information is received by Hoover and his bureau, he should be caused to refrain from issuing statements which are derogatory and destructive to the advancement of probation."

Not an Authority.

Senator Copeland said that he was not criticizing Hoover, whose job was that of apprehending criminals, but that he did not believe, if the charge of the conference were true, that Hoover should set himself up as an authority on parole.

"I might be a great expert on appendicitis," he explained, "and not know a blooming thing about rheumatism."

He added that he believed the chief trouble lies in the fact that Congress had not provided enough money for probation officers.

Hoover could not be reached for a statement.

E. B. McLean Sued By Paris Attorney

Edward B. McLean, former Washington publisher, was sued in the District Supreme Court for $15,000 by William H. Wadhams, Paris, France, for legal services and moneys advanced the erstwhile millionaire while he was abroad in 1931.

The attorney, through Attorneys Arthur G. Lambert, George L. Hart, jr., and Arthur M. Murphy, explained in his suit that he had performed numerous legal tasks for McLean, who is now in a sanitarium at Towson, Md., and had on frequent occasions advanced McLean money to tide him over financial stringencies.

Admiral Mark L. Bristol, who was appointed by the District Supreme Court to protect McLean's interests several years ago, was named as a defendant in his representative capacity.

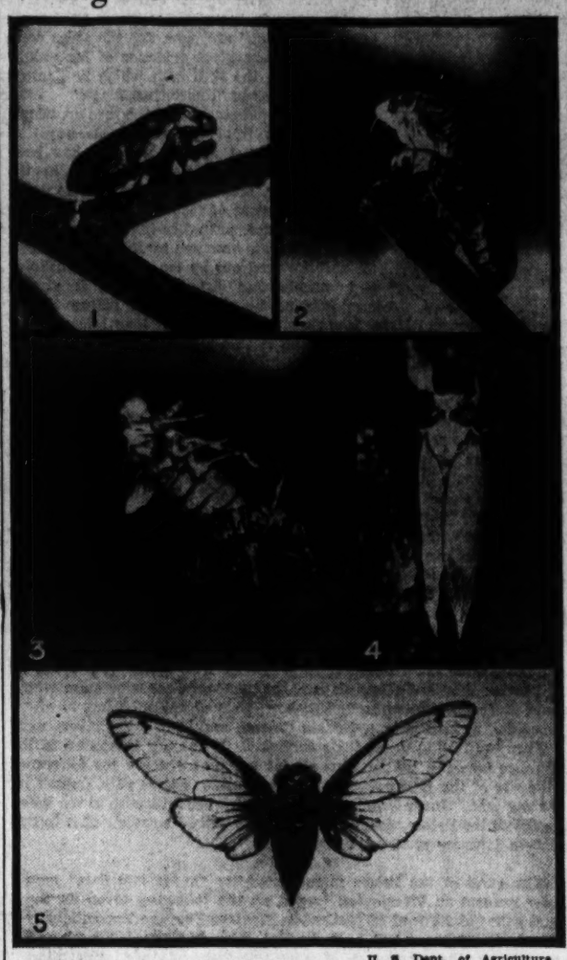
Big Moments of a Locust's Life



U. S. Dept. of Agriculture.

The 17-year locust, or more properly cicada, is shown in the various stages of its life history, which start 17 years after it began life underground. 1. A pupa ready for transformation. 2. The adult starts out of the pupal shell. 3. Nearly free of the pupal shell. 4. Freshly emerged adult. 5. Adult several hours after transformation, coloring mature.

Cicada, Locust to You, Defended By Federal Insect Authority

Curiously enough, J. A. Hyslop, chief of the Agriculture Department's insect pest section, made an impassioned appeal yesterday in defense of the 17-year cicada, characterizing the creature as a natural wonder, a harmless hibernator and anything but a pest.

Just now the cicadas—better, though erroneously, known as locusts—are achieving manhood and womanhood to the consternation of home owners and gardeners. Fearful that the insects will ravage their home-grown fruits and vegetables, these residents are telephoning Hyslop at the rate of 40 to 50 calls a day seeking advice.

On May 18, when the van of brood X, as this particular crop of cicadas is known by scientists, sprouted wings and immediately went about the business of flying, singing, mating and dying, more than 100 telephone calls tumbled one after another into Hyslop's office.

People wanted to know:

"What are these things in my backyard? Will they insure my garden? Is it safe to put the baby in his play pen out of doors or don't the insects sting? Can't anything be done to keep them quiet so we can get some sleep?"

That first day—May 18—gave Hyslop and a corps of stenographers ear callouses from answering telephones. Since then, however, incoming calls have dwindled to a mere half-hundred or so daily.

A woman rang yesterday.

"These locusts are going to eat up my garden," she moaned.

"No they won't," replied Hyslop. "Cicadas are absolutely harmless."

"Is that so? Well, one in the back yard bit me."

"If you were bitten," Hyslop patiently responded, "it was not by a cicada. They don't have teeth."

Convincing these callers that the cicada is capable of no more harm than an assault upon the eardrums, which may become rather annoying in this section before the insects disappear around July 4, is difficult, indeed.

The trouble is that people are confusing this phenomenon of the insect world with locusts, or grasshoppers, which plagued ancient Egypt and to this day harass farmers and orchardists. Grasshoppers can chew and have mouths; cicadas suck their plant juice nourishment and they don't have mouths.

Hyslop was emphatic in his denunciation of this libel which makes Magicicada septendecim out to be a voracious pillager come to destroy living things and, besides, to portend war. Superstition has it that the sharply defined "W" on the front wings stands for war. The departmental experts concedes that a brood appeared just before the outbreak of the Civil War, but says it was mere coincidence.

The cicadas, now roosting on your lawn, sprang from eggs which were deposited in twig pockets, systematically carved by the females' sawlike apparatus at the end of the abdomen, back in 1919.

The insects, now flying about, enjoying a fling which will end abruptly when they all die in the next few weeks, were conceived when home radio sets were rare and the great influenza epidemic was on its way out. Wilson was in the White House, enactment of the eighteenth amendment still was being agitated and bell bottomed trousers for men was the thing when this current "locust" crop was in the making.

Eggs were laid, whereupon the parents died, happy in the fulfillment of a function dictated by Mother Nature. Six or eight weeks later the eggs hatched into tiny nymphs. These fell to the ground and burrowed into the earth to a depth of two to four feet, though larvae have been found 18 inches to 5 feet below the surface.

Days dissolved into weeks, months, years and still the baby cicadas lived on in spite of rain and snow and wind and the spring robin, which might catch the worm, but not them. When the time was ripe—now—there came that irresistible urge. They came to the surface, shook out of their shells, grew wings and here they are.

Truck Kills Pedestrian; Driver Held

Man's Chest Is Crushed as Vehicle Passes Over Him.

Negro Dies of Injuries in Auto Crash; D. C. Fatalities 35.

Harry Walsh, 31, whose address police could not learn, was almost instantly killed last night when he was run over by a truck at Constitution avenue and Third street.

The driver of the truck, Herman Bane, 35, of Halifax, Va., police said, was held for action of the coroner.

Walsh's death brought the year's fatality toll in the District from traffic to 35.

There was another traffic death yesterday, that of Manuel C. Fuller, Negro, 26, of 4717 Foote street northeast, who died of injuries sustained in a crash at Hollwood, Md., last week.

Other persons were hurt in accidents in the city.

Lillian May Walker, Negro, of 107 M street southeast, was struck by a street car as she crossed Pennsylvania avenue in front of the White House. At Emergency Hospital, physicians said her condition was serious. Her skull was fractured.

Twelve-year-old John D. Lee, Negro, of 1021 Fifteenth street northeast, was knocked down by another Negro youth, Lawrence Gadson, 15, of 1015 Forty-ninth street northwest, who was riding a bicycle. At Gallinger Hospital it was said that Lee suffered a possible fracture of the right leg.

Five driving permits were revoked and 20 others suspended for temporary periods yesterday when the revocations board acted on the cases of 25 motorists convicted of speeding.

Thirty-day suspensions went to Francis T. Allen, 2301 Connecticut avenue northwest, 40 miles; Gordan L. Anderson, 1317 First street northwest, 41 miles; Spurgeon Anderson, 800 New Hampshire avenue northwest, 40 miles; Hunter C. Austin, 1015 G street northwest, 42 miles; Charles E. Becker, 130 Webster street northwest, 40 miles; Earl B. Bryant, 1603 Thirteenth street northwest, 40 miles; Robert M. Burns, 4431 Third street northwest, 40 miles; William E. Davis, 2414½ Hanover street northwest, 42 miles; Eloise W. Malone, 709 Tudor Hall apartments, 44 miles; George B. Robinson, 4707 Connecticut avenue northwest, 45 miles; Harry Roemer, 508 Kenyon street northwest, 40 miles; Julian R. Taylor, 1909 N street northwest, 48 miles; William F. Terry, 101 Ridge road northeast, 42 miles; Lawrence Thomas, 26 F street northwest, 48 miles.

Fifteen-day suspensions went to Arthur M. Blacklow, 2901 Woodland drive northwest, 38 miles; Charles T. Evans, 2771 Champlain street northwest, 36 miles; Paul J. McVearry, 1533 Gales street northeast, 38 miles; Robert H. Stolley, 1228 I street northwest, 38 miles.

Deflected Bullet Hits Man on Porch

Victor Garragus, 63, a retired Government employe, was wounded in his left arm by a ricocheting bullet last night as he sat on the doorstep of his rooming house at 2143 G street northwest.

The bullet came from the gun of a Negro, who fired at a Negro woman following an argument, police said. The bullet struck the stone of the porch and then lodged in Garragus' arm.

Police broadcast a description of the Negro last night after questioning several boys who had seen the shooting.

Physicians at Emergency Hospital, where Garragus, an invalid, was taken, said his condition was not serious.

'Ziggie's' Sigs Are as Scarce As Gwinnett's

A Search by Billie Burke Reveals Only Three in Existence.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, May 26.—Autograph collectors, if they care, may find signatures of the late Florenz Ziegfeld almost as rare as those of Button Gwinnett, according to Billie Burke, his widow.

Between takes of "The Count of Arizona," in which she is working with Francis Lederer and Ann Sothern, Miss Burke said she had only three signatures of the "Follies" impresario in her possession, and at a guess estimated that there are no more than half a dozen in existence.

She began a hunt for Zegfeld autographs when William Powell, who played the title role in "The Great Ziegfeld," biographical musical, asked Miss Burke for a photograph of her late husband.

"I thought it would be nice to send him an autographed picture," she said, "but I looked high and low for just any signatures, and could find only three complete ones.

"Mr. Ziegfeld seldom wrote his name except on business papers. He hated letter writing and almost always sent telegrams, instead. The few notes he did write and the theater passes he issued were invariably signed only with a flourishing 'F. Z., Jr.'

"As far as I know, all of his canceled checks and old contracts have been destroyed."

Gwinnett is still several up on Ziegfeld, however. Only two or three of the American Revloutionary patriots' signatures exist.

Rivkin Has Callers.

To impress the family back home in Manhattan, Joe Rivkin, young casting director for Hal E. Roach Studios, mailed a photograph of his new home, complete with swimming pool, and wrote: "Bet you're surprised to see your Joey so successful."

A week later the Rivkin family flivver chugged into Holywood, and out piled papa, mamma and four brothers and sisters.

"How long can we stay? We've come to live with you, Joey?"

Rivkin hadn't told the folks that near palaces and ponds can be rented in this community for $75 a month and up.

Fans have apparently taken Jean Hersholt's "Doc Dafoe" impersonation in "The Country Doctor" seriously. Every mail brings Hersholt a doll from some quintuplet admirer. His recent trip to New York netted 30, including a life-sized quintuplet set.

Cutting Room Scraps.

Fred Lawrence, learning to ride, has taken three spills with the nag standing still. Wait till he reaches lesson No. 2, "The Horse in Motion."

Paramount has changed the title of "Chinese Gold" back to "The General Died at Dawn," fortunately.

James Melton stood for a publicity "still" of himself apparently knocking Mushy Callahan down, and now he's afraid he'll meet some hard citizen with a yen to learn whether Melton is as tough as his pictures.

'Chintz Cottage'

"THE CHINTZ COTTAGE." The Universalist Players present the comedy in three acts by Beulah King, under the direction of Edith Drake, with stage setting by Frances Duff. In Perkins Hall, May 26 and 27. Reviewed Tuesday evening by W. A. Whitney.

After some two years of experimentation with one-act plays, and with one full-length drama on record already this season, the Universalist Players took their second step in major production last evening, presenting Beulah King's comedy drama, "The Chintz Cottage," in Perkins Hall before an enthusiastic audience.

A drama of situations more imaginary than real, the play reveals the amusing results when unfounded suspicions lead to beliefs quite without reason, and what was mistaken for premeditated murder was revealed as nothing but a stunning blow on the head by a wild golf ball.

Yet out of of these sometimes wild incidents has been contrived a comedy of action and highly diverting lines.

Despite the possibilities of the piece, the players seemed at a loss in the attempt to create the illusion of actual episodes peopled by real human beings. However the goal of dramatic presentation may have been missed, the players, nevertheless, severally and collectively, did show a sincerity of purpose which should develop into something worthwhile.

Miss Bonner Plays Lead.

Of the players, Eleanor Bonner, as the housekeeper at the chintz cottage, a distinctly character role, made the most of her part, giving the nervous, lugubrious Fanny a smooth reading. Jean Leckie, as the New York society girl seeking peace and quiet, was good.

Others in the company included John Pearce, as the boy whose accident precipitates the action; Maurine Goding, as his sister; Cornelius Ferris, as their father; Frances Duff, as his housekeeper, and Doris Uppercue, as Miss Leckie's aunt offering unwanted chaperonage.

The single setting, by Francis Duff, effectively utilized drapes which charmingly reflected the summery haven suggested by the title. The direction by Edith Drake was competent, although when five or six characters were on stage there was a tendency to crowd and cover.

England, Poland Open Navy Pact Talks Today

London, May 26 (AP).—Negotiations for a British-Polish naval treaty will begin tomorrow at the foreign office, it was announced today.

British representatives will be the same as those for conversations with Russia, now in recess until June 4. The Polish Ambassador and Eugenjusz Solski, naval expert, will represent Warsaw.

Britain hopes both Russia and Poland will sign bi-lateral agreements with her containing provisions of the recently concluded pact between this country, the United States and France.

Nelson B. Bell

About The Showshops

"UNDER TWO FLAGS." With the possible exception of Ernst Lubitsch and Cecil B. De Mille, there is no director of motion pictures who possesses Frank Lloyd's uncanny facility in maneuvering huge masses of people on the screen. He proved it conclusively as far back as "The Sea Hawk," starring Milton Sills in the old silent days; he demonstrated his rare gift of painting his canvas in sweeping strokes again in the picturization of Noel Coward's "Cavalcade" and now, for the same company, once more gives evidence of his unique endowment in the skill with which he deploys his Arab hordes in "Under Two Flags."

BELL.

This sturdy old standby of the theater, adapted, of course, from Ouida's famous novel of Cigarette and the Foreign Legion, has been given the advantage of picturization in the grand, or epic, manner by Twentieth Century-Fox. As a matter of fact, it is so big at times that its romance, primarily involving the lives of four people, is obscured by the smoke of battle and drowned out by the rattle of musketry and machine-gun fire. However, it always comes bobbing up again almost before it is missed and, by and large, lends a strong element of love interest to a story that practically runs the gamut, to coin a phrase, of human moods emotions, villainy and heroics.

The four roles of pivotal importance in "Under Two Flags" are played by principals it would be difficult to overlook in any man's magic lantern show—Ronald Colman, Claudette Colbert, Victor McLaglen and Rosalind Russell. Mr. Darryl F. Zanuck's eloquent cohorts on the Movietone City pay roll seem to take especial delight in pointing out that it was Mr. Colman you saw in "Beau Geste," "Clive of India" and "A Tale of Two Cities;" Miss Colbert in "It Happened One Night," Mr. McLaglen in "The Informer" and "Professional Soldier" and Miss Russell in "Rendezvous." As if you didn't know!

Colman, needless to say, is cast as Sergt. Victor, the hero of the piece; McLaglen, as the jealous and vengeful Maj. Doyle; Miss Russell as Lady Venetia and Miss Colbert as Cigarette, the role that was being played on the stage an even 35 years ago by that eminent Belasco star, Blanche Bates, last seen on a local rostrum with Frances Starr in support of Katharine Hepburn in "The Lake."

In addition to these stellar figures, "Under Two Flags" is peopled by eight or ten thousand other players, among them a score or more whose names deserve the prominence they are accorded in the billing.

Speaking of billing, both Ronald Colman and Claudette Colbert must be given top billing under their contracts. If you are interested in the difference in the size of the type announcing their names. Seems silly, doesn't it?

At any rate, "Under Two Flags" is a picture you will wish to see when it opens on the Palace screen Friday. There will be a review of it in this space on Saturday morning—I hope.

* * * *

The quest of the Palace management for "under two flags" men now resident in Washington turned up the following seven on the first poll: Col. Edward M. McCrahon, Mexican Punitive Expeditionary Force, French army and A. E. F.; Maj. John A. Maigret, French and Canadian military forces; A. M. Morris, British and American armies; Lieut. von Zastrow, German ace and Russian air force; W. B. Covert and Louis Gade, United States and Canadian armies, and Lieut. Sam Goldberg, A. E. F., British and French armies. These and any others who since may have identified themselves as having served under two or more flags, will be honor guests of the Palace management on Friday night to witness "Under Two Flags."

For the first time since its organization, the Earle Theater orchestra on Friday of this week, opening day of the new bill, will present an overture conducted by a woman. At the suggestion of C. Frederick Clark—Freddie to you—regular director of the Earle musicians, Friday's overture will be conducted by Miss Vin Lindhe, the gifted young leader of the Radio City Music Hall Glee Club, being held over for a second week.

As director of the Glee Club, Miss Lindhe has been in the Earle orchestra pit at every de luxe performance this week. She won the instant admiration of the Earle's instrumentalists last Friday at the first performance by her splendid musicianship and complete command of the 24 male voices under her leadership on the stage. The invitation to lead the pit orchestra as well as her stage choir came as a natural compliment to a young woman of brilliant ability.

The Paramount News seems to have whipped over another fast one. Pictures of the fall of Addis Ababa before the advancing Italian forces in Ethiopia are being shown exclusively at the Warners' Earle and Metropolitan theaters. These views, occupying about 400 feet of celluloid running time, were taken by Paramount cameramen after all other newsreel operatives were rendered hors de combat by the rigors of a stiff campaign and are the only ones to be seen. They contain a reasonably complete record of an important moment in history.

Barrett C. Kiesling, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio representative, in the field in behalf of his company's picturization of Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet," with Norma Shearer, Leslie Howard and John Barrymore in the roles of Juliet, Romeo and Mercutio, respectively, will be guest of honor and speaker at a luncheon tendered him by the Washington League of American Pen Women in the Willard Hotel tomorrow at 1.

Mr. Kiesling also is addressing a club and school group on the topic of "Better Films" under the auspices of Mrs. Anthony Muto, of the local Will H. Hays office. Mr. Kiesling, whom we already know, will be a welcome visitor.

60 Million-Year-Old Skeleton Is Found

Princeton, N. J., May 26 (AP).—Dr. Glenn L. Jepsen, of the geology department of Princeton University, announced today the discovery of a complete fossil skeleton more than 60,0000,000 years old.

He said it was found in the Big Horn Basin of Wyoming by the 1935 Scott fund expedition of the university, which was under his direction. The bones have just been removed from the rocky matrix in which they were imbedded.

Dr. Jepsen said the hyoid bones of the throat, scarcely an eighth of an inch long and no larger in diameter than a horse hair, were perfectly preserved. The skeleton, he said, was that of an animal of the plaeogene epoch about the size of a small rat. Only a few toes were missing.

Dr. Jepsen judged from the length of the hind legs that th eanimal was of the leaping variety similar to the modern lemur.

Mr. and Mrs. John Dick Will Mark Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Dick, who reside at 820 Tuckerman street northwest, will celebrate tonight the golden anniversary of their marriage in Wilmington, Del., whence they came to Washington 40 years ago.

Mr. Dick formerly was in the planning division of the Navy Yard here. He retired several years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Dick have six children and eight grandchildren.

The Daughter of a Fearful Father

When "Dracula's Daughter," latest release in Universal's series of "shocker" film plays, reaches the screen at the Warner Brothers Metropolitan Theater today, the role of Countess Marya Zaleska will be assumed by Gloria Holden, whose slightly startled likeness appears above. Miss Holden is surrounded by a notable group of associate players, including Otto Kruger, Marguerite Churchill, Irving Pichel—whom you will hardly recognize in his sinister makeup as Sandor—Hedda Hopper, Gilbert Emery, Halliwell Hobbes, Billy Bevan, Edward Van Sloan and many others.

Watching Them Make Pictures

Hollywood, May 26.

Marion Davies plays a scene for her new flicker, "Cain and Mabel," with Clark Gable. They do quickly and eagerly what Director Lloyd Bacon says. There is a certain atmosphere about every Marion Davies set, regardless of the picture. The scenario and the director change, but Miss Davies' method of making a picture doesn't vary much.

Marian Davies.

There is music on the set. A violin, a piano, a 'cello and an xylophone. It is not merely "mood music" that these musicians supply for Miss Davies. They play, between scenes, to entertain the performers and the guests. When Marion Davies comes onto the set, her dog—it arrives before she does—barks three times. The dog is a brown Dachshund named Gandhi. After Gandhi barks, the four-piece orchestra plays "Let's Make Hay While the Sun Shines." Then the picture-making starts.

* * * *

At about 4 o'clock, coffee and sandwiches are served to everyone. When Miss Davies is ready to stop work, the orchestra always plays "The Whistler and His Dog." Miss Davies generally manages to seem gay. She will call you "Toots" and exchange gags with you. This particular afternoon she read one of Gene Fowler's poems aloud to the group and didn't stumble on any of the Fowleriana. Everyone on the set tells you, "Marion Davies, she's a regular . . ."

* * * *

Francis Lederer and Fred Stone are doing a scene at a banquet table for the flicker, "The Count of Arizona." They have been doing this sequence, I am told, for four days. To film a banquet takes as long as a banquet seems to last.

There is a fruit cocktail in front of Lederer and Stone. Crumpled cellophane is used for ice. Fred Stone, playing the role of a Westerner, orders the waiter to take away this dainty dish and bring him food. Harold Young is directing. Young is the Englishman who directed "The Scarlet Pimpernel." Director Young instructs Stone to pull out his wad of chewing tobacco, take a bite and then offer it to Lederer. Stone is supposed to register delight when he is chewing his tobacco, while Lederer is supposed to hate the stuff, taking it because he has to.

It is a new package of tobacco and Stone asks that someone take the first bite to make it easier for him. He doesn't care for chewing tobacco. Lederer, who is supposed to hate the stuff, volunteers to take the bite. He actually likes chewing tobacco.

* * * *

On the Bing Crosby set, the picture is called "Rhythm on the Range." Director Norman Taurog is arranging a set-up, and Lucille Gleason is posing for a still picture with the bull, who is an important actor in this flicker. The bull is named Cuddles and was given this monicker by Dorothy Parker. Lucille explains that she is having this photo taken for Miss Parker, who phones every evening to ask what cute things Cuddles did on the set today.

* * * *

Director Clarence Brown is ready to take a close-up of Joan Crawford for a scene in the flicker, "The Gorgeous Hussy." He stops and says: "Wait a minute; that's a Skolsky shot." It seems that in the long shot of that scene, taken the day before, Miss Crawford has a ribbon around her hair; now she hasn't.

"But no one will notice that," says Miss Crawford. "Only everyone," answers Director Brown. "They go to pictures especially for that."

Work is halted. Miss Crawford goes to her portable dressing room and a hairdresser is called to arrange Crawfords hair and place a ribbon about it.

Mrs. Moody to Try For U. S. Net Title

New York, May 26 (AP).—A strong urge to return to glory at Forest Hills, where she fell before the fire of her greatest foe, today prompted Mrs. Helen Wills Moody to attempt to regain the American tennis championship rather than defend her all-England title at Wimbledon this summer.

After keeping British and American tennis officials guessing for months, the California court queen placidly announced her decision to stay home instead of seeking a record-breaking eighth singles crown abroad.

Although United States Lawn Tennis Association officials had been "half-counting" on Mrs. Moody's participation in the Wightman Cup matches in England next month, they were cheered by her decision to return to Forest Hills after a lapse of three years.

It was at Forest Hills in the final of the 1933 championship that Mrs. Moody defaulted in the third set to Helen Jacobs and lost an opportunity to win the title for the eighth time in 10 years.

Myrna Loy's Marriage In Near Future Hinted

Hollywood, Calif., May 26 (AP).—Movie friends of Arthur Hornblow, jr., associate producer, and Myrna Loy, brunette star, hinted today that wedding bells may ring for the couple as a result of the Reno divorce granted Mrs. Hornblow.

Juliette Crosby Hornblow, stage actress, yesterday charged Hornblow with cruelty. They were married September 9, 1923, at Warrenton, Va., and have a son, John, 5.

A constant escort of Miss Loy in recent months, Hornblow said: "I do not care to comment on the possibility of marriage to her."

Iowa River Yields Body Of Educator, Suicide

Iowa City, Iowa, May 26 (AP).—The body of Charles Hazard, 27, of Columbus, Ohio, research asssitant in the University of Iowa psychology and speech pathology departments, was dragged up from the Iowa River today. He had been missing since Saturday when he left his laboratory.

Terming the death a suicide, Dr. George Maresh, county coroner, said Dr. Lee Travis, head of the university speech pathology department, reported Hazard had been depressed and frequently threatened to end his life.

Hazard was graduated by Ohio State University in 1930. He was unmarried. His parents survive.

Boswell Gets Support for Derby Win

21 of England's Fleetest in Field for English Classic Today.

By the Associated Press.

Epsom Downs, England, May 26. Carrying a tidy fortune in United States dollars on his nose, William Woodward's Boswell tomorrow will seek to become the fifth American-owned thoroughbred in history to win England's classic race for 3-year-olds, the Derby.

Arrayed against the brown son of Bosworth-Flying Gal II will be 21 of the fleetest colts in the kingdom, including Lord Astor's Pay Up, winner of the 2,000 guineas and the favorite at 6 to 1; the Aga Khan's Taj Akbar, second choice at 100 to 14, and Sir Alfred Butt's Noble King, quoted at 15 to 2.

The rush of support—in terms of hard cash—for Woodward's hope has been the outstanding feature of the pre-Derby developments the last few days. A 25-to-1 shot not long ago, Boswell has been backed so heavily that bookmakers refused to give better than 8 to 1 against his chances today.

Dozens of bets on Boswell to win have been cabled from the United States. It was estimated that fully £30,000 (about $150,000) will be riding on the colt when the field gets away from the starting line about 3:15 p. m. (9:15 a. m. Eastern standard time).

A victory for Boswell tomorrow would mark the first triumph for an American-owned Derby colt since 1914, when H. B. Duryea won with Durbar II. Before that Richard Croker's Orby in 1907, William C. Whitney's Volodyovski in 1901 and Pierre Lorillard's Iroquois in 1881, hung up American triumphs.

Four other scratches, Lord Astor's Plaster Cast, Dorothy Paget's Ormstead, Lady Ludlow's Star Comedian and the Duke of Marlborough's Monument, cut the probable starting field to 22, but left all the leading contenders still eligible for the test of 1 mile, 885 yards.

Clear weather and a sun-baked track were promised tonight for the race. A pall of dust overhung the sprawling race plant today, settling down heavily on hundreds of carnival tents and amusement stands.

Ali Baba Hands Defeat To Big Chief Sanooke

New York, May 26 (U.P.).—Ali Baba, the terrible little Turk from Detroit, tonight retained his claims to the world heavyweight wrestling championship by throwing 340-pound, Big Chief Sanooke, of North Carolina, before 3,500 fans at Madison Square Garden.

The Northern Virginia League will not play its postponed games, Saturday, Memorial Day as announced recently, President James C. Buchanan announced yesterday. Home teams are favorable toward the suggestion, but not the visiting clubs. The dates for the games will be announced later.

American Title Mrs. Moody's Objective

By the United Press.

New York, May 26.—After several months of deliberation Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, of San Francisco, finally made the decision today the tennis world has been breathlessly awaiting—she will stay at home and attempt to regain the United States women's title instead of going abroad to defend her Wimbledon crown.

The queen of the world's tennis courts, who has won the Wimbledon and United States titles seven times each, did not make her decision until she received a telegram from her broker-husband in San Francisco. She refused to reveal what husband Fred said, but she had no trouble making up her mind after its arrival.

Mrs. Moody's decision to forsake Wimbledon for Forest Hills forecasts another dramatic meeting between the two California arch rivals of the court, Mrs. Moody and Helen Jacobs. In their last meeting in the Wimbledon final last year, Mrs. Moody fought back gallantly from the brink of defeat to win five straight games in the third set and triumph over Miss Jacobs, 6—3, 3—6, 7—5.

That defeat cost Miss Jacobs her greatest chance to win a Wimbledon title. Now Mrs. Moody will attempt to break Miss Jacobs' four-year monopoly on the American title. A Forest Hills clash between them is fraught with all kinds of possibilities—so much so that if they meet in the final it will be the tennis match of the year, overshadowing America's attempt to regain the Davis Cup.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

I DARE say that the pursuit of life, liberty and happiness among folks generally will not be unduly interrupted by the apparent failure to establish a 3-year-old champion of the American turf, but the fact remains, as facts always do, that the throne is still very much vacant.

POVICH.

Bold Venture, the Derby and Preakness winner, is in retirement for the summer with a bowed tendon, and not another among the first-flight 3-year-olds will be accepted as the standout horse of the year. Brevity, second in the Derby, a nonstarter in the Preakness and beaten recently in the Withers mile, now can hardly prove his claims to the No. 1 rank in horsedom this season. In the same class is Granville, which lost its rider in the Derby and ran Bold Venture to a head in the Preakness.

Despite his two winning races this year, Bold Venture scarcely rates 3-year-old championship rank. Better things are expected of a champion than mere victories in the Derby and Preakness. The failure of the Mortimer Schwartz colt to bear up under training clouds whatever claims he had achieved. Champion 3-year-olds are made of sterner stuff, according to turf annals.

Had Bold Venture been able to withstand the rigors of training, a No. 1 3-year-old doubtless would have been established to the satisfaction of all. But with the Derby-Preakness winner in retirement, the door to such fame is now closed to not only Bold Venture but to Brevity and Granville as well.

No matter what may be the achievements of J. E. Widener's Brevity and William Woodward's Granville over the rest of the season, the 3-year-old rivalry cannot help but be clouded with their Derby and Preakness conqueror turned out to pasture.

If a fellow wants to take this 3-year-old business seriously, he can probably trace directly to the door of Mr. Widener, Brevity's owner, the failure to establish a champion. Widener it was who deliberately withheld Brevity from the Preakness, where he would have had a chance to dispute Bold Venture's superiority.

The story goes that Mr. Widener had worked up a considerable peeve against the Pimlico track officials, and thus it was that he failed to enter his star in their featured race. The story goes further that Mr. Widener was deeply incensed at the failure of the Pimlico people to admit one of his friends to the very swanky clubhouse without the proper credentials and that Mr. Widener had been nursing this peeve for a very long time.

But if so, Mr. Widener was scooped by several years in the matter of being peeved against the Pimlico people. This department remembers that Mr. Sam Riddle refused to race his horses at the Pimlico course for several years because he, too, was peeved at Pimlico. Mr. Riddle's peeve evolved from the fact that the Pimlico racing secretary saddled his Crusader with 130 pounds in the 2½-mile Pimlico Cup race and permitted Mr. Riddle's nephew's horse, Edith Cavell, to go into the race with 96 pounds. Under those conditions, of course, Mr. Riddle's great horse lost.

But turf people are blaming Widener, too, for his handling of Brevity ever since the colt began to show championship form as a 3-year-old. Risking the hazards of keeping a colt in winter training, Mr. Widener brought the horse to his Hialeah track, there to perform before Mr. Widener's public.

When Brevity began to win races in succession, he became something of a drawing card at Hialeah, and Mr. Widener did not hesitate to saddle his horse with great frequency. In fact, it was said that the horse Brevity became something of a daily landmark at Hialeah, much like the foliage and the flamingoes in which Mr. Widener also takes great pride.

Brevity's successes at Mr. Widener's own track led up, of course, to the Florida Derby in which the colt set a new world record and instantly became the winter book favorite for the Derby. But winter racing apparently took its toll and Brevity was beaten in the Derby and now apparently has gone stale, as his defeat by the long-shot, White Cockade, in the Withers Mile, would indicate.

Granville and Brevity doubtless will meet in the Travers at Saratoga, but with no Bold Venture in the race, victory will be a hollow affair at best. And speaking of the Travers reminds this department of that August afternoon a half dozen years ago when a one-eyed chestnut by the name of Jim Dandy tossed mud in the eye of the highly touted Gallant Fox and Whichone throughout the sloppy stretch of that three-horse race.

I remember that race because they paid off on Jim Dandy at exactly 100 to 1, and I did not have a bet on him.

Phils Defeat Bees 7 to 2, With Klein Back Again

Philadelphia, May 26 (AP).—Inspired by Chuck Klein's return after an absence of three years with the Chicago Cubs, the Phillies pounded the Boston Bees to a 7-to-2 defeat in the series opener today.

Klein immediately felt at home in his comeback to Baker Bowl, collecting 2 of the Phils' 17 hits.

Browns Down Tribe, 8-5, In Ninth

Cleveland, May 26 (AP).—The lowly St. Louis Browns jumped on three Indian pitchers for a total of 11 hits and took the first game of their three-tilt series today, 8 to 5.

Mel Harder allowed the Browns two runs in the first inning, but settled down until the seventh when Tom Carey's double and Lynn Lary's single knotted the score at 3-3. Jim Bottomley then put St. Louis ahead with a homer over the rightfield screen.

Elon Hogsett kept the Indians mystified except in the fourth and ninth innings when they scored three and two runs respectively.

Massanutten Gridmen To Meet District Team

Woodstock, Va., May 26.—The Massanutten Military Academy football schedule for the 1936 season was announced here today by school officials. Four of the eight games that have been slated by the Cadets will be played in Woodstock, among which are the Bullis School, of Washington, D. C., and Fork Union Military Academy.

Mercersburg, ancient and bitter rival of the Cadets will be met this year on October 31. A post-season game in St. Petersburg, Fla., with the Florida Military Academy eleven is also pending.

Foxx Gets 12th Homer W. Ferrell Turns Back Rally in Ninth.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 26.—The gold-plated Red Sox, pointing their big guns at the New York Yankees and the American League lead at one and the same time, nosed out the loop pacemakers, 5 to 4, today.

The victory, aided by Jimmy Foxx's twelfth homer of the season and Wes Ferrell's tight pitching up to the ninth, put the Sox only half a game back of the New Yorker in the league standings.

The game netted the Yankees a double setback. In the fourth inning, Bill Dickey, the Yanks' No. 1 catcher, figured in a collision with Eric McNair at home plate and the extent of his injuries could not be immediately determined.

Carried From Field.

Dickey was carried from the field and an x-ray examination ordered. Doctors feared a fractured rib or internal injuries that would keep Dickey out of the New York line-up indefinitely.

McNair lunged into the plate standing up in an attempt to score from second base and the force of the crash knocked both players to the ground.

A Yankee run in the closing inning fell just one run short as Dusty Cooke took Lou Gehrig's high fly to end a rally which had netted two runs on a single to right by Joe Di Maggio, the sensational New York rookie.

Ruffing Goes Route.

Charley Ruffing went the route for the Yanks, and did an effective job except for the third, fourth and eighth. In the third, Ferrell singled to bring in Bill Werber, who had doubled. In the fourth, McNair's double sent Foxx and Cooke across the plate, after each had hit safely. Foxx's homer came in the eighth, with Melo Almada on base.

The Yanks pushed a run across in the first, when Crosetti doubled and came home on Di Maggio's high fly. In the third Crosetti hammered out his fifth homer of the season.

New York, May 26 (AP).—An all heavyweight show, featuring Primo Carnera, veteran Italian, and Leroy Haynes, knockout artist from Philadelphia, will pry the lid off the outdoor fight season at Ebbets Field tomorrow night.

Mark to Houghton With 64, 69 and 68

Virginia Beach, Va., May 26.—Al Houghton, Cavalier Hotel golf professional, former Washington, D. C., pro, set an all-time State record for 54 holes when he shot a 201 to win the Tidewater P. G. A. championship here today.

Billy Kelly, Ocean View pro, was second with 67—69—67—203, and Chandler Harper, of Portsmouth, and Jack Isaacs, of Newport News, next with 212 each.

2 U.S. Golfers Out In British Play For Amateur Title

By the Associated Press.

St. Andrews, Scotland, May 26.—Continuing their successful defense against invading Americans, British golfers eliminated Ellis Knowles, Rye, N. Y., and John Arthur Brown, Philadelphia, in the second round of the British amateur golf championship today, while Theodore Bassett, Rye, N. Y., the only surviving American, reached the third round without hitting a shot.

Bassett drew a bye in the first round and advanced to the third when Ian Sutherland defaulted. He plays Gerald Micklem tomorrow.

Knowles missed a 2-foot putt on the twentieth green to lose to Eric Prain, whom he could have eliminated by sinking a 3-footer at the seventeenth or a 2-footer at the eighteenth. Brown was defeated, 4 and 3, by the British veteran, Leonard Crawley.

Robert Sweeny, an American-born player who has resided in London for years and is representing an English club, advanced today by beating John Baillieu, 3 and 2.

Two former British amateur champions were eliminated, Hon. Michael Scott, who won in 1933, and John De Forest, who won in 1932.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

History, the Nats, the Athletics, Earl Whitehill and Buddy Lewis and Cecil Travis repeated themselves yesterday.

The repetition took the form of another walloping of the A's by the Nats, a state of affairs that is becoming historic inasmuch as it has happened five times in five meetings this year. Repetition was also evident in Earl Whitehill's second straight pitching triumph and a succession of base hits by Lewis and Travis.

Lewis and Travis, the two young roommates, ganged up against the Philadelphia pitching with three hits each to show the way for the Nats' 8-2 victory.

It all served to move the Nats to within a half-game of the first division and left 'em only a game and a half out of third place. When the Yankees were toppled by the Red Sox up in Boston, the Nats climbed to within 5½ games of the league lead, with five victories in their last six games to show for their efforts.

It was an eight-hit game that Earl Whitehill pitched against the motley collection of former collegians, former sandlotters and the remnants of Connie Mack's once powerful Philadelphia teams. The venerable southpaw, evincing no trouble from his recently sprained ankle, breezed along behind a 3-1

Jakovia Named Winner of Hagerstown Feature in Nose Finish

Victory Is 3d Of Day for Palumbo

Idle Worker Is Second, Mahi Third; Double Returns $40.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Hagerstown, Md., May 26.—A thrilling nose finish that would have occasioned a photo finish if this track boasted the "electric eye," marked the running of the Hotel Alexander Purse, the feature race here today. The 6,000 present waited while the judges separated Jakovia and Idle Worker. The usual cheers and boos greeted the decision, but it appeared to be right from where your correspondent sat. One thing is certain, Mahi was third.

Jakovia was the third winner of the day ridden by Sammy Palumbo, the Silvio Coucci of the half-milers. The little Italian-American turned in a masterful job of bringing the daughter of Sir Galahad III from behind the terrific pace of Idle Worker to be up in the final strides. Jakovia and Mahi drew most of the wagering and the winner paid a $5.70 mutuel.

Those who went in for the daily double and played the 8-3 combination, were rewarded with a $40 payoff.

Queen Blaze, a shifty filly, stepped out of the maiden class in the first race, taking a neck decision from Miss Wrack. Little Whisk was third and the race was a three-horse proposition from the start. Sammy Palumbo rode the winner which paid an $8.30 mutuel.

Aella, the favorite, led from start to finish in the second race to pay a $4.20 mutuel. Timber Phantom, virtually left at the post came up to fight it out for the last three furlongs but could not cope with the winner. Abitibi, a paddock tip, was second in the field of eight.

Let's Play made it two victories in a row in the third race, leading most of the way to take a close verdict from Dressmaker, the favorite. Third money went to a fast-closing Busy Toney. L. Pikor had the mount on the winner and turned in an excellent job. Let's Play paid a $9.20 mutuel.

Wise Sister, the property of J. B. Belk, made a show of her field in the fourth race to hang up the fastest time of the meeting, running the 5 furlongs in 1:00 4-5. Palumbo did the riding and hustled his charge to the front where she ran easily ahead of her opposition to pay a mere $2.60 to win by a freak of the mutuels. Wise Sister, $2.80 to show. Wise Money was second and Adriatic was third at a $40 show pay off.

Tech Nine Rallies to Win, 7-6, and Keep Western From Title

Ball Bounces Over Head Of Fielder

Manual Trainers Score 4 Runs to Triumph; Wise's Hit Decides.

By John R. Vosburgh.

Western High mised the inter-high baseball championship by the proverbial eyelash yesterday—or to be more accurate, by a tuft of grass. The Georgetowners had a 6-3 lead and were one put-out away from the title in the ninth inning when a Tech team, which didn't know when it was beaten, banged four singles and a double off the south-paw delivery of lanky Leaton Kushman to win a story-book 7-6 victory.

The tuft of grass injected itself into the proceedings on what appeared to be the last put-out of the game, a grounder by George Hahn to third baseman Dickie Lynham. The little infielder set himself for the play and the fans started walking away from the field.

At this crucial moment, however, the ball bounced into a hummock a few feet in front of Lynham and bounced clear over his head for a hit. At the time it hardly appeared to be a serious development, but Tech seized the break eagerly.

The next man up, black-haired Abe Fillah slashed a clean single to left field and the ball roled through Paul Borden's legs for an error, allowing Hahn to score and Fillah taking second. Along came wiry Wes Snow and with the count 3 and 2 pounded a screaming triple to deep center, scoring Fillah. It was his third straight hit.

Still One Behind.

Tech was still one run behind but Catcher Jim Wise shelled a single to left and Snow trotted over the plate with the tying run. In the confusion of the throw-in Wise stole second. Brownie Lemerise grounded to Lynham, whose throw to first was wide and Wise went to third. Tech wasn't long in bringing over that winning run.

Second Baseman Bill Larricks stepped into Leaton's second pitch for a single to center and Wise jogged home with the run which gave Tech its 7-to-6 margin. It hardly mattered that Lemerise, who had taken second while Larricks was at bat, was out at the plate on a neat throw from center by Jim Middleton.

Bill Edmonston, Western's second sacker, and leading hitter of the series made a valiant effort to put the series leaders back in the ball game in the last half of the ninth. He led off with his third of the day a double down the third base-line but Alafoginas, Middleton and Borden flied out in succession to end the game.

The result gives Central a chance to tie for the championship Thursday by winning its game with Roosevelt. If Central is successful, the two leaders will meet in a play-off for the title next week.

The hitting of Edmonston, Snow and Larrick and the fielding of Lynham, Western third-sacker, stood out particularly. The little hot-corner guardian handled eight chances with but one error, knocking down three bullet-like drives bound for sure hits to convert them into put-outs.

Central Wins, 6-1, Takes Net Crown

Led by Capt. Charlie Channing, the Central tennis team clinched the interhigh championship yesterday with a 6-to-1 triumph over Eastern on the Pierce Mill courts. Central was undefeated throughout the series and succeeds Western to the title.

The losers' single point yesterday was chalked up in the No. 2 doubles when Richardson and Matthews trimmed Smith and Mullenix to the tune of 6-3, 6-3. In the feature match Blankin rallied to defeat Simpson 3-6, 6-1 and 7-5.

Singles—Channing (C) defeated Cranston, 6—1, 6—3; Adair (C) defeated Lichliter, 6—1, 4—6, 6—2; Landsman (C) defeated Matthews, 6—3, 6—1; Gelfand (C) defeated Winter, 8—6, 4—6, 6—2; Blankin (C) defeated Simpson, 3—6, 6—1, 7—5.

Doubles—Channing and Adair (C) defeated Cranston and Lichliter, 6—2, 6—0; Richardson and Matthews (E) defeated Smith and Mullenix, 6—3, 6—3.

Pepco Diamonders Center Market Win

Center Market and Pepco ball clubs pounded out a victory apiece yesterday in National Capital League games of The Post Association. Home runs by Bailey and Howard carried the Pepcos to a 7-4 victory over Washington Gas Light Co. Center Market bunched eight hits effectively to beat Chestnut Farms Dairy, 12-7.

Herman Leads Attack As Cubs Beat Reds 10-4

Chicago, May 26 (AP).—The Cubs bombarded Lee Stine for seven runs in the third inning and went on to a 10-to-4 victory over Cincinnati today as they returned home from their losing road trip. Billy Herman featured the Cubs' 15-hit attack with a pair of doubles, his eighteenth and nineteenth of the season.

Police Protest But Lose to Aggies, 6-5

The Metropolitan Police were thrown into something of a hubbub yesterday in the course of losing a 6-5 decision to Department of Agriculture in a U. S. Government League game of The Post Sandlot Association.

The Bluecoats put up a strenuous protest in the fifth inning when two runs scored on Casper's topped roller which dribbled down the third baseline while Police players hovered over it called it foul only to have Umpire Cobean declare it fair. By this time Casper was on second base, possessor of a double on an infield hit, and what proved to be the winning runs had crossed the plate.

The Police had already experienced a rather unfortunate, not to say embarrassing, situation in the first inning when Grayson, Police third baseman, hit a home run with Heiser on base only to have the effect nullified because Grayson had neglectec to otuch first base. Heiser's run also didn't count since Grayson's was the third out and he could not be given credit for a hit.

30 More Enter Kenwood Golf Tourney

Thirty entries yesterday increased to 80 the field of starters for today's 18-hole qualifying round of the Kenwood Golf and County Club invitation tournament.

Among the post entries were Claude Rippy, District municipal champion; Gardiner Meese, Bannockburn star; Joe Greenwood, of Army and Navy Ed Merkle and George Richardson, of Congressional.

The Kenwood committee expects at least 10 or 15 additional starters by tee time—8 o'clock.

Toby Tyler and Eddie Lighbown, two unattached golfers, also late entrants, will fire first. Play will be in twosomes.

Announcement that 32 would qualify for the first flight was greeted with great gusto by the top-notch golfers who tuned up yesterday.

Match play will begin tomorrow, with handsome prizes to be awarded the various flight winners and runners-up. Wiffy Cox, Kenwood professional, will be on the tee to greet the players.

Starting times for late entrants follow:

8:00, Toby Tyler (unattached) and Eddie Lighbown (unattached); 9:20, Gardiner Meese (Bannockburn) and W. R. Welsh (unattached); 9:25, Jack Olmsted (Argyle) and Ray Willett (unattached); 9:30, W. J. McEvoy (Congressional) and B. C. Brown (Congressional).

10:10, Fred L. Chamison (unattached) and George Keene (Bannockburn); 10:35, Collins Gaines (Argyle) and partner; 10:40, Ed Merkle (Congressional) and George Richardson (Congressional); 11:30, Claude Rippy (unattached) and J. R. Gipe (Washington); 1:30, Allen Laing (Bannockburn) and Patrick Axtell (unattached).

1:45, Andrew J. Walker (Congressional) and partner; 1:55, Buddy Tew (Kenwood) and John R. Miller (Beaver Dam); 2:05, William Lines (Beaver Dam); 2:10, Jack J. Cullinane (Washington) and Perry Patterson (Bannockburn).

2:15, Hale Dinneen (Washington) and A. U. Smith (Beaver Dame); 2:30, Harvey Johnson (Columbia) and Charlie Pettijohn (Georgetown); 2:35, John Bergelin (Kenwood) and Charlie Cole (Kenwood); 2:40, Louis Macina (Indian Spring) and S. E. Linderman (Kenwood); 2:45, Joe Greenwood and partner.

Women golfers who participate in the 36-hole Star Cup tournament opening today at Beaver Dam Country Club have been requested to bring their own caddies.

Eighty-eight women, including most of the outsanding District golfers, will play in the two-day event over the long and rugged Landover course. Play will start at 8:15.

Luther Steward, jr., and Albert Mackenzie tied with Marty West and Dana Belser with a best-ball of 73 in the qualifying rounds for the Cummings Trophy tournament at Columbia yesterday. They will play off in a few days to decide which team will face Miller B. Stevinson and Don Woodward, champions, for the two-man title.

Mrs. A. C. Reed defeated Mrs. L. O. Cameron, 1 up, to win the French High Commisison Cup at Chevy Chase. Mrs. Cameron had to give away 6 strokes.

Play for the Marc Goldnamer Trophy will feature Memorial Day at Woodmont Saturday. Sunday the qualifying round for the club handicap championship, won by Mel Kraft, will be held.

Resettlement 7-5 Victor Over G.A.O.

The Resettlement Federals lengthened their lead in the Federal "A" League of The Post Sandlot Association yesterday with a 7-5 victory over General Accounting Office, Postoffice Division. It was Resettlement's fifth win in six starts. Gallagher's home run figured largely in the victory.

Wheat Slumps As Squeeze of Shorts Fails

May Contracts Tumble 5 Cents, Limit Under Set Rules.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 26.—Five cents a bushel tumultous collapse of prices formed the outcome today of May wheat dealings many traders had feared would culminate in market skyrocketing.

Predictions that speculators short of wheat to fulfill big unsettled May contracts would find themselves in a squeeze, and be forced to pay fancy prices to extricate themselves, were based on the fact that Chicago stocks of wheat had appeared relatively small. However, large amounts were brought here the past few days from other places, in particular Kansas City, where it became evident today additional liberal supplies would be available cheap in time to deliver in Chicago before the month-end.

Last Chance.

Today was the last chance, though, to effect settements without actual tenders of grain, and it was not until the last minutes preceding the wind-up of the day's business that the climax came. Then almost in a twinkling, stubborn holders who had been hoping for a belated sharp advance of prices gave up the ghost and flooded the trading pit with a rush of orders to sell.

Wheat closed excited 1 cent to 5⅛ cents under yesterday's finish, 6⅛ cents down from yesterday's top, with May quoted 90⅜; July, 83⅞@84; September, 84@84⅛; corn, ¾ down to 1⅝ up; May, 64½@64¾; July, 59¼@59⅜; September, 57¼@57⅜; oats, ⅛@⅜ off, July, 24¼@24⅜, and rye showing ⅞@1⅜ decline; July, 52⅝@52¾. In provisions, the close varied from 10 cents set back to a rise of 2 cents.

$100,000,000 Bills 2.8 Times Subscribed

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announces that the tenders for two series of Treasury bills, to be dated today, which were offered on May 22, have been opened at the Federal Reserve banks.

Tenders were invited for the two series to the aggregate amount of $100,000,000, or thereabouts, and $280,030,000 was applied for, of which $100,110,000 was accepted.

World Lead Output Shows Sharp Rise

New York, May 26 (AP).—World lead production in April totaled 140,367 tons, compared with 128,747 tons in March and 128,366 tons in April, 1935, the American Bureau of Metal Statistics reported today.

Standard Oil Units Increase Production

New York, May 26 (AP).—Crude oil deliveries of nine companies formerly of the Standard Oil Co. Eastern group increased more than 66,000 barrels in April, as compared with the same month last year.

Total deliveries for the month were 8,015,567 barrels, against 7,949,058 a year ago.

Failures Decline.

New York, May 26 (AP).—Business failures for the week ended May 21 totaled 174 against 206 in the previous week, and 229 in the corresponding week last year, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent

Stocks Advance in More Active Trading; Government Bonds Lower; Wheat Slumps.

New York, May 26.—Speculative securities markets continued to harden in tone. Stocks were unexciting, outside the railroad group and a handful of specialties, but the turnover of more than 1,000,000 shares was the largest in a week and most prices advanced briskly near the close. Bonds improved, except in the Treasury list. Grains weakened. September wheat closed 1⅛ cents lower at 84 cents a bushel.

Morning trading in stocks was brightened by a forward movement in railroad shares. Some of them were more buoyant than they have been in the past few weeks. Santa Fe, for instance, moved up nearly 3 points and many of the others gained a good fraction to a point. Recently a number of markers have drifted by to indicate that the tide may be setting in favor of the railroad shares. Freight car loadings are holding well above the total of a year ago, and the early reports on April earnings are showing a good increase over the corresponding month of last year.

Improved Conditions.

Some improvement in conditions was brought to the attention of investors by the report of the Investment Bankers Association, published today. That report said railroad investments seemed to have turned the corner. Certainly the roads in recent months have found they could do with less aid from the Government, and in turn they have had some real help from the authorities. Reports that the office of railroad co-ordinator would be allowed to expire was regarded as a proof of the stronger position.

While Eastern lines are mostly opposed to the lower passenger fares soon to go into effect, the market generally looks at the matter differently. Speculators at least think the lower fares favor increased earnings. More important than that are the preparations of the roads to establish store door freight pickup and delivery, and the general weakening of pressure for legislation to put management into strait-jackets. Given control of competing transportation, water and highway, time will work in favor of the railroads with the march of returning prosperity, but it appears to be ultra-optimistic to assume that no difficult railroad problems remain to be solved.

Farm implement shares were strong in spite of a sharp break in wheat prices. They were influenced by the longer term outlook for rising farm income, both from the crops and from the Government. Case was the leader, with a rise of 2 or 3 points. Later the early gains were battered by the continued weakness in grains.

Individual Performers.

Steels were mixed throughout. Steel common was unable to go anywhere, but Crucible jumped nearly 2 points on one sale. Youngstown was strong. Firm prices were the rule among the metals, foods, tobaccos, mail orders, rubbers and amusements. Most of the oils were down a little. Chemical shares worked higher. Utilities, motor accessories, rail equipments and motors were steady to higher, but for the remainder the market was narrow and price movements of consequence were confined to a dozen assorted issues.

Banking Position.

Figures of reporting member banks in 101 cities for May 20 revealed a gain of $118,000,000 in demand deposits, an $86,000,000 rise in reserves most of which was in New York and produced by heavy gold imports and slight changes in volume of credit employed. A decrease of $38,000,000 in loans to banks offset a $37,000,000 rise in other loans. Both the decrease in loans to banks and the increase in other loans occurred mainly in the New York City area. There was a considerable shift of Government securities to New York from the interior. Bank holdings of Treasury direct obligations rose $22,000,000 here and declined $21,000,000 in the Chicago district and $20,000,000 in the Richmond district. Smaller decreases elsewhere offset an $8,000,000 rise in such holdings at Kansas City. There was a slight decrease in Government guaranteed securities and a small gain in other securities.

Inside Information.

If traders were secretly glad of the SEC provision for publicity of stock market operations by directors and other large holders of stock, they must be feeling some slight disappointment. Reports on purchases and sales have come to public notice much too late to serve as a guide to those on the outside. For example, insiders sold heavily in February, when the market was around its peak, but knowledge of that did not reach the public until April and earlier this month—after the big break had come. No legal way can be devised to give the outsider an even break with the insider on a stock, assuming that stock prices will vary with earnings.

Frequent Reports.

As some view it, the ability to profit from what a director knows of the condition of a company is part of the business of being in the management. On the ethical side, while something might be said in favor of prohibition of speculation by a director as a director, one owner of stock, be his percentage 1 per cent or 99 per cent, has as much right to buy and sell at will as any one else. About the most that can be done for the small stockholder is to compel directors to supply him with more informative and more frequent reports. Even if a man buys into a corporation for the purpose of holding his stock for years, he is entitled to frequent and regular reports. The practice of the railroads (under compulsion by the ICC) is far superior to the haphazard methods of industrial corporations.

Treasury Free Gold.

The Treasury daily statement for May 22 reveals the deposit in the reserve banks that day of $50,000,000 of gold certificate credits, the largest amount deposited in a day in a long period. The Treasury usually pays for gold imports out of its reserve bank deposits, issuing gold certificates to replenish the bank deposits later. The Treasury is still lagging in its certficate deposits in relation to imports of gold, by some $40,000,000, and now has about $485,000,000 of gold in the general fund. About $166,000,000 of the total is earmarked for redemption of national bank notes and $140,000 for mscellaneous purposes, leaving only $179,000,000 actually free.

Pengo Devaluation.

For a long perod the free market quotation for Hungarain pengoes has been around 19.85 cents, compared with an official quotation of more than 29 cents. Some time ago the fictitious character of the official rate became generally apparent. Now the Hungarian government has cut the offical to the free market level, to all intents and purposes performing a devaluation without formally enacting such a measure. A good many South American countries have done the same thing. About all it means is that the Hungarian government now recognizes that the pengo is actually worth about 32 per cent less than it used to be. Gold is not freely exported from Hungary and since the nation is not on an actual gold basis it cannot be said to have gone off gold; it has just drifted a little further from it.

St. Joseph Lead Co. Doubles Dividend

New York, May 26.—St. Joseph Lead Co. has increased its dividend to 20 cents a share from 10 cents formerly. This is the first change in disbursement since company resumed payments with a declaration of 10 cents on May 25, 1934, after a lapse of nearly two years.

Pittsburgh, May 26 (AP).—The South Penn Oil Co. declared a quarterly dividend of 37½ cents and an extra disbursement of 22½ cents a share today. Both are payable June 30 to stock of record June 15. The last quarterly dividend of 37½ cents was accompanied by an extra payment of 12½ cents.

Middletown, Ohio, May 26 (AP).—Directors of the American Rolling Mill Co. declared today a dividend of 1½ per cent, or $1.50 on 6 per cent preferred stock of the company, to holders of record July 1 and payable July 15. A regular quarterly dividend of 30 cents a share on common stock was made payable the same date, to holders of record June 15.

New York, May 26 (AP).—Directors of Union Carbide & Carbon Corporation today declared a dividend of 60 cents a share on the capital stock payable July 1 to stock of record June 5. In the two preceding quarters dividends of 50 cents each were declared.

W. R. T. Profit Gains Slightly Over Last Year

Net for 4 Months Shows an Increase of $6,943.80.

Net revenues of the Washington Rapid Transit Co. for April, showed a slight increase, $803.73, over April last year, according to the report filed yesterday with Public Utilities Commission.

Operating revenues were $50,871.56, an increase of $5,196.21, and operating expenses were $37,511.77, also an increase of $4,409.38, leaving an operating income of $12,359.79, a gain of $786.83.

Gross was practically the same as the net from operations. Deductions from gross totaled $1,772.62, leaving a net income in April of $10,657.89, against $9,853.96 in April, 1935, an advance of $803.73 for the month.

The company also filed returns for the first four months of this year, showing operating expenses of $175,693.99, a gain of $23,797.62 over the like period in 1935. Operating expenses required $147,509.12, an increase of $16,853.82.

Net income from operations reached the sum of $28,184.87, an advance of $6,943.80. Deductions from gross called for $7,110.20, leaving net revenue for the four months of $21,353.49, as compared with $14,173.27 a year ago and a gain of $7,180.22.

The report shows that the higher net income than a year ago was due to an increase in passengers carried on the company's buses and also to the fact that while expenses were higher they did not rise as fast as operating revenues.

Late Rally Lifts N. Y. Curb Prices

New York, May 26 (AP).—An indifferent performance by the Curb market was relieved today by a sharp run-up in prices in the last few minutes of trading. The late buying activities were inspired by a spirited final-hour rise on the big board. Gains ranged from fractions in such leaders as Electric Bond & Share, Pan-American Airways and Sunshine Mining up to a top limit of around 3 points in Aluminum Co. of America, American Gas & Electric, Gulf Oil, Lake Shore Mines and Montgomery Ward "A."

A few issues in the active group failed to respond promptly to the last minute upturn and closed lower on the day.

Women Underwriters Organize D. C. Section

Miss Sarah Frances Jones, C. L. U., of Chicago, who is also national chairman of the women underwriters committee of the national association outlined the proposed activities. She is known as "a million dollar producer." Miss Alma McCrumb, agent for the New York Life Insurance Co. in Washington, was elected chairman of the new women's section.

Insurance Company Called Insolvent

Kansas City, Kans., May 26 (AP).—Federal District Judge John C. Pollock declared today that the Federal Reserve Life Insurance Co. here, with policies estimated to aggregate $70,000,000, was insolvent because of "wrongful management."

William R. Baker, former Kansas commissioner of insurance, took over its direction after his appointment as receiver by Judge Pollock, who acted on an application filed by W. W. Holloway, Kansas City, a stockholder.

"Aside from the hopelessly insolvent condition of the defendant company," Judge Pollock wrote in referring to the company's administration prior to its reorganization in 1929, "there have been the most flagrant acts of mismanagement and waste of assets by the officers, directors and controlling stockholders."

The following is merely a brief outline of certain information contained in the Offering Prospectus and is subject to the more detailed statements in the Offering Prospectus and the Registration Statement, which also include important information not outlined or indicated herein. The Offering Prospectus, which must be furnished to each purchaser, should be read prior to any purchase of these Debentures.

THE COMPANY The Company, which was incorporated in New Jersey on August 5, 1882, is a holding company solely, owning stocks in subsidiaries and other corporations both domestic and foreign, bonds and other securities. The subsidiaries are engaged and intend to engage principally in producing from lands owned, leased or held under concession, refining, transporting, buying and selling crude petroleum and products derived therefrom at wholesale and retail and in producing, buying, selling and transporting and distributing natural gas. Subsidiaries own oil pipe lines, ships, refineries, bulk plants, service stations and other marketing facilities, and natural gas lands, wells and gas pipe lines.

CAPITALIZATION—The Company and its Subsidiaries—Consolidated:

	Outstanding as of December 31, 1935
Long Term Debt of Subsidiary Companies, due 1936 to 1959	$ 9,427,802.90
Long Term Debt of Company (exclusive of $10,450,000 Serial Debentures held by a Subsidiary) due 1936 to 1941	73,344,927.68*
*Standard Oil Export Corporation 5% Cumulative Non-Voting Guaranteed Preferred Stock—par value $100 per share	76,493,500.00
Other Preferred Stocks of Subsidiary Companies held by the Public	13,260,377.79
Capital Stock (25,856,081 shares, par value $25) of the Company	646,402,025.00

Dividends and, upon liquidation, payment of the par value guaranteed jointly and severally by the Company, Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, Standard Oil Company of Louisiana, and The Carter Oil Company by agreement of guaranty dated November 6, 1929, and contract of assumption of guaranty dated December 26, 1934.*

Note: As of December 31, 1935, there were outstanding $30,858,388.68 of loans ($6,446,989.81 of which were secured by pledge of marketable securities) to the Company and its subsidiaries from Trustees of Annuity Trusts, which loans are callable on demand by the Trustees, but under the practical operation of the annuity program funds are called on only as and when required for pension fund disbursements.

PURPOSE OF ISSUE The proceeds from the sale of the Debentures ($82,700,000 exclusive of accrued interest) without deduction for expenses, will be made available to Standard Oil Export Corporation and used together with other funds to be supplied to that corporation by the Company to retire the $76,493,500 aggregate par value of 5% Preferred Stock of that corporation on June 30, 1936 at 110% of its par value ($84,142,850).

EARNINGS Reference is made to the Offering Prospectus for information as to earnings for 1933, 1934 and 1935. The Consolidated Income Accounts therein for the Company and its subsidiaries for such years (not certified for 1933), subject to (a) the accountants' certificate, (b) the notes which are integral parts of the Income Accounts and of the Balance Sheet, and (c) the information in the Surplus Accounts, all of which must be read in connection with the figures and which set forth, among other things, the treatment of foreign exchange, the substantial surplus adjustments, the inclusion of intercompany profits in inventories, and the lack of comparability of the figures from year to year, show that the income of the Company and its subsidiaries, after eliminating intercompany items and after deducting operating charges, fixed charges of subsidiary companies, dividends on preferred stocks of subsidiary companies, provision for taxes, and earnings applicable to minority interests in common stocks of subsidiary companies, but before deducting fixed charges of the Company, amounted to $36,190,263 in 1933, $54,498,810 in 1934 and $69,319,306 in 1935. Interest and debt discount and expenses of the Company (excluding interest paid to subsidiaries eliminated in the Consolidated Income Accounts) amounted to $9,105,953 in 1933, $8,879,850 in 1934 and $6,456,114 in 1935. These accounts also show that net profit carried to Unappropriated (Earned) Surplus amounted to $25,984,310 in 1933, $45,618,960 in 1934 and $62,863,193 in 1935. The Offering Prospectus also sets forth Income Accounts of the Company for the years 1933, 1934 and 1935 (not certified for 1933) and the relationship of the dividends received by the Company from subsidiaries in such years to the amount of the Company's proportionate share in subsidiaries' earnings or losses.

DEBENTURES The Twenty-Five Year 3% Debentures, due June 1, 1961, will be issued under an Indenture dated June 1, 1936. The Indenture does not authorize the issuance of any additional securities thereunder. The Indenture does not limit the amount of other securities, secured or unsecured, which may hereafter be issued by the Company, but provides that, except in the case of purchase money mortgages and liens, except in the case of pledges in the usual course of business as security for temporary loans or indemnity for terms not exceeding one year, and except pledges to secure borrowings of the Company from the trustee or trustees of any annuity, thrift or other fund or funds created for the benefit of the employees of the Company or of its subsidiaries, the Company will not mortgage or pledge any of its property without thereby securing the due and punctual payment of the principal and interest of the Debentures issued and outstanding under the Indenture, ratably with any and all obligations secured by such mortgage or pledge and that, if and when the Company shall create any such mortgage or pledge, the Debentures will be so secured thereby.

UNDERWRITING Subject to certain terms and conditions the Underwriters named in the Offering Prospectus have severally agreed to purchase from the Company $30,000,000 principal amount of Debentures at 96%, or a total of $28,800,000 plus accrued interest. Such Debentures are to be offered to the public at 98%, or a total of $29,400,000 plus accrued interest. The underwriting discounts are 2% or $600,000. The Company has agreed to sell without underwriting discounts or commissions, and The Rockefeller Foundation, The Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, China Medical Board, Inc., Spelman Fund of New York and a subsidiary of the Company have agreed to purchase severally an aggregate of $55,000,000 principal amount of Debentures at a total price of $53,900,000 (98% per unit, the public offering price) plus accrued interest, simultaneously with or prior to payment by the Underwriters for the Debentures underwritten.

Price 98% and Accrued Interest

The undersigned and the other Underwriters named in the Offering Prospectus have agreed to purchase $30,000,000 principal amount of these Debentures when, as and if issued, and subject to the approval of Messrs. Davis Polk Wardwell Gardiner & Reed, counsel for the Underwriters, and Mr. Edward F. Johnson, counsel for the Company. It is expected that delivery of Debentures in temporary or definitive form will be made at the office of Messrs. J. P. Morgan & Co., on or about June 5, 1936, against payment therefor in New York funds.

As more fully set forth in the Offering Prospectus, the Underwriters have authorized the purchase and sale, in the open market or otherwise, of Debentures for their several accounts, either for long or short account within the limits and during the period set forth in the Agreement between themselves.

Further information, particularly financial statements, is contained in the Registration Statement on file with the Securities and Exchange Commission, and in the Offering Prospectus which must be furnished to each purchaser and is obtainable from the undersigned or from any other Underwriter of this issue.

THE PROTECTION of Your Estate

—whether large or small—is a matter of utmost importance and should command immediate attention.

- Size of the Estate has no bearing upon the measure of care, fidelity and safety with which it is administered by this 122-year-old bank.
- The cost of services is very moderate . . . easily within the reach of everyone having funds, property or insurance.
- The Trust Business, now handled by "The Metropolitan," aggregates over $36,000,000.00.

$30,000,000 Standard Oil 3%s Offered

A block of $30,000,000 Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey 25-year 3 per cent debentures is being offered today by Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., at 98 per cent and interest.

The present offering is part of an issue of $85,000,000 of these debentures registered with the SEC on May 8. The Rockefeller Foundation, the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, the China Medical Board, Inc., the Spelman Fund, and a subsidiary of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey have agreed to purchase the remaining $55,000,000 at 98 per cent.

Proceeds of the sale, estimated at $82,700,000 exclusive of interest, without deduction for expenses, will be made available to Standard Oil Export Corporation and will be used together with other funds to be supplied to that corporation by the company to retire $76,493,500 par value of 5 per cent preferred stock of the corporation on June 30 at 110.

The debentures are redeemable at the option of the company at any time in whole on 30 days' notice, or in part at 60 days' notice at the following prices: to June 1, 1941 at 103; thereafter to June 1, 1946 at 102; thereafter to June 1, 1951 at 101; thereafter to June 1, 1956 at 100½ and thereafter at 100.

B. & O. Is Completing 480 Air-Cooled Cars

Baltimore, May 26.—A program authorizing the air-conditioning of 57 more passenger cars on the Baltimore & Ohio will give the B. & O. 480 air-conditioned cars to meet the anticipated heavy demands of the vacation season. Air-conditioning has been a rapid development on the Baltimore & Ohio, since it was not until 1930 that the first railroad car in the world—a B. & O. diner—was air-conditioned, followed by the first completely air-conditioned train in 1931 and the first long-distance sleeping car train in 1932. A search of B. & O. records has just revealed that in 1884 the B. & O. with a huge ice-box installed its first air-cooling system in a railroad passenger car.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 26.—Idleness in the stock market was attributed to the Epsom race meet on Wednesday and the approaching Whitsuntide holidays. Price movements were irregular. Anglo Iranian oil shares declining on the disappointing dividend announcement, while Mexican Eagle and Canadian Eagle oils were firm features in that group. Industrials, textiles, home rails and mining shares were firm. Transatlantics and gilt-edged securities closed heavy.

Paris—Buying was inspired by the prevailing low prices, which in turn helped French shares to retain some losses, rentes especially being in better demand. International issues remained steady.

Liverpool—Wheat futures opened higher in sympathy with yesterday's late rally in Chicago, but the market broke later on greatly improved European crop and weather reports. Cotton held steady with trade buying of near positions and covering in new crop options.

Proposals

PROCUREMENT DIVISION, PUBLIC Works Branch, Washington, D. C., May 19, 1936. Sealed proposals in duplicate will be publicly opened in this office at 1 p. m. June 18, 1936, for furnishing all labor and materials and performing all work for construction of the U. S. Public Health Service Animal Laboratory Building, etc., at Bethesda, Md. Attention is directed to the special conditions of bidding set forth in the specification. Upon application, one set of drawings and specifications will be supplied free to each general contractor interested in submitting a proposal. The above drawings and specifications must be returned to this office. Contractors requiring additional sets may obtain them by purchase from this office at a cost of $10 per set, which will not be returned. Checks offered as payment for drawings and specifications must be made payable to the order of the Treasurer, United States. Drawings and specifications will not be furnished to contractors who have consistently failed to submit proposals. One set upon request, and when considered in the interests of the Government, will be furnished builders' exchanges, chambers of commerce or other organizations who will guarantee to make them available for any subcontractor or material firm interested, and to quantity surveyors, but this privilege will be withdrawn if the sets are not returned after they have accomplished their purpose. W. E. REYNOLDS, Assistant Director of Procurement, Public Works Branch.

IN THE MUNICIPAL COURT OF THE District of Columbia. William J. Davis, 1029 Vermont avenue northwest, plaintiff, vs. Eliza S. Capen (also known as Eliza Herring), Clarksville, N. Y. (P. O. address, Cuba, N. Y.), defendant. No. A12086. Order of publication in attachment. The object of this suit is to recover $638.25, with interest and costs, and to have judgment of condemnation of certain property of the defendant levied on under an attachment issued in this suit to satisfy the plaintiff's claim. It is, therefore, this 23rd day of May, 1936, ordered that the defendant, Eliza S. Capen (also known as Eliza Herring), appear in this court on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays after the day of the first publication of this order, to defend this suit and show cause why said condemnation should not be had; otherwise the suit will be proceeded with as in case of default. BREUNINGER GIVES YOU THE UNEXPECTED AT A PRICE YOU WANT TO PAY
1310 Locust Rd. NW., Shepherd Park—Complete! That's the word that best describes the sweeping charm and elegance of this home that sparkles with simplicity of which few artists and architects are capable of instilling in average-priced homes. Yet Breuninger did it—Breuninger has already made the name famous not only for a better type of building construction but for offering the finest homes at modest prices. This home has a spacious front porch which leads to large center hall, and there's another porch in the back, off the living room which overlooks the garden. Now let's go into the manly den which is skilfully paneled; then to the lavatory at the rear of the stair hall. There's a cool dining room and a delightful electric kitchen; three master bedrooms; 2 beautiful tiled baths; screened-in sleeping porch; finished attic which is well insulated as are all the exterior walls of this home. Entire home is centered in 60-foot landscaped lot. Yes, there's a garage. Better see it today. Two blocks east of 16th St. on Locust rd. nw.

NED BRANT—A Story of College Athletics

By Bob Zuppke
Famous Football Coach

WOT'S TH' IDEA OF COMIN' DOWN THE STREET SIDE BY SIDE?
SH-HH!
WELL, I'LL BE- HEY!
WHY- WHERE ARE WE?
WELL, YOU'RE NOT IN A SECLUDED NOOK WITH DIMMED LIGHTS, COACH BRANT!
HOW'S YOUR MEMORY, OFFICER?
I'D HATE TO HAVE THIS STORY GET BACK TO THE CAMPUS.
HOW'D YOU REACT TO A YEAR'S PASS TO ALL GAMES FOR YOU AND FAMILY?
NOW, IF YOU PUT IT THAT WAY, MY MEMORY'S TERRIBLE!

APPLE MARY

By Martha Orr

YOU'LL FIND OUT, MISTER LOOTER.
5-27
LET'S NOT QUARREL. IF YOU'RE NOT GUILTY, YOU KNOW I WOULDN'T WANT TO USE MY INFLUENCE AGAINST YOU.
THE VERY IDEA! YOU CAUSED MY ARREST.
YOU'RE ALL WRONG! JUST STOP YOUR SILLY EFFORTS TO LOCATE THIS CRAZY PICTURE, AND I'LL SEE THAT THE CHARGE AGAINST YOU IS DISMISSED—
BUT, IF YOU PERSIST, I'LL USE ALL MY INFLUENCE TO SPEED UP YOUR TRIAL AND GET YOUR CONVICTION.
GO AWAY, I'M NOT HAVING ANYTHING TO DO WITH YOU.

MICKEY FINN

By Lank Leonard

MICHAEL! I DIDN'T HEAR YOU COME IN! OH-I'M SO GLAD YOU'RE BACK SAFE- NOW THAT YOU REALLY ARE AN OFFICER, I'M JUST REALIZING HOW DANGEROUS IT IS-CHASING CRIMINALS ALL DAY- YOU MUST BE TERRIBLY TIRED.
AW-THERE'S NOTHIN' TA WORRY ABOUT MA-AND DON'T BOTHER GETTIN' ME SUPPER-MISTER KING STOPPED AT THE STATION HOUSE AND INVITED ME UP TA HIS HOME-HE WOULDN'T TAKE NO FOR AN ANSWER.
HUH-YOU'D BE BETTER OFF STAYIN' HERE AND SOAKIN' YOUR FEET!
I'LL LAY OUT THE NEW SHIRT YOU BOUGHT FOR EASTER MICHAEL-YOU'LL WANT TO BE LOOKIN' YOUR BEST, LARRY KING IS A BIG MAN TODAY- THEY SAY HE BUILT HIMSELF A PALACE.
WELL BE SURE YA GET ENOUGH TA EAT-THEM SWELLS USUALLY DISH OUT SAMPLES-DO YA KNOW HOW TA GET THERE?
OH, SURE- THE GLENVILLE BUS GOES OUT THAT WAY-AND I KNOW MOST OF THE DRIVERS. ONE OF 'EM WILL TELL ME.
THAT'S THE PLACE MICKEY-AND DON'T BE NERVOUS-HE'S A SWELL GUY.
THANKS A LOT -GEE-IT LOOKS LIKE A GOLF CLUB OR SUMPIN-DON'T IT?

HOW DO I LOOK?
YOU LOOK FINE, BOB! COME ON, LET'S GO.
WELL, HERE WE ARE! BUT TAKE YOUR HANDS OUT OF YOUR COAT POCKETS! YOU'RE THROUGH REACHING FOR A ROD, UNDERSTAND!
CITY WAREHOUSE CO. STORAGE
WOW! I CAN'T BELIEVE IT! THAT'S "LIPS" ALL RIGHT-AND STILL IT AIN'T!
AND IF IT IS "LIPS", WHAT'S HE DOING IN THERE WITH TRACY ---- AND NO HANDCUFFS ON! BOY! WAIT TILL MIMI HEARS ABOUT THIS.
SNAP!

KNOBBY RUSHES TO THE PHILLY HOTEL WHERE THE SPORTS SCRIBES ARE QUARTERED
6-27
ARE YA SURE IT WAS HIM MURRAY?
I'D SWEAR IT KNOBBY. I'VE BEEN ON TOO MANY TRAINING SIEGES WITH YOU NOT TO KNOW HIM EVEN WITH A MASK ON!
H-HOW DID HE LOOK??
KIND OF DRAWN. HARD AS NAILS--- HEALTHY AND TANNED-- I COULDN'T SEE HIS EES-- HE HAD ON DARK GLASSES.
THANK GOODNESS!! LISSEN--WILL YA PUT IN YER STORIES AN' HAVE THE OTHER GUYS DO TH' SAME ABOUT HIS MARRIAGE BEIN' NOT LEGAL SO HE'LL SEE IT---MEBBE---
YOU KNOW WE WILL KNOBBY. WE SLIP IT IN ALL THE TIME FOR THAT VERY REASON.

OHHHH KNOBBY--- HEAVEN BE PRAISED----

THE GUMPS

When "Write' Is Wrong!

BIM TELLS ANDY HE GAVE THE WIDOW ZANDER $1000 PROFIT ON HER $150 INVESTMENT-
YOU MEAN TO SAY YOU GAVE HER ALL THAT MONEY? YOU OUGHT TO HAVE YOUR HEAD EXAMINED!
YES-ER- I MEAN MAYBE YOU'RE RIGHT-
DID YOU PROMISE HER ANY MORE MONEY? DID YOU PUT ANYTHING IN WRITING?
NO-ER- THAT IS--ONLY THE CHECK-
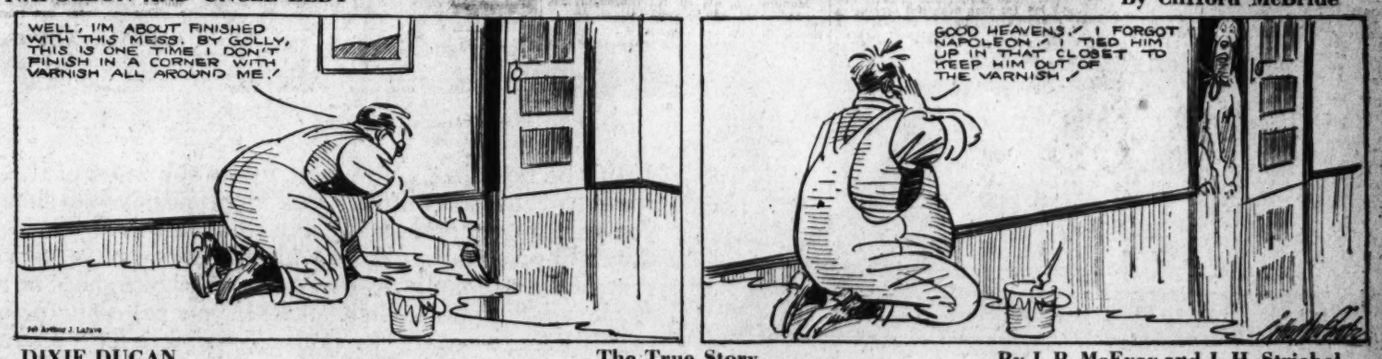
WHAT! YOU GAVE HER A CHECK?

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY

By Clifford McBride



WELL, I'M ABOUT FINISHED WITH THIS MESS. BY GOLLY, THIS IS ONE TIME I DON'T FINISH IN A CORNER WITH VARNISH ALL AROUND ME.
GOOD HEAVENS! I FORGOT NAPOLEON! I TIED HIM UP IN THAT CLOSET TO KEEP HIM OUT OF THE VARNISH!

DIXIE DUGAN

The True Story.

By J. P. McEvoy and J. H. Striebel

LOTTIE'S REMARK, ABOUT THE DUGANS BEING THE FUNNIEST CHARACTERS SHE HAD EVER SEEN, DIDN'T HELP AN ALREADY DIFFICULT SITUATION FOR RICHARD
YOU WERE VERY TACTLESS MISS LUVUM!
"TACTLESS"-?-"MISS LUVUM"?..... SAY, WHY ALL TH' SUDDEN FORMALITY, WES..? -YOU'VE CHANGED A HECK OF A LOT!-S'MATTER, FALLEN IN LOVE AGAIN?
LOTTIE!
OH PLEASE, RICHARD, DON'T QUARREL!-AFTER ALL WE MUST HAVE LOOKED FUNNY TO A REAL MOVIE STAR AND A BIG PRODUCER
-AND I'M SO SORRY WE RUINED A PERFECTLY WONDERFUL PLAY THAT RICHARD WESLEY WROTE, MR. BRUDWAY-ITS HIS FIRST PLAY AND HE'S TRIED SO HARD-SO PLEASE DON'T JUDGE IT BY OUR ACTING"-- HA! HA!
NO, NO -I UNDERSTAND MISS DUGAN
LISSEN SISTER--EVIDENTLY YOU DON'T KNOW THAT HE IS WESLEY RICHARD, NOT RICHARD WESLEY AND MR. BRUDWAY HERE HAS PRODUCED MORE OF HIS PLAYS THAN YOU HAVE FINGERS AND TOES!.....HO-HO-I THOUGHT YOU GAVE UP "ACTING" LONG AGO, WES-!

HAROLD TEEN

Ah! 'Twas Des Tiny.

YUP! POP AND I HAVE A PROFOUND APOLOGY TO MAKE TO YOU, MY 'FRAN'-
FOR WHY-YOU DON'T OWE ME NO DOUGH AN' I DON'T RECALL NO INSULTS!
NO-Y'SEE POP AN' I THOUGHT YOU MISSED LILLUMS SO MUCH-WE PLOTTED TO GET YOU A GEL!
-SO WE SORTA STEERED YOU TO LULU-AN' WHAT A MISTAKE- FUZZY WUZZY IS SUCH A RATTLE-NUT SHE'LL DRIVE YOU GOOFY-WE'RE SORRY!
